ORGAN STOLEN.—Some time ago the teachers of the Presbyterian Sabbath School, St. Mary's, raised a subscription among themselves and their friends and purchased a melodeon for use in the school having first obtained the consent of the board of management, and one of the leading elders. Some of the members of the congregation objected to what they called "a chest of whistles," and wanted the organ removed; the teachers refused, but said they would abide by the decision of a congregational meeting. The objector would listen to no such proposal, and alleged that the right to decide, belonged only to the Session. The point was summarily decided by some parties who entered the church (it is believed after prayer on Tuesday night) and removed the obnoxious organ where it has not since been seen. They have probably brewed a peck of trouble for themselves.—Guelph Mercury.

HOW TO READ THE CLOUDS.—Soft-looking or delicate clouds foretell fine weather, with moderate or light breezes; hard edged, ill-looking clouds, wind. A dark, gloomy blue sky is windy; but a light, bright blue sky indicates fine weather. Generally the softer clouds look the less wind, but perhaps more rain may be expected; and the harder, more "greasy," rolled, tufted, or ragged, the stronger the coming wind will prove. Also, a bright yellow sky at sunset presages wind; a pale yellow, wet; and a greenish, sickly looking color, wind and rain. Thus, by the prevalence of red, yellow, or other tints, the coming weather may be foretold very nearly; indeed, if aided by instruments, almost exactly. Small, inky looking clouds foretell rain; but if alone, may indicate wind only.

A LESSON FROM FENIANISM.—The Fenian rising in March, 1867, says a Cork correspondent, appears to have taught the British Government a valuable lesson in military strategy. Taking a hint from the plans of the insurgents, the Government decided on building a larger military barrack, capable of containing ten thousand men, at the Limerick Junction, the great railroad junction of South Ireland, where passengers change for Cork, Dublin, Limerick and Waterford directions. This place is within a few minutes' ride of the town of Tipperary, within reach of the Galtees Hills, upon whose tops the Fenians in 1867 took shelter from the intense cold. The building at this place is most judicious, as troops can be had at all hours, and troops dispatched with the greatest rapidity to quell all outbreaks.

A number of Neapolitan priests have lately abandoned their profession and have married and established a paper called the Catholic Emancipator.

The Crown Land Policy Unjust.

The unrevised and unintelligent policy of the present government on matters of great importance, is causing a widely spreading dissatisfaction. This is especially so in the Crown Land Policy. We have, again and again urged the wisdom of giving in free grants or throwing all our wild lands that are fit for settlement, into the market. Of course, we consider it paramount to get the land settled. The dollar and cent view of the matter is to make as much as possible out of the unfortunate settler. The benefit of our citizens is of secondary consideration. During the election contest we had pledge after pledge given that all the wild lands of the county that is fit for cultivation would be given to those who would undertake the settlement duties and become actual settlers. Now we find that a few townships include the entire free grant domaine. Wolves, bears and foxes are of more importance than cleared farms and comfortable dwellings.

Mr. Richard's policy is creating discontent, is not satisfying the wishes of the people, and doing more to injure the present local government than all their other acts put together. The lands are not even put into market, except in the vicinity of the free grants, or if so, they are so hemmed in by stupid conditions that no one cares to go on them. The policy of compelling the immediate payment of all arrears is cruel. Many of the early pioneers of the back woods have found it difficult enough to meet the daily demands of their family while they have been clearing their farms and getting some kind of a home to live in. It requires a number of years of labor and self-denial to enable them to get a few acres cleared, a house and barns raised, roads formed and school houses built, so that their children may not have to grow up in ignorance and crime. Yet in the face of all this they are to be compelled to pay all arrears to the Crown at once.

There is another injustice in the policy of the present government. In Chandos, Anstruther, &c., some lands have been sold, while just beside them the lands have been given in grants. Those in arrears are not permitted to take up a free grant, while parties from a distance who have not borne the burden of the early settlement and of making or improving roads, get the lands for nothing and can come in and sit down beside them. It may be said that government sold them the land and cannot afford to forego the purchase money. If they cannot, can they not allow them to locate a free grant also, perhaps it will require both lots to make a reasonable farm, and if they have been compelled to pay for one lot, why not grant them another lot. Settlers who go in now will be permitted to buy a lot in addition to the free grant. Might not our government permit those who have bought and settled to buy another. Why grant privileges to one man that are denied another. The system is an unjust and the people feel it. They are dissatisfied and discontented, and unless some radical change in the free grant system be very soon made, Mr. Richards will find that at next election the "no party dodge" will prove of no avail towards returning men to power who have proved themselves unfit for it. Meetings have been held on the Belmont, condemning the present system condemning [illegible] the premature sales [illegible] lots, and also when weighed in [illegible] existing.

THE HOLIDAY.

Thursday last being a holiday by general consent of the citizens, all made up their minds for a frolic. In consequence the town was almost deserted, the people trusting their affairs to the protection of their "specials," as little of Fenians were anticipated out here to the backwoods. A few tried to amuse themselves as they drove around with the lovely fair enemy, a few went to console themselves and calm their anxious thoughts in friendly converse over a social glass; but the great mass tired of the cares of business and confinement, sought a day's pleasure away from the city's din, on the lakes and river.

The great attraction was the Firemen's Picnic. At no small expense and trouble they had succeeded in engaging the "Forest City," owned by Mr. Fowlie, of Hastings, to take them and their friends to Rice Lake and back again. At an early hour the members of Protection Fire Company, No. 1, were to be seen moving towards the Market Square where carriages were in waiting to convey them and their friends to the Lake. It was very evident that almost the entire lady portion of our town were ready to claim friendship with either a Fireman or with one of his friends. Nearly seven ladies were taking hold of one man, and whether they were to be called by his name or not, they were intent on helping the Firemen to make a pleasant day of it; and what would the day be without them? About 500 seized the opportunity of enjoying a sail on our noble river and of visiting Rice Lake. The "Forest City" was at the Lake in good time; she had two scows towed and delivered. The party left at an early hour and arrived safely at Picnic Point, where groups were formed according to the attractions of affinity or [illegible] attention, and there enjoyed themselves to the greatest degree. In the evening the party returned delighted with the trip with the Firemen and pleased with themselves, praying that they might be long spared to enjoy annual holidays with those who protect our homes from the devouring flames, and who know so well how to provide a day's pleasure for their innumerable friends.

MASON'S PIC NIC.

The members of this ancient and venerable order also had a Pic nic, but they selected the shores of Chemong Lake for their rendevous. About one hundred masons, masons' wives, or lady loves, and a few friends assembled on that spot so well known as Pic-nic Hill, and thereon enjoyed themselves to heart's content; some swinging, some sailing, some dancing and some whispering tales of untold love into the ears of those whom they delighted to admire. The day was delightful, the masons happy in arranging for the pleasures and amusements of the day, and the whole party as pleased and contented as mortals well could be (as far as we could see). After dinner which was prepared in excellent style, and in abundance, by Mr. W. M. Goodwin, the company became divided and sub-divided to suit tastes and intentions. The committee of management had secured all the boats in the neighborhood, and many availed the selves of this excellent opportunity of a sail. Not a few preferred to amuse themselves in patronizing the Deity of the Dance, in the English Irish and Scotch fashions, and for ought we know, in the Yankee style too, until about 5 o'clock when Mr. Goodwin again sounded his toosin, for ten this time, and truly and literally did the tables groan under the load of good things. Great credit is certainly due to him for the splendid spread provided for the day. After scouring as much as was considered safe to avoid detection, several left; others remained for a little more fun. The day was happily spent, not one indulged, and all satisfied that a holiday now and then enables people to return to their business with a relish.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

Since our last issue we have not been able to learn what is about to be done towards the extension of the Port Hope branch. It was rumored that Ashburnham had offered to transfer to the Company the $5,000 voted to the Cobourg road extension. There is a decided expression of opinion against it unless something more than running a branch through the village to Lakefield be guaranteed. It will soon be the interest of Port Hope and the town to do something to prevent the trade of the Back Lakes from reaching the front by way of Whitby. The road from Port Perry to Whitby will be but 18 or 20 miles long. Already about $3,000 a mile is voted by Reach and Whitby, and other municipalities are about to offer a little aid, so that the people of Port Hope may ere long learn that a rival line is taking away the greater part of the trade now going to Port Hope. Their harbour dues will not be increased by that means; their taxes, too, will be sure to increase, and trade will not be free under such circumstances. Already these things are anticipated by a few, but what are they doing? It is only about 14 miles to Mud Lake via Lakefield, or about 6 in direct line. To construct this short piece of road and guarantee a reasonable tariff would prove an effectual check to the Port Perry road; so Lock would be required, no great outlay other than the cost of the construction of a few miles of road, and yet the lessees, the Company, Port Hope and Peterboro are quietly folding their hands to [illegible] each other, waits for the extra outlay of about $4,000 by and compelling the people of the back country to seek an outlet by Port Perry and Whitby. This is a subject of more importance than many are willing to admit, but they will find it on yet to their sorrow when they cannot help them elves. Port Hope has already lost 2,000,000 feet of lumber by the removal of Campbell & Huston's and Mathieu gall & Ludgate's Mills. The Port Perry branch will take 20,000,000 or 30,000,000 more, and then where will the Port Hope and Lindsay road be? We were told when we advocated forcing the lessees of the branch to extend it to Mud Lake or else to let the Cobourg Company to do it, that in so doing we endangered the interest that we are now receiving. But if the lumber trade takes another channel and there should be no traffic, who or will the interest come from? They say they cannot repair the road now unless they increase the tariff sufficiently to raise the funds, but they will not be able to increase the tariff when there is no traffic. I we cannot have communication by Cobourg, it is better to retain it by Port Hope; but it is nothing less than insanity on the part of all concerned to look on and do nothing, while one half of our legitimate trade is being diverted by way of Whitby. Port Hope might rest satisfied while they received the trade at the Lakes on Lindsay, but now that it is to go by Whitby do they feel easy? The harbour dues on 40,000,000 feet of lumber is worth an effort to retain. Really the Company is in a deplorable state if $3,000 damages is sufficient to stop the work. The Town of Peterboro will subscribe [illegible] if they extend to Mud Lake.

It is stated that [illegible] has been applied to [illegible] for the [illegible]

A RETROGRADE MOVEMENT.

The Board of School Trustees of the Village of Ashburnham met last night, and Miss Dowling having tendered her resignation, they not wisely, agreed to dispense with the services of an assistant teacher for the remainder of the year. About two years ago the then Board acted in the same foolish way, and the simple case is almost total breaking up of the school, as the attendance fell off from 60 or 70 of an average to less than one-third of that number, and of course a consequent reduction in the rate bill. For that year the people had just as much school taxes to pay as when they had two teachers and not more than one-third of the work done. It does not require much applicants of the reasoning powers to comprehend that one teacher cannot do as much work as two can in the same time. It cannot, therefore, be expected that the present teacher will be able to do as much as he and his assistant both have been doing, and it is not fair to expect that he can. If the attendance of pupils therefore should continue to be as in the past few months, he will be compelled to leave a certain portion undone, or to employ monitors. In a school where children's ages range from 5 to 10 years none are of sufficient age or intelligence to be employed as monitors with any hopes of good results, and of necessity one teacher can give but half the time to them that two could bestow; hence one-half is left undone, or if done by a child of 8 or 10 years of age, worse than undone.

By this process a child will not be as far advanced at 14 years of age as he should be at 12 years, and thus two entire years of the boy's time is lost. A boy from 12 to 14 years of age is worth 10 dollars a month. If 10 boys (a small number it will be admitted) attend the school, their time will prove to be worth over $100 per month or $1200 a year, and in two years $2400 is entirely lost, for fear of the petty outlay of $400. That is turning the penny to a copper fast enough to suit the most loud-mouthed advocates of cheap teaching. But if the number of children should be 20 or 30 instead of 10, $7200 will be lost to the parents who require the aid, or to the children themselves. Of course those Trustees who voted to deprive the children of one half their lessons have no children at school; it does not, therefore, affect them; but does their vision extend no farther than their own house or their narrow views of school masters? Can they not permit others to enjoy all the advantages, somewhat cost would be nothing increased. The taxes for school purposes will just be as high, as we have shown, with one teacher as with two, and with all this before their eyes they are satisfied with half the teaching that they might have for their money. What comprehensive views of school matters they must possess? One teacher, of course, can work away among 100 pupils, but can he ensure even moderate progress? Not a bit of it.

THE MINISTERIAL VACANCY.

The Government organs here and there are each putting in a word for their local man. In the West Mr. Ferguson is about to accept the "position," at Port Hope Mr. Burton is the man for Galway, either as a Cabinet Minister or as a Railroad Commissioner or ——. Mr. Burton, no doubt deserves something at the hands of John A. He has supported that party through thick and thin, and is ready to do so again. While he is not John A's man John A will have a more dangerous creature; some of his doubtful supporters will get the loaf.—Mr. B's claims are founded also on the grounds of his being a representative of the Irish Protestants of Ontario; on this score there will be a difference of opinion. One thing is certain, if he gets into the cabinet he will not offer a bold front to the Frenchman, Cartier. It is better to give him an office on the Intercolonial; he may as well have a slice as any other man. Why don't his friends plainly say so? they mean it and so say we. But there is no room for him in the cabinet, not a spot; Cartier occupies the whole, even the canny Scot has succumbed

PENIANS.

The military authorities here have received notice from head quarters to hold themselves in readiness for any moment until November. This is merely, we suppose, to keep them ready for any emergency that may arise. We do not think it likely that a raid need be feared. The Brotherhood are discouraged very much. O'Neil does not enjoy the confidence of the subordinates.—The Savage wing is in a dangerous condition as their leader declared at a late meeting. They have no funds and no credit—all strong arguments against a raid being undertaken—but they might advise a rush of a hundred or so at some point to annoy, and to form a pretext for asking for a little of the needful. Of course they would rush as swiftly back again. Nothing beyond plunder could induce them to venture across our border, and as the most likely time for this to take place is during the election excitement, they will be closely watched. Prevention is better than cure.

It is asserted that Mr Seward has entered into negotiations with Mr. Thornton for a new Reciprocity Treaty with Canada. He was empowered to do so by a vote of congress. Our cousins find that they cannot force us into annexation by repealing the Treaty, nor can they buy Canada as they did Alaska from Russia. They feel the evil of being shut out of our market, and they are about to petition for a new Treaty. We trust that our powers that be will see that the interests of the Dominion be not sacrificed. Let us have a just treaty.

The Committee for the Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the following donations for August:—A friend, 4 dozen eggs; from the good Templars, a quantity of raisins and, bun; Mrs. S. White, a sack of potatoes, lard; Mrs. Richardson, butter, sugar and preserves for the sick; Mr. S. White, a quarter of lamb; Mrs. G. Ball, a fowl for sick person; Mrs Croft-bank, fowls for the sick; Mrs. Goodwin, bread and buns.

A picnic was to be held yesterday in Montreal to raise funds for Whelan's defence. Some persons or persons put up a placard, calling on the loyal (?) part of the citizens to meet and stop it. B. Devlin has written a very sensible letter to the Gazette condemning the meeting.

PERSONAL.—Robert Nicholls, Esq., and Mrs. Nicholls have returned from an extensive tour to the West and South of Europe, which they undertook for health and pleasure.

A petition from James Bell praying that his property be detached from S. S. No. 7 and attached to S. S. No. 9.—Granted.

A petition from Mrs. Yopps, praying that the road across Lot No. 26 in the 12th concession be closed up.—Laid over.

The following By-laws received their first second and third readings and were passed.

A By-law to assess, levy and collect on all ratable property in the Municipality, one cent in the dollar for county purposes, and one mill in the dollar for Municipal purposes.

A By-law to assess, levy and collect on all ratable property situated in S. S. No. 1, the sum of $180; in S. S. No. 2, $160; in S. S. No. 3, $220; in S. S. No. 4, $250; in S. S. No. 5, $130; in S. S. No. 6, $200; in S. S. No. 7, $160; in S. S. No. 8, $230; in S. S. No. 9, $260; and in S. S. No. 10, $230.

A By-law to open the Government allowance for road between Lot 24 and 25 in the 8th concession.

The Treasurer was directed to pay the following sums:—To Wm. Hay, for 7 sheep and 3 lambs killed by dogs $27; to John Hay for 1 sheep and 1 lamb $5; to Almond Harris, for one sheep $4.50; and to G. A. Stewart, P. L. S. for examining and surveying the side line between Lots 27 and 28 in the 13th and 12th concessions $6.

The following motion was passed.—That this Council has heard with regret that a certain gentleman has paid a considerable sum of money to aid in defraying the expense incurred in billetting the Volunteers during their eight days drill in Peterboro', with the expectation that he will be reimbursed by the County Council, and that he has done so without the consent of the Council. This Council is therefore of the opinion that such conduct is highly reprehensible and I hope it will be strongly condemned by the members of the County Council.

The report of the Inspector was read and adopted.

Galway Lead Mine—Will it Pay?

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I give you a careful estimate of the profits to be derived from this mine on the small yield of one ton of lead per week, which I am assured by Mr. T. Shield and Mr. M. Watton, miners in the Company's employ, that judging from an experience of eighteen years in various lead mines in Cumberland, that the appearance of the vein they are now working on in Galway will warrant them in giving it as their firm belief, that one ton per day is a moderate calculation, once the mine is opened by shafts and levels. This estimate is for four men, day and night; and once the Company begin to get a return, there is nothing to prevent them from putting on 50 men day and night or more, and thus increasing there profits to an unlimited amount:

Cost of Property	$2,000 0
Sinking Shaft 70 feet, at $17 per ft...	1,190 00
Blacksmith shop, ore house, tools, &c	300 00
Smelting Works, &c	900 00
	$4,390 00

ONE DAY'S WORK

Interest on above capital per day at 10 per cent	$1 20
Wages of eight men and one boy	12 00
Powder and Fuse, &c	3 00
Dressing and smelting one ton lead	6 00
Blacksmith's wages	1 50
Incidental expenses—wear and tear	4 00
	$28 70
Freight of one ton lead to Montreal	7 50
	$35 20
Proceeds of 1 ton of lead in Montreal	$100 00
Less cost of production	35 20
Net profit per day	$64 80
Working days in a year	300
Nett profits of one year	$20,940 00

Being equal to 458 per cent per annum on $4,390, capital invested, allowing the mine to only yield the small amount of one ton per day with the labor of eight men taking out ore.

A DIRECTOR OF GALWAY MINING CO.

Sir, Editor,

I noticed in your paper of the 20th inst., a Card, signed by Mr. G. Brooks, thanking the members of the Fire Company (of which I have the honor of being a member) on my behalf for their services at the late fire in Ashburnham I would request Mr. G. Brooks and every other person not to interfere with my business.—Through the exertions of my brother Firemen and a few friends I managed to get my Planing Mill saved. Had I not turned out that night it would have been a clear loss to me of $3,000. No doubt it would have been considerable of a satisfaction to Mr. Brooks, but thanks to those that gave me such good assistance, we disappointed that large-minded man.

MURDER OF JUDGE B. JORDAN.—The Intelligencer says:—We regret to learn that our old fellow townsman, John B. Jordan, so long and favorably known here, was shot dead in Lexington, Missouri, on the 11th inst. From a private letter, dated Lexington, 12th August, 1868, we make the following extract:—"On the 11th he was well and happier than I have seen him for a year. At six o'clock in the evening he sat down to peruse a letter from Amelia (his daughter). After he had finished he walked down the street, four houses from his house, and stepped into a saloon, and took up an apple and was eating it, when a man came in, drunk, who had been pointing his revolver at a number of men in the town during the day, and commenced doing the same thing in the saloon, when some parties attempted to arrest him, and Jordan said to him, 'Sir, Tom, put up your arms, I would not have them out here,' at which he turned and said, 'I will shoot you, you d——d son of a b——h,' and shot him through the heart. He never spoke to any one after receiving the shot." Judge Jordan's remains were conveyed to their last resting-place on the 13th inst.

THE TWO CAMERONS.—It is positively assumed in the Montreal papers of yesterday that the two Cameron (John H and Matthew C) are to defend Whelan. It is also officially announced that O'Reilly is to be the sole representative of the Crown at the Assizes. Such being the state of the case, it would not be surprising if Whelan were not at liberty. The Hon. John Hillyard Cameron has long stood at the head of the bar of Upper Canada; almost his only rival for that honor is the Hon. Matthew Crooks Cameron, who, it is said, is to assist his namesake in the trial. Besides the two Camerons, one of the most distinguished members of the Lower Canadian bar, Mr. O'Farrell, is to give the benefit of the benefit of his advice and experience. The most ardent admirers of Mr. O'Reilly will not pretend to say that he is any match for such an array of talent. Indeed he will exhibit a great deal more ability than the public gives him credit for if he makes even a decent show of opposition to his powerful antagonists.

It is a pity that our Government is not rich enough to employ as talented counsel as those for the defence. The Whelanites have evidently the advantage of the deputy-ship.

Of course seeing that the Government is anxious to settle with even the gentlemen who drove the witnesses in this case last spring, it is not surprising that it should not be able to procure anything better than second-rate counsel.—Ottawa News.

The Quebec papers complain just now of the audacious robberies committed there almost every day in the very centre of the population. In one number of a contemporary of the provincial capital, we find mention of no less than six different burglaries committed in one single night, the robbers taking from different places all he peculiar for a festival in full dress, with sufficient pocket-money for completing the soiree with card gambling or other fashionable dissipation. They stole meat from the Jacques Cartier market, with a load of groceries, apples and molasses. They took from the Champlain market a large quantity of confectionary; in a store, several pieces of French cloth, first quality; in another, a number of bottles of champagne were carried away, and a safe opened and robbed of several hundred dollars in money. It seems that the robbers are numerous, and so well organized, that the police avoid them, for fear, perhaps, of being arrested by them. At least, so says a Quebec paper.

On last Tuesday afternoon the boiler of a steam threshing machine, which was being used on the farm of Robert McIntyre, a few miles above Chatham, on the Tonnes, exploded and did considerable damage besides inflicting personal injuries. The engine and boiler were all in one part, and had a pressure of eighty pounds of steam. There were a number of men in the vicinity, and four teen were more or less injured. The machinery was thrown in almost all directions, smashing everything in the way. A son of Mr. McIntyre was so badly scalded that he cannot survive. A man named Bedford was blown twenty or thirty feet, and alighted on a hog pen, but without receiving any injuries of a serious nature. The other twelve were bruised and scratched about crudely. Their escape from death was certainly miraculous.

A startling incident occurred at Niagara Falls on Monday afternoon, the 18th inst. A little girl while getting upon the railing of the bridge leading from the main land to Goat Island, lost her balance and fell into the rapids. Instantly a young man named Monilton, who resided at Auburn, plunged in to re-use the child. Grasping the little one and keeping her head above water, both were swept on towards the precipice, and destruction seemed inevitable. But Monilton, being an expert swimmer, struggled manfully with the rushing torrent and succeeded in reaching the shore only about fifteen feet from the brink of the cataract. It was a most humane and daring act.

A mill owned by Vanorden & Chisholm at Pell River, near Windsor, was destroyed by fire on Saturday night. Mr Vanorden, his wife and grandchild were burned to death. A revolver was found lying beside their charred bodies. It is supposed that murder was committed and the building fired to conceal the crime. It was known that Mr Vanorder had a large amount of money in his possession. Not the slightest trace of this can be found. Mr. McMicken, the stipendiary magistrate, is investigating the affair. A man named Robrash was arrested, and other arrests will follow. Vanorden's mill was burned to the ground the the same night.

A sad case of self-destruction occurred in the village of Lanark. A man named Alex McDonald, a moulder, in company with another man, procured a bottle of whiskey and started down to a farm belonging to his employer, about a mile and a half from the village. They both, when last seen, were partially intoxicated. He and his companion left a-step, and when he awoke McDonald was missing. No suspicion was entertained until the following day when his cap was found on the bank of the river.

John O'Farrell, of Quebec, has been to Ottawa to see Whelan, but was not allowed to.—He is trying to induce the judges at Toronto to allow him to defend the assassin of McGee for which, it is said, he is to receive a fee of $10,000. Greece, one the witnesses, who made his escape to the United States has been brought back, and, it is said difficulties are anticipated with the Union States, in connection with his return, from which we infer that he was kidnapped.

The Toronto Daily Telegraph has a special from its New York correspondent, which says:—"New York Aug 26th.—My advices lead me to anticipate no trouble from the Fenians immediately, although there was an exciting time in Congress. O'Neil's idea of reaching England through Canada was approved of, but Presidential interference was feared at any rate a move, even if forwarded, may be looked for in September or the beginning of October.

There are said to be seven Roman Catholics on the petit jury summoned for the Assizes as those at which Whelan is to be tried. The whole panel numbers fifty-four, of which the Crown may challenge twenty and the prisoner twenty. The witness Lepine is still retained in gaol for safe keeping. It is said the defence will be able to destroy the value of the evidence very materially.

ARRESTED WITH THE CASH.—On the 24th a woman by the name of McDonald absconded from her husband at Belleville, taking with her $250 in cash and her little girl.—The police here were directed to look her up in Kingston under the above name or that of Higgins, but after searching it was determined by the detective that she had not made that place her destination.—News

Queen Victoria's arrival at Inverness is thus described

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED.—Why should sores ever heal? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and a aid much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, clothing in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, joins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, tic loss, sprains, chilblains, broken muscles, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells the resemblable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions; thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and consequently the cause of the disease ceases to exist; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children by so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, an coated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling sensations, indigestion, horrible, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are harmless and when administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 33

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 6th June, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having [illegible] for years. Numerous kinds of running sores [illegible] on my hands and arms; [illegible] and discharged from my ears and nose. Two years ago I was laid up in bed and covered my body and face with sores, which was pronounced the worst case of scrofula in the country. I tried many medicines and received advice, but without much relief from any thing, [illegible] the use of your Sarsaparilla, and was induced to send for a bottle. I had no expectation that it would benefit me, but was willing to try anything. Before I had taken the contents of the bottle I could see that it was helping me. I have now taken seven bottles, and consider myself entirely cured. I have not been sick a day since I commenced taking your medicine, and my health is now better than it has been for years. I attribute my present good health entirely to the use of your Sarsaparilla. I have recommended it to many others, and know of several cases of Erysipelas that have been cured by it. A woman who had been troubled for the same disorder by mercury was entirely cured by it. A woman who had been troubled for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so unsightly to the mother that on a certain day she applied excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I have been in Colorado, which your agent gave me, and this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, C. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INGERSOLL, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1868.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and check by no means within the reach of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. A. PEARL.

JOHN T. GOSCHOLL, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health, I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years. Hugs no other course than disorganized of the Liver. My friend pastor, the Rev. Mr. Rupp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, but as he had been very sick, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great many of these have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but ever a case here will not submit the bones of these may be found in our pamphlet. Although which the reports below named are planned to furnish proofs to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It eliminates the vitiated humors from the system, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the afflicted of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the certificates of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy, or some living proof in their midst of its triumph over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when assisting the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in short time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top. An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap steam plate label. Look closely!

The original quality and high character of these goods will be maintained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, port and hamlet among civilized nations. NOT FOR JOSEPH.

I've worn a bit of gayety throughout my short career,
I once was foolish with my tin, but I have paid
dear for't;
If folks would really take me in, they find it is no gift,
I'm up to almost everything—you can't get over Joe.

CHORUS.

Oh, dear, no! not for Joe, if he knows it—not for Joseph.
Oh, no, no! not for Joe—not for Joseph; oh,
dear! no.

The other day I met a friend, we passed the time of day,
And chatted gaily down the street, but e'er I went away,
I kindly asked this learned swell to take a parting wine.
Oh, yes! said he, I think I will, then let it be champagne.

CHORUS.—"Now you don't, my dear fellow, you don't get champagne out of Joseph"—
Oh! no, no; no, etc.

Some time ago a friend of mine, he asked me out to dine,
And there he introduced me to one he called divine;
He said she'd make a charming wife, and had such lots of tin,
A widow only forty-two, my boy, go in and win

CHORUS.—Matrimony and lots of money, and a widow only forty-two, well the money is very good, but then the widow"—
Oh dear! no, etc.

And now, perhaps, I've sung my song, you might be in the cue,
To show your kind acknowledgement, but that
with me won't do,
As for to-night, I've done my best, and that you ought to know,
So if you want a song again, don't try it on with Joe.
Oh, dear! not for Joe, etc.

How a Convict Won his Pardon.

'Will you ever give up those trips, Terence? It is so lonely staying here at nights, and besides, I am fearful that some one will break in and rob the house and murder us all. I never say my prayer and go to bed without trembling for my own life and that of the children,' and the little woman hung upon the arm of the strong man, and begged him with tearful eyes to give up his wandering life (that of a peddler) and settle down.

'As soon as I have gathered enough together to buy me a bit of ground, or, what would be better still to emigrate to America, that blessed land of freedom, where, as the song says, 'there's bread and work for all,' and the bright sun is always shining, I'll gladly give up the pack, for its no easy work at the best.'

'Only think of the money you have in the house now, husband, dear! Surely there is enough to take us across the sea, you and me and the children, and Bridget, too, if she likes to go.'

Bridget was the servant girl who helped the wife of the peddlar and was her sole companion when he was away, and her eyes snapped with apparent delight when she heard the proposition. But she said nothing and the master continued,

'It is time for you Kathleen, that I have a matter of a hundred pounds or so, which I shall leave for you to take care of, and if I have good luck this trip I promise you to remain at home or go to America, bless her. Its a good friend she has been to Ireland, and many is the poor soul she has kept from staving. So take good care of the gold and the children, Kathleen—you and Bridget, until I come back,' and he kissed his wife and bright-eyed, curly-headed babies, gave Bridget the good-bye, shouldered his pack, and stoutly strode away, whistling merrily.

His heart was light, his form strong, he had none of the fears of his wife, and was looking forward joyfully to the time when he would have a little home, "a pig, and a cow and a patch of praties," that would belong to himself alone, and over which no hard-hearted steward, or non-resident landlord could claim control, although he would willingly pay his tithes to the church.

Terence O'Brien was a pedlar by profession, and what was called a 'forehanded' man. His family consisted of a wife, two children, a boy scarcely three years old, a babe, and the girl of all work, Bridget. At the start of his married life, he had rented a little cottage that stood in a lonely out-of-the-way place; although he had increased his stores, he had retained possession of it on the score of economy.

A brave, athletic man, and one who feared nothing human, he could not understand the fears of his wife, Kathleen—in fact gave them little thought. Besides, robbery was a thing almost unknown among the peasantry, and who would ever dream of his having a large amount of money in his wretched cabin? But it was not his custom to do so. Usually he deposited it in a secure place. So he gave the matter no more thought, than to promise himself that this should be his last journey (if he did as well as he anticipated) and lunged around, flattering the rosy cheeked girls into purchasing finery, with which to dazzel the eyes of their beaux at the next fair.

With Kathleen, however, it was different. As the night began to draw near and the wind to creep round the corners of the chimney with a mournful sound, she bethought herself of the sovereigns her husband had left, and taking the bag in which they were kept from the cupboard over the fire-place she carefully tucked it between the beds, remarking at the same time to Bridget 'that no one would ever think of looking for it there.'

'No,' was the reply; 'It would be a smart man that would ever think of looking under the childer to find gould."

The tea over, they were early sleepers as well as early risers, the girl requested that she might be allowed to pass the evening with her sister, who resided about a mile distant and the anxious wife and she her, although sorely loath to do so, at length consented, insisting on an early return.

"But you will be back early, Bridget?"

"Ay, coorse I will that same. But don't be after fretting." And the girl departed.

The lone woman busied herself as best she might until a late hour, but the girl did not return. In a fever of anxiety she watched until fully another sixty minutes had passed, although it appeared to her like half a day; and then considering it useless to remain any longer, sought her pillow, after commending herself to Him who is the protector of the widow and the father of the fatherless. But she had not closed her eyes before there was a loud rap on the door.

"Is that you Bridget?" she asked hopefully.

"No," was the answer, and her heart sank like lead within her. "No; I am a stranger, have lost my way, you must let me in."

"I cannot—cannot! I am a poor lone woman. I dare not let you in."

"You need have no fear. As there is a God in Heaven I will not harm you. I am an escaped convict—an innocent one—and as you have mercy in your heart open the door."

What was such an appeal to an Irish heart in vain? An escaped convict and in want of shelter. That is the talisman to open every door—to have the potato or bite of bread spread into your mouth.—Yes, it is truly the open sesame to an Irish heart, and it operated on in this case.

The weapon arose, opened the door gave the fugitive food, and having again reassured the unfortunate that he would do her no harm, but on the contrary protect her, and having upon him stretch himself upon the floor before the peat fire, she upon sought the side of her sleeping children.

But even then she was not allowed to rest. At first her fears kept her awake. Then came another loud rap for admission, and both she and her stranger visitor arose.

"Is this part of your gang?" she asked in trembling whispers.

"I call on Heaven to witness," he answered, "that such is not the case. Ask them what they want."

She did so and was told that they knew she had money in the house, and were desirous to have it.

"Tell them," whispered the stranger "that you have a friend with you, and that it will be dangerous for them to enter."

"I have a friend here," she said, going close to the door, "a man who will protect me, and you had better not try to get in."

"I know better," said a female voice, that of Bridget, the servant girl; "I know that there is nobody there but the children."

"What shall I—shall I do!" asked the poor woman wringing her hands.

"Tell them," again said the stranger, "that I have pistols, and will shoot the first one that dares to step his foot within the door. God help me! I would not have blood on my hands; but I promised to protect you with my life, and I will—are them at once."

"Bridget," shouted Mrs. O'Brien, "the friend I have here has pistols, and will certainly kill you, I warn you to go away."

Again the bold, bad laugh of the servant-girl rang out and her voice could be distinctly heard urging them on.

'It's only talking they are. Divil the one is there in the cabin but the childern. Bre k open the door, and be done with it. I tell you, there's more'n a hundred pounds hidden between the beds'

'Stand back,' said the convict to his hapless; their blood be upon their own heads.'

Scarcely had the words been uttered before heavy blows fell upon the hinges.—The self appointed protector stood a little one side, calm and firm. In either hand he held a pistol, and his manner showed that he was no stranger to their use.

'Down with the door,' shouted Bridget, 'or else stand aside and give me the axe.'

A shower of blows and it fell. The false servant entered, and dropped dead with a bullet buried in her brain. The foremost of the men met the same fate, and the others fled. They had seen quite enough of bloodshed.

To help the helpless woman thus, was not be-thought of by the kind hearted stranger; and though prison or transportation stared him in the face, he comforted her as well as possible, straightened the corpses and then hastening to the nearest magistrate, told the entire story; not even denying who and what he was.

The facts were too evident to even bear questioning, and as a reward for his bravery the convict was pardoned—subsequently found to have been convicted innocently—and when the husband and a father returned, was rapidly persuaded to emigrate with the family to the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Now in one of the Western States, Terence O'Brien has a house by the side of a beautiful river, and not far from it is another, where the once fugitive convict has a wife and children of his own to protect, and both families will give as an heir-loom to their descendants the little but true story, of how a pardon was won.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

The Chicago 'Republican' gives an account of a terrible accident which occurred there on Saturday, in the neighborhood of the tunnel at the foot of Washington street, which although fearful enough in itself, fortunately escaped a fatal consequence:—

The workmen were being paid off, and the machinery was about ceasing its operations, when a laborer, Thomas Cosse, who was watching the movements of the steam derrick, was transfixed in the fleshy part of the arm by the hook attached by means of a long iron to the bottom of the derrick.—Suspended by the hold it obtained in his muscle, the poor wretch was slowly swung round by the crane in a circuit of some 60 yards.

The machinery was stopped as he hung over the coffer dam, which is more than fifty feet beneath the platform on which the derrick revolves. The sudden cessation caused the chain to vibrate, and as the vibration continued, the hook gradually ripped the arm up to the very wrist, where, the flesh being unequal to the work of suspension, it emerged, causing the man to fall to the bottom of the dam. When picked up by his fellow workmen he was found to be unconscious, but alive.

His injuries are of a serious character, but in consequence of an extraordinary vitality, he may recover.

WEEDING POTATOES WITH SHEEP.—It may not be known to farmers a general, that it is a common practice in the potato growing districts to turn flocks of sheep into the potato fields for the purpose of eating down the weeds. The sheep will not touch a potatoe vine; they cannot be starved into eating them. The pasturing with sheep in very advantageous when the crop is a very late planted one, so that the hoeing cannot be completed before hoeing or harvesting is finished. At growing season it is the planter's aim to keep down the grass and weeds so that they may be covered with dirt by the cultivator and hoe when these are used. Pasturing with sheep will attain this end. Early planted crops, the cultivation of which is completed in the first half of the summer, frequently become grassy and weedy before the time of digging—when the size of the tops precludes cultivation. In this stage the sheep are economical weeders. It is hardly necessary to mention that he feed thus given to the sheep makes a double profit, inasmuch as it costs absolutely nothing, while labor in saved and weeds prevented from seeding in the crop.—Western Rural.

SUGAR-COATED.
A safe and reliable remedy for all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF CONSUMPTION
BY THE
GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
IN CANADA.
MESSRS Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but I did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me enough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, pain of matter, pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever. I was in my wife, My sister-in-law was sick, she lived a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Poetry.

THE LONGEST DAY.

Summer eve;—each day that follows
Is smaller from on high,
Hastening to the dust-pale hollows
Before the frosts of winter lie.

[illegible]
Sheds a genial benediction
To the life of human kind.

Yet we mark it not;—fruits ridden,
Fresh flowers blow, as flowers have blown,
And the heart is left in darkness
Hopes that she so long hath known.

So thou wiser, youth'ful maiden!
And when thy declines shall come,
Let not flowers, or boughs fruit-laden,
Hide the knowledge of thy doom.

Now, even now, ere wrapped in slumber,
Fix thine eyes upon the sea
That absorbs time, space, and number;
Look towards eternity!

Follow thou the flowing river,
On whose breast are thither borne
All deceived, and soon deceiver,
Through the gates of night and morn.

Through the year's successive portals—
Through the bounds which many a star
Marks, not mindless of frail mortals,
When his light returns from far.

Thou when thou with time hast travelled Towards the mighty gulf of things,
And the many streams unravelled
With the best imaginings;

Think, if thou on beauty leanest,
Think how pitiful that stay,
Did not virtue give the meanest
Charms superior to decay.

Duty, like a strict preceptor,
Sometimes frowns, or seems to frown;
Choose her thistle for thy sceptre,
While thy brow youth's roses crown.

Wordsworth.

Selections.

A KIND HEART.

Knowing that the general class of readers are more interested in tales founded upon fact than fiction, we give the following sketch, which, although rivalling many of the romantic pictures drawn by fiction writers, is vouched for by an old English journal as being founded upon a real life occurrence, and merely published by the pen of the writer. A newly married couple had just come from the altar, and were being started on a bridal tour, as the following conversation took place:

The newly married husband took one of his bride's hands in his own.

'Allow me thus to hold your hand, for I dreamed last you should quit me. I tremble lest you should be an illusion. It seems to me that I am the hero of one of those fairy tales which amused me in boyhood, and which is the hour of happiness, some malignant fairy steps ever toy to throw the victim into grief and despair.'

'Reassure yourself, my dear Fredric,' said the lady, 'I was yesterday the widow of Sir James Melton, and to-day I am Madame de la Tour, your wife. Banish from your mind the idea of a fairy. This is not a fiction but a history.'

Fredric de la Tour, had, indeed, some reason to suppose that his fortunes were the work of a fairy's wand; for in the course of one or two short months, by a seemingly inexplicable stroke of fortune he had been raised to happiness and wealth beyond his desires. A friendless orphan twenty-five years old, he had been the owner of a clerkship which brought him a scanty livelihood, when one day, as he passed along the Rue St. Honore, a rich equipage stopped suddenly before him, and an elegant woman called from it to him.

'Monsieur, Monsieur,'

At the same time, on a given signal, the footman leaped down opened the carriage door, and invited Fredric to enter. He did so, though with some hesitation and surprise, and the carriage started on at full speed.

'I have received your note, sir,' said the lady to M. de la Tour, in a soft, sweet voice, 'and in spite of refusal, I hope yet to see you to-morrow night at my party.'

'To see me, Madame?' cried Fredric.

'Yes, sir, yes—— Ah! a thousand pardons,' continued she with an air of confusion. 'I see my mistake. Forgive me. You are so like a particular friend. What can you think of me? Yet the resemblance is so striking it would deceive any one.

Of course he replied politely to the apologies.

Just as they terminated this conversation the carriage stopped at the door of a splendid mansion, and the young man could do no less than offer his arm to Lady Melton, as she announced herself to be. Though English in name the fair lady was, nevertheless, clearly of French origin.

Her extreme beauty charmed M. de la Tour, and he congratulated himself upon the accident which had gained him such an acquaintance. Lady Melton landed him with civilities, and he certainly was not illlooking; but he had not the vanity to think his appearance was magnificent; and his plain and scanty wardrobe prevented him from doing credit to his tailor.

He accepted an invitation to the party spoken of. Invitations to other parties followed, and to be brief, the young man soon found home. If to be so established created at the house of Lady Melton. She, a rich and beautiful widow, was encircled by admirers. One by one they disappeared, giving way to the new clerk, who seemed to engross the lady's whole thoughts. Possibly, almost by her own asking, they were betrothed.

Fredric used to look sometimes in the glass which hung in his humble lodging, and wonder to what circumstance he owed his happy fortune. He used to conclude his meditations by the reflection that assuredly the lovely widow was fulfilling some unavoidable award of destiny. As for his own feelings, the lady was lovely, young, rich, accomplished, and doted on her sometimes and virtue—could he resist?

When the marriage contract was signed and the settlement executed, for he found himself, through the lady's love, the virtual owner of large property both in England and France. The presence of friends had ended and mass named the union, yet Fredric, as he have stated, felt some fears in spite of himself lest all should prove an illusion, and he grasped the bride's hand as it to prevent her being snatched away from his view.

'My sister Fredric,' said the lady smilingly, 'sit down beside me and let me say something to you.'

The young husband obeyed, but did not quit her hand. She began—Once on a time'—Fredric started and half seriously exclaimed—

'Heaven, it is a fairy tale!'

'Listen to me, foolish boy,' resumed the lady: 'There was once a young lady, the daughter of parents well born, and at one time rich, but who had declined sadly in circumstances. Until her fifteenth year the family lived in Lyons, depending entirely for subsistance on the labor of her father. Some better hopes sprang up and induced them to come to Paris; but it is difficult to stop in the descent down the path of misfortune. For three years the father struggled hard against poverty, and at last died in an hospital.

'The mother soon followed, and the young girl was left alone, without friends or protectors, harrassed by debts which she could not pay, and seeking in vain for some species of employment. She found none, still it was necessary for her to have some food. One day passed on which she tasted nothing. The night that followed was sleepless. Next day was again passed without food, and the poor girl was forced into the resolution of begging. She covered her head with her mother's veil—the only heritage she had received—and stopping as soon to simulate age, she went out into the street.

'When there, she held out her hand.—Alas! the hand was white and youthful and delicate. She felt the necessity of covering it up in the folds of the veil as if it had been leprosed. Thus concealed the poor girl held out her hand to a young woman who passed—one more happy than herself—and asked:

'A sou—a single sou—to get some bread!'

The petition was unheeded. An old man passed. The mendicant thought that the experience of the distresses of life might best soften one like him, but she was in error. Experience had only hardened, not softened his cold heart.

'The night was cold and rainy, and the hour had come when the night police appeared to keep the streets clear of all mendicants and suspicious characters. At this period the shrinking girl took courage once more to hold out her hand to a passer by. It was a young man. He stopped at the silent appeal, and diving into his pocket, pulled out a piece of money which he threw to her, being apparently afraid to touch a thing so miserable. Just as he did this, one of the police said to the girl;

'Ah! I have caught you, have I?—you are begging. To the office with you. Come along.'

'The young man interposed. He took hold hastily of the mendicant—of her whom he had before seemed afraid to touch, and addressing himself to the policeman, said reprovingly:

'This is not a beggar, No; she is—she is one whom I know.'

'But sir—'

'I tell you that she is an acquaintance of mine,' repeated the young stranger.—Then turning to the girl, whom he took for an old woman, he continued—

'Come along, my good dame, and permit me to see you safely to the end of the street.'

Giving his arm to the unfortunate girl he led her away, saying—

'Here is a piece of a hundred sous. It is all I have. Take it poor woman.'

'The crown of a hundred sous passed from your hand to mine,' continued the lady, 'and as you walked along, supporting my steps, I then, through my veil, distinctly saw your face and figure—'

'My figure?' said Fredric in amazement.

'Yes, my friend, your figure,' returned his wife, it was to me that you gave alms on that night. It was my life my honor perhaps that you saved!

'You a mendicant! You so young, so beautiful; and now so rich?' cried Fredric.

'Yes, my dearest husband,' replied the lady, 'I have in my life received alms—once only, and from you; and those alms have decided my fate for life.'

'On the day following that fearful night, an old woman in whom I had inspired sentiments of pity, enabled me to enter as seamstress in a respectable house. Cheerfulness returned to me with labor. I had the good fortune to become a favorite with the mistress whom I served, and indeed, I did my best by unwearied diligence and care to merit her favor.

'She was often visited by people in high life. One day Sir James Melton, an Englishman of great property, came to the establishment, along with a party of ladies. He returned again. He spoke with the mistress, and learnt that I was of good family: in short, learnt my whole history. The result was that he sat down by my side one day and asked me plainly if I would marry him.

'Marry you!' cried I in surprise.

'Sir James Melton was a man of sixty, tall, pale and feeble looking. In answer to my exclamation of astonishment, he said—

'You, I ask if you will be my wife? I am rich, but note no coxcomb—no hypocrite. My relations seem to yearn to see me in my grave. I have reasons which require a degree of kindly care that is not to be bought from servants. I have heard your story and I believe you to be one who will support prosperity as well as you have adversity. I make my proposal in sincerity, and hope that you will agree to it.'

'At that time, Fredric,' continued the lady, 'I loved you; I had felt it for you some, but that once was too memorable for me to forget, and something strange insinuated to me that we were destined to pass through life together. At the bottom of my soul I believed this. Yet other ties seemed to have ceased, and the supply to have completely failed in the very place where they would seem to be fostered by the greatest educating?

'All the reasons you mention, the mistress we have just mentioned, he will find no difficulty, we think, in discovering the most important reason. In all such instances there is one element present which is totally wanting in the average sermon. If it be only an itinerant lecturer who is speaking, he is personally addressing us, face to face and eye to eye. There is the quick and subtle interchange of personal sympathy. It is this which, when raised to a high pitch, constitutes the attraction of the orator. The human voice and the human eye, the most subtle and penetrating of all influences, give him an entrance to the mind and heart of every member of his audience; he addresses each of them, and each listens to the personal appeal. But in an ordinary pulpit all this is gone. The eye of the clergyman is off his audience, and his voice, by a natural consequence, is not addressed to them. They are no more to him than the imaginary "brethren" who are so "dearly beloved" in the abstract.—This defect in the delivery results upon the composition of a sermon, and the clergy get into a general, vague, impractical way of talk, addressed to nobody in particular, and with which nobody feels particularly concerned. The sermon is an exercitation, a prize composition, anything but an address delivered by a man to men whom he wishes to persuade. It might as well be preached by machinery for any personal interest that it arouses. No one, we think, will doubt that this is the chief cause of the want of interest in sermons who has ever observed the effect produced on a congregation when the preacher, though but for a short time, drops his manuscript and addresses a few natural words to his audience. All eyes are turned to him in a moment, and even at the end of a service weariness seems forgotten. The experience, moreover, of public assemblies is uniform on this point. In our own Houses of Parliament a standing order forbids the reading of a speech. But even in foreign assemblies the man who reads his speech has no chance of a hearing. In fact, no man in any other circumstances who wished to persuade or to influence an audience would think of reading his address. He would know by instinct that it would be at once fatal; yet it is this fatal practice which is almost universally adopted in English pulpits. We commenced by saying that the complaints before us might be reduced to one. We are disposed similarly to say that there is but one essential remedy, and that is that the clergy should abandon a habit which no other class of public speakers would venture to adopt.

We are unable to see that there are any insurmountable difficulties in the way of such a reform. We are well aware that the thousands of clergy in the Church of England cannot be all great orators, or all good writers. Among minor reforms, indeed, we hope to see the day when the absurdity of setting every raw curate, fresh from the university, with no experience and very moderate learning, to discourse to men and women immersed in the rough struggles of actual life will be abandoned. In every other religious community some regard is paid to a man's qualifications before he is set to preach. In the Church of England alone all men are equally commissioned to preach to all audiences alike. But, allowing for these disadvantages, why should the clergy add to them by voluntarily throwing aside the greatest advantage they can secure? If it be impossible to have good speakers, let us, at all events, have speakers and not mere reading machines. It is said, again, that extempore sermons would be still worse, more empty and more profitless, than written discourses. But why should a spoken sermon be extempore? It would surprise many people, and the clergy in particular, if they knew how very few of the most effective speeches in Parliament are really delivered impromptus. Great orators have generally prepared their addresses with the most scrupulous and laborious care. If busy men can find time to prepare these accurately a speech of two or three hours, could not a clergyman find time, in the six days that intervene between Sunday and Sunday, to prepare a half-hour's sermon with equal completeness?

A Bashful Young Man.

Cousin Kate was a sweet, wide-awake beauty of about seventeen, and she took it into her head to go down to Long Island to see some relations of hers who had the misfortune to live there. Among these relations there chanced to be a young swain who had seen Kate on a previous occasion, and had fallen deeply in love with her.—He called at the house on the evening of her arrival, and she met him on the piazza, who she was enjoying the evening air in company with two or three of her friends.

The poor fellow was so bashful he could not find his tongue for some time. At length he stammered out:

How's your mother?

Quite well, thank you.

A silence on the part of Josh ensued, during which Kate and her friends, did the best they could to relieve monotony. After waiting about fifteen minutes, to make agreeable, he broke the silence with: How's your father? which was answered much after the same fashion as the first one, and thus followed another silence as before.

How's your father and mother? again put in the bashful lover.

Quite well, both of them.

This was followed by an exchange of glances and a suppressed smile, which lasted some minutes, and during which Josh was fidgeting on his seat and stroking Sunday hat. But at length another question came: How's your parents?

This produced an explosion which made the woods ring.

The Boy who Don't Care.

'James, my son, you are wasting your time playing with that kitten when you ought to be studying your lesson. You will get a bad mark if you don't study,' said Mrs. Mason to her son.

'I don't care,' replied the boy, as he continued to amuse himself with the gambols of Spot, his pretty little kitten.

'But you ought to care, James; you ought to grow up an honest, good-for-nothing man if you don't make a good use of your opportunities.'

'I don't care,' said James, as he romped into the yard after his amusing playmate.

'Don't care will be the ruin of that child!' said Mrs. Mason to herself. 'I must teach him a lesson that he will not easily forget.'

Guided by this purpose the lady made no provisions for dinner. When noon arrived, her little boy rushed into the house, as usual, shouting:

'Mother, I want my dinner!'

'I don't care,' replied Mrs. Mason very calmly, working on with her needle without looking up.

'I'm very hungry, mother,' rejoined the boy.

'I don't care,' repeated Mrs. Mason.

James was puzzled. His mother had never so treated him before. Her words were strange words for her to use, and the manner was so cold that he could not understand what it all meant. He was silent awhile, then he spoke again.

'Mother, I want something to eat.'

'I don't care,' was the cool reply.

'But recess will soon be over, mother, and I shall starve if I don't get some dinner,' urged James.

'I don't care.'

This was too much for the boy to endure. He burst into tears. His mother seeing him fairly subdued, laid down her work, and calling him to her side, stroked his head very gently, and said:

'My son, I want to make you feel the folly and sin of the habit you have of saying "I don't care." Suppose I did not care for you, what would you do for food or for clothing, for a nice home, for education? You now see that I must either care for you, or you must suffer very seriously. So if you must suffer through my lack of care for you, don't you think you will also suffer if you don't care for yourself? And now you see that I must suffer too if you say you care that I must suffer too if you say you care not; therefore, you will come saying "I don't care," and I hope to be a thoughtful boy, caring for my welfare and your own Julius.'

James had never looked on his evil habit in this light before. He promised to do better, and, after receiving a piece of pudding sent off to school, a wiser if not a better boy.—S. S. Advocate.

WAS IT CHANCE?

I was in the habit of visiting a decrepit widow, an paralysis made it impossible for her to attend church. She was tended by a very dutiful daughter, who, working in a mill in the neighborhood, toiled hard and contented herself with plain dress and simple fare that she might help to maintain her mother. Before leaving the cottage for her work, she was in the habit of heaping up the refuse of the mill in the grate to kindling it. She placed her helpless mother in a chair right before the fire, and as this fuel burned slowly away, the old woman was kept comfortable till her return. It happened one day that I left my house skirting the walls of the old churchyard, and passing the corn mill, with its busy sound flashing wheel I took my way down the winding dell to the cottage of the old woman which stood in its garden, embosomed among trees. But, having met a parishioner with whom I had some subject of interest to talk about, I called a halt and sitting down on a bank of thyme, we entered into conversation. Ere the subject was half exhausted, the widow rose to my recollection. I felt somehow, that I must cut a short and leave away on my visit. But the idea was dismissed and the conversation went on. However, it occurred again and again, till I had a feeling that I was neglecting a call of duty, so by an uncontrollable impulse I rose to my feet, and made haste to the cottage. Opening the door, a sight met my eye that for a moment nailed me to the spot. The erection of the mill refuse which had been built from the hearth some feet up the wide chimney, having its foundations worn away, had fallen, and precipitating itself forward, surrounded the helpless [illegible] within a circle of fire. The accident took place some minutes before I entered. She had evidently not been able to rise from her head to help. Catching the fact at once about her, on and on, scarce and no the flames crept. It was a terrible [illegible] for the two wigtorn women—[illegible] staked for out on the seads of Sodom! To mark the sea foam cruel waters nearer them; It was more terrible still this lone woman, in her lone cottage, cut sog great cause to die for, to set there and see the fire creeping closer, drawing nearer and nearer to her feet. By the time I had entered, I had almost reached her, where she sat motionless, [illegible] pale as death, looking down on the fire as it was about to seize her clothes. I called her to a sister. Ere it caught, I had her and no more, to make one bound for the door to the heathstone, and seizing the chair and all, in my arms, to place it in the jaws of a cruel, fiery death. In the law of nature, when I lingered on the spot was I moved, without the remotest fear for danger, to cut short against all the flames, an interesting conversation to hurry to the house, which I reached in the nick of time—one or two coals of the flames had caught her clothes, and I found her in a blaze of fire. WHELAN'S TRIAL.

On Friday the prisoner was brought from the gaol to the Court with "suppers" on both his wrists. He was attired in a suit of plain black, a white shirt and turned down collar, with a plain black necktie.

When called upon by the Court to listen to the indictment he stood firmly at the front of the dock while the Clerk read the charge against him. As soon as it was finished he said, in a firm calm voice, "I deny that charge; its erroneous altogether."

He was then asked if he was ready for his trial, and expressed himself ready, but the counsel wished not to commence it till Monday [illegible]

Mr. O'Reilly expressed a desire to proceed as early as possible with the case, as there was a great number of witnesses to be examined.

Hon. John Hillyard Cameron, on behalf of the prisoner, said he would not be ready to proceed before Saturday. He could commence then if the Crown desired, but he would rather have the affair concluded without Sunday intervening and would suggest leaving it over till Monday.

Mr. O'Reilly said that if the case could not go on this (Friday) morning he would also wish it postponed till Monday. The trial was fixed for that day, and the prisoner was removed to the jail in the same way as he had been brought to the Court Room.

(From the Globe.)

OTTAWA, Sept. 7.

Perhaps none of the many important trials held in Canadian Courts gave rise to such wide-spread and deep interest as that which commenced here to-day. The trial of James Whelan for the assassination of Thomas D'Arcy McGee, M. P., has long been looked forward to, and apart altogether from the dense crowd occupying the Court room below, the row of writers in the gallery recently put up for the accommodation of the press, could show how unusual an interest the proceedings in the case excite. Newspaper representatives are here from New York, Chicago, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, and other places; and evidence will thus be scattered broadcast throughout the continent.

As early as 8 o'clock this morning many assembled in the Court House to obtain seats. Among these were some members of the press, who found all the doors barred, and were informed on demanding admittance, that they could only obtain admittance through the High Bailiff. That functionary having been busted up, very graciously gave us permission to enter the dungeon of the Court House where the Assizes of Ottawa are held. High up near the ceiling, in the very best place to cause suffocation, the press men beheld the gallery specially designed for them, and their hearts almost failed them at the sight, for it seemed as if it only could ever survive an hour's respiration of the vitiated air which must prevail there when the Court becomes crowded.

Some hundreds of people rushed into Court; the members of the legal fraternity ranged themselves round the semi-circular table in front of the bench; half a dozen ladies sat behind these; Col. Gray, of N. B.; Hon. Mr. Mitchell, Minister of Marine, Colonel Colin, R. W. Scott, M. P. The Mayor of Ottawa and other distinguished persons had also seats inside the bar. By and by Sheriff Powell came in with cocked hat, sword and full dress generally, and the Chief Justice followed, and at a quarter to 10 o'clock took his seat on the bench, where Judge Armstrong also occupied a seat during the proceedings. The Crown Counsel, with his brother, Mr. Peter O'Reilly, occupied seats opposite the Judge, and to their right were the counsel for the defence, Mr. J. H. Cameron, Q. C.; Hon. Mr. M. C. Cameron, Q. C.; Mr. Kenneth McKenzie, Q. C., and Mr. John O'Farrel of the Quebec bar, and Mr. Buckley, of Ottawa.

The prisoner was brought into Court at ten minutes past 10 o'clock handcuffed, and in charge of half a dozen constables. He looked pretty well at ease, and nothing the worse for his lengthy confinement. He seemed less nervous than formerly, and altogether composed himself quietly and respectably. As to his countenance, it was with the exception of a slight frown—open, not unpleasing, and not as dogged or villainous-looking as many others who sat among the spectators. He wore a black coat and light pants and vest with a handsome chain depending from the latter. He wore a linen shirt and black tie, and was from top to toe scrupulously neat and clean.

Mrs Whelan came into court at an early hour, dressed in black silk, and was given a seat a little to the front of her husband.

Great interest was excited by the challenging of jurors. Before going into details I may state in brief that Mr O'Reilly, Crown prosecutor, challenged all the Roman Catholic jurors, and two Protestant jurors having Roman Catholic wives. Several Protestants were also challenged by him, who were looked upon as very fair jurymen for defence. Hodgins, who was objected to by Mr Hillyard Cameron, for cause, is an Orangeman, it is said, of extreme opinions. There are stated to be other Orangemen on the jury. There was an important point raised as to 'challenge for cause,' interesting to the legal profession. The Ontario statute says the prisoner shall not have more than twenty peremptory challenges. When prisoner had challenged twelve peremptorily, he challenged Sparks, a juror, for cause; but the challenge was refused by the Chief Justice, on the ground that the prisoner could not challenge for cause until after he had made twenty peremptory, and that prisoner having still eight peremptory challenges, could not thus exercise his challenge for cause. After prisoner had exhausted his peremptory challenges, Mr Hillyard Cameron, for the prisoner, presented a peremptory challenge to another juror, alleging the right to so challenge because the challenge to sparks had been for cause, and this last challenge made twenty only, exclusive of Sparks. But the Chief Justice overruled the last challenge, and it is supposed that the defence is not satisfied with these rulings.

Now as to details. Mr. J. H. Cameron stated he wished a full jury in the box before he challenged.

Mr. O'Reilly remarked that that was not the usual course.

His Lordship said the usual course was to challenge the jury as called, but granted Mr. Cameron's wish.

The Clerk of the court then called the following names, which were challenged or sworn as indicated:—Allen Polly, challenged by the defence; Wm. Hoather, challenged by defence; Richd Smith, challenged by the Crown; Robt Smith, challenged by defence; Thomas Morris, challenged by the Crown; Henry Alexander, challenged by defence; Robert Little, challenged by the defence; Jos Fontpath, senior, challenged by Crown; Richd Kempt, challenged by defence; Hugh Houston, challenged by defence; Wm Purdy, sworn; Alex Houston, challenged by the defence. In the second panel, Robt Hood, challenged by defence; Thos Weatherby, challenged by the Crown, but challenge withdrawn and sworn; Wm. Patrick Moore, challenged by the Crown; Jas Carg ee, challenged by the Crown; John Cowthra, do do; Wm. Bennet, do do; Robert W Brown, sworn; John Nicolls, sworn; Patrick Daly, junior, challenged by Crown; Jos Wilcox, junior, sworn; Wm. Hodgins challenged by the defence. In the third panel Wm Herron was sworn; Wm Wilson, challenged by the defence; Jas Weathers, challenged by the Crown; Thos Featherstone, sworn; Albert Chevalier; challenged by the Crown; David Hatton, do do; Wm Arthur, challenged by defence. In the fourth panel, Chas Brundrige, challenged by Crown; Patk Mantel, do do; Jonathan Sparks, challenged by the defence for having expressed the opinion that Whelan was guilty.

M. J H Cameron made his statement in writing.

Mr. O'Reilly demurred to the challenge of twenty had been exhausted.

Mr J H Cameron said he had not exhausted his right to challenge.

His Lordship gave judgment against demurrer, and explained to Sparks that he did not do so upon the assertion that he had declared his opinion, but upon the principle that if prisoner wanted to challenge, he must do it peremptorily. It was not necessary for Sparks to say anything as to the truth or falsehood of the matter.

Wm Gamble, sworn; Patrick Baxter, challenged by Crown. In the 5th panel, Albert Herrick, challenged by Crown; John Lewis sworn; Jos Broome challenged by defence; John White challenged by defence; Wm Wynn challenged by Crown; Alexander Gleaning some misspelt and objected to; Wm Cranberry challenged by defence; Jas Gilchrist challenged by defence; James Watt challenged by defence; George Kavanagh by J H Cameron for having expressed the opinion that prisoner was guilty.

Mr O'Reilly objected, as peremptory challenges were exhausted.

Kavanagh was placed on oath, and in reply to Mr. J H Cameron, stated that he had not expressed an opinion respecting the prisoner's guilt. He had started it looked like it judging from the evidence as it appeared in the newspapers.

Wm Purdy and Thos Weatherby were sworn to try George Kavanagh, one of the jurors, to ascertain whether he had expressed an opinion, and if he would be a fair juror to try the prisoner. The two jurors were instructed by his Lordship and retired to consult respecting the point raised. Returning they reported no objection, and Kavanagh was duly sworn.

James Tierney challenged by Crown; Robt McDaniel sworn; Benj Hodgins peremptorily challenged of right by defence; challenge not sustained. Hodgins sworn and objection of defence placed on record. Samuel Corn sworn.

The jury being now complete, the Clerk of the Court read the indictment.

The list of witnesses for the Crown was then called.

Mr. Jas. O'Reilly, Q. C., then opened the case. The prisoner at the bar, he said, is charged with the crime of murder. The language of the indictment itself is simple, and tells you, gentlemen, that on the 7th of April last, at Ottawa, the prisoner, J. Whelan did feloniously, unlawfully and of malice aforethought, kill and murder Thomas D'Arcy McGee. Murder as it is understood by the authorities and as it is defined by Lord Coke, is the killing of a fellow-being of malice aforethought by a person of sound memory and discretion. It must be unlawful killing, unexcusable and unjustifiable.—The being killed must be a reasonable creature in rerum natura, the killing must be with malice aforethought. At the present stage of this case, I will simply narrate the history of the tragedy in as few words as possible. Thomas D'Arcy McGee was undoubtedly murdered, and the only object the Crown could have in ferreting out this atrocious murder is to discover who the real guilty party is. If the prisoner at the bar is the murderer—if he is really guilty of the diabolical deed with which he is charged—if the evidence makes this clear to you—it will then be your duty, according to your oath, to pronounce him guilty; but on the other hand, if the evidence fails to point to the prisoner at the bar, and to satisfy you of his guilt beyond all reasonable question or doubt then I am sure it will be your pleasing duty to pronounce a verdict for the prisoner. God forbid that on this case, or any other case of a human being charged with the life of one of the Queen's subjects, or one under the protection of the laws of this country, should be convicted except on a clear and satisfactory evidence. If it is not such—if it does not point with clear and unerring finger to the prisoner at the bar as the murderer—then the Crown, on behalf of law and on behalf of society, does not ask a verdict of conviction. At this stage I will content myself with giving an outline of the facts relating to this fearful tragedy. I need not tell any one residing in the Dominion of Canada who Thos. D'Arcy McGee was. On the 7th April last that distinguished statesman was attending to his parliamentary duties in this city. On the evening of the 8th he went to the House of Commons in good health and excellent spirits. On that occasion a very important question claimed the attention of the House. It was a question largely affecting the interests of this country, and in the debate Mr. McGee took part, delivering one of the most eloquent speeches ever heard in the Legislature. At 2 o'clock that morning, after a long and anxious session, Mr. McGee left the House for his own lodgings on Spark street. He was accompanied by Mr. MacFarlane, M. P., a gentleman of distinction at the bar in Upper Canada. Mr. MacFarlane and he went down together down Metcalfe street to Spark, and at the corner of that street Mr. MacFarlane left Mr. McGee. It was clear moonlight—the night being almost as bright as day. Mr. McGee appeared to have crossed Spark street, and I gone some 200 or 300 yards until he reached the door of his lodging house, Mrs. Trotter's. Just as he reached, or was about reaching that point, it is alleged and charged that the prisoner at the bar was in the vicinity hidden. Prisoner was in the House of Commons that night; left it a few minutes before Mr. McGee; went down Spark street, waited in one of the gateways on the south side of the street, a short distance from Mr. McGee's lodgings, and when Mr. McGee passed, the prisoner must have followed him into the street and fired the shot when immediately opposite Mr. McGee's lodgings. The theory of the crown is that while Mr. McGee was putting his latch key in the door, the prisoner advance of with a loaded pistol and fired at the deceased, the ball penetrating the back part of his neck going through his mouth, and carrying away a number of his teeth. He died within a few minutes, aye, seconds. Sixty seconds did not elapse until his soul passed away to his Maker. We charge that the prisoner at the bar fired that shot and took away the life of that man. We will undertake to establish in the evidence that the prisoner at the bar was an emissary of wicked men who had conspired together to take Mr. McGee's life, that this conspiracy was hatched in Montreal, and that the prisoner was one of the conspirators. The first idea of the parties entering into this hellish scheme was to kill Mr. McGee in his own house, and the prisoner went there for that purpose. Fortunately Mr. McGee's brother was in the house, and at that time—1 or 2 o'clock in the morning when the prisoner went there—the door was opened by Mr. McGee's brother. The prisoner alleged that he came for a friendly purpose, to warn Mr. McGee that his house was to be attacked at 4 o'clock that morning. The person was received as such, but the moment he entered, his character was found out by young Mr. McGee, and the key of the door in his pocket, and he was accompanied prisoner up stairs. The deceased when he heard prisoner's statement on account of the young political feeling prevailing in the city at that time between the two parties, one of whose was represented by Mr. McGee. He gave prisoner a letter to give to the Chief of Police. That letter was given about two o'clock in the morning, and prisoner started to deliver it; but, instead to say, it was a quarter to five o'clock before the person delivered it at the police station to which he was directed. Remember, he had warned Mr. McGee that the night was to be an event! About the time, we will be able to establish, the prisoner at the bar used strong threats against the deceased; charged him with selling the cause of his native land; charged him with deserting his own religion and selling himself to Protestantism; and charged him with being a man who at one time received money to destroy his country. Such was the touching, such the views entertained by the prisoner at the bar, until he became a political fanatic, and was determined to be as it were an avenger. And too well, we believe, he accomplished his fell purpose. It will appear also that at a house or tavern kept by a person in Montreal the prisoner was in the habit of meeting other persons, by some of whom he was especially mentioned as the person selected to murder Mr. McGee, and it will be shown that at a meeting there before Christmas, one of three persons addressed the prisoner as the bar as Sullivan, and said Sullivan is the man to do the deed. This was shortly before prisoner's visit to Mr. McGee's. It will be proved that when Mr. McGee came to Ottawa last November, to attend to his parliamentary duties, the prisoner also left Montreal and made his first appearance in this city. When Mr. McGee became aware of this he confined to his own room, prisoner returned again to Montreal, and when Mr. McGee reappeared in Ottawa, Whelan is said to have done so too. The latter is a tailor by trade, was in receipt of good wages in Montreal, was an excellent workman in constant employment in Montreal, had a home there, and also a wife; yet he is found leaving for Ottawa. He worked with a Mr. Egleson, merchant tailor, here. It will be shown to you that generally when Mr. McGee was in the house, Whelan was in the gallery, and that when Mr. McGee was sick and confined to his apartments, Whelan was not seen in the House of Commons. It will also appear that as early as September, if not October, Whelan purchased the pistol and practised shooting. Certain it is that when over fired the fatal shot on the 7th of April, was an accomplished marksman. On the Wednesday previous to the murder Whelan was in the gallery with a pistol in his breast. Mr. McGee was then on the floor of the House, and gentlemen in the gallery observed the pistol in Whelan's pocket. It will further be given in evidence that on the night prisoner at the bar was in the House of Commons, that he appeared there about 9 or half past 9 o'clock, and went in and out of the House several times—that he seemed to be restless and uneasy, going up to the gallery, sitting a short time, and then going out again. A witness will prove that he saw Whelan in the gallery when Mr. McGee was addressing the House. He was delivering his last speech. The subject had relation to the recall of Dr. Tupper from England, and Mr. McGee in the course of his address remarked that it would be like hitting a man below the belt to recall Dr. Tupper. Just as Mr. McGee was saying this, Whelan was observed in the gallery, and is said to have gnashed his teeth, and in a threatening manner pointed at Mr. McGee. Whelan was observed taking other positions in the gallery that night. I am afraid he had accomplices even within the precincts of the legislative halls. He seemed that night to be in conversation with a man immediately alongside and also to hold occasional converse with two others at the rear of the gallery. It will be shown that just as Mr. McGee was leaving the lobby, Whelan was standing at the inside entrance of the outer door, that he was leaning against the pillar, and that he went out the moment he saw Mr. McGee going. A few minutes subsequently the fatal shot was fired. That Whelan was in the House until the sitting closed that night, there can be no question. Where he went afterwards is almost unknown save by his own declaration, in which he alleged that he shot Mr. McGee that night. That allegation was made in a conversation he held with a fellow prisoner—Doyle—and himself, and you will have it in evidence. I should rather you would hear the evidence from the lips of the witnesses themselves than detail it to you, because it is very important, and in our judgment completes the chain of evidence implicating the prisoner at the bar. Beyond all this, we will, it necessary, prove by a witness named Leavix, that he saw Mr. McGee shot that night. The witness will describe the appearance of the prisoner, and tell you how the act was done. If you believe this testimony there will be point blank proof of prisoner's guilt; but even if you choose to lay aside this evidence altogether, we contend that there is ample proof to establish the charge against the prisoner. We have his own acts and statements all pointing in this direction. He is found constantly, as it were, on the track of the murderer—the assassin. Prisoner is still found watching deceased even on the night of the murder. Audaciously and in public that night prisoner threatens deceased, and perhaps determines that that night deceased's soul should be with his God. These are the leading points of the evidence which we will produce against the prisoner; and, as I said before you will, under the charge of the learned Judge, give your verdict according to evidence, to your consciences convictions, and may God defend the right.

Paul Frechette, G. H. Perry, engineer, Michael McCarthy, Dr. McGillivary, Dr. Courtland, Mr. MacFarlane, M. P. P., Wm. Trotter and Mrs. Trotter were sworn, but gave no information of importance. The following is Lacroix's evidence:—

Jean Baptiste Lacroix sworn, said—I live in Ottawa on Gray Nun street in the Lower town; on Monday night I went to the Chaudiere, and came back about half past one that night; I came from the Upper Town to the Lower Town, taking the street along the front of the Parliament buildings; when near the buildings I took the street at right angles.

Witness here requested an interpreter, but the defence objected. After some further questions, it became evident that witness did not understand English well enough to answer intelligently, and Mr G. H Measuley, Private Secretary to Mr Speaker Cockburn was sworn as interpreter). I left Washington street by the left side of Cross street going down; there was a fence at that corner, and houses near the fence, about a quarter of an acre fence; before coming to the House I saw a man with a hat on his head, he was going up the street towards the Chaudiere; he appeared to be going to the door opposite the telegraph post; when I saw him first the man was from 12 to 15 yards from the door; saw another person from 17 to 19 yards from the person I first saw; both the men I saw were on the same side of the street, and both on the side opposite to me both were going in the same direction; I saw a man who had light pants, dark coat and cap, following the man I first saw with the hat; they might have been from four to seven feet apart; the man in the rear left the sidewalk, went into the street, and came behind the man on the sidewalk; the first man appeared to me to be trying to open the door at which he stood, when the shot was fired; the second man held out his hand and fired when behind the first man; I was confused and gave a jump; the first man fell head first on the side walk; (here witness fell down a little to show how it occurred); the second man returned by about the same course he took in coming and struck against the corner of the gate there on the same side of the street; he exclaimed "Jesus"; he then went on the sidewalk and went a little further into a gate or archway; I was at this time standing in the door way of a brick house nearly opposite Frotter's and nearer the Sapper's bridge than Chaudiere falls direction; I was standing close to a brick house, and when I saw this I started and went home, being too much frightened to cross over before the man wheeled and struck the post, and went into an archway; he and self [illegible] yards from me; could see his face distinctly; do not know if he had a hat or cap on; can't say what time elapsed subsequently to the firing of the shots; I then went to bed; I am a married man; I have children; I am 36 years of age; I continued my peaceful occupation of a farmer until the 8th October, when I purchased a small grocery business and continued it until the 1st of April, when I sold out to Mr. Lafleur, who purchased the place where the shots were fired; I then went to reside on Gray Nun street, about 20 lots off; I am a married man; my wife is here; came with me here; I and have been in Ottawa before, being occasionally in Ottawa and neighborhood working for the past 16 years; have been in Ottawa or neighborhood quite, your during these 16 years; know Upwara Gill, but do not know the names of the streets; I left my brother-in-law's on the afternoon of the day of the murder; left about 4 o'clock; did not proceed that night; was in a house; did not proceed that night; I was Irish several people; do not know their names; I know one of them; I was with that afternoon; do not know his name; cannot tell any of their names; until half-past 1 o'clock that morning I was asking for work and looking for a home; cannot tell a single name of those I asked for a house on that occasion; I received nothing Baldy and also Eddy that day; took my dinner in the afternoon; cannot recollect the time I took supper; up to time I left Chaudiere Flats do not recollect being in any house except my uncle's; I know I went into houses, but do not recollect their names; I did not see any doctor or went to the last house I was in before leaving the village; and I passed my uncle's door; I asked him the time, and he said it was on to half past one, a. m.; after I left my uncle and until I got to the Parliament Buildings I saw no one on the street; I saw some men on the hill in front of the Parliament Buildings apparently standing still; that was at the west wing and opposite the I turned down the street; did not stop at the corner of that street and Spark street; cannot say what time elapsed before I saw the man on the opposite side of the street; the man in front had a black beaver hat; the one in rear had a black fur cap; I did not stop walking before I saw the first man, but ab n I heard the shot fired I stopped and hid myself in the doorway; I did not stop till the shot was fired; I was a little past the man when the shot was fired; up to that time I had not noticed the faces of either men; never noticed the face of the man shot; the doorway into which I went was closed; I put my back close to the door and looked to the opposite side of the street; I was about fifteen yards further towards the Sappers' bridge than they were; when the men fired the shot he turned round and walked off very fast, without running; he turned on the side path about the 5 or 6 paces to the Sapper's bridge than I was; never had an opportunity before that of seeing his face; I had none then right; I was still in the doorway until the man disappeared in the archway, and I remained from three to five minutes standing in the porchway; was too much frightened to go and see the man who had fallen; after he was shot the man fell on the sidewalk, with his head towards the door; from where I stood I could see quite plainly the door the person was trying to get in; did not see the door opened when I stayed opposite; he might have been opened; I had my back on the first step of the door; when I was going home I met a man in St. Patrick street; met no carriages and horses that I recollect; do not know Gaskell's hotel; saw nobody when I got home except those in the house; said nothing about that night or next morning; I think it was on the following Wednesday I spoke of the murder first; did not hear a reward spoken of that day; cannot state the time I first heard it; heard a man say it was a large, and some say a small reward; I didn't know which it was; I spoke with Lauierre of the late Mr McGee, and that a reward was offered; the conversation occurred on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday, I can't positive by any which; think it was Wednesday; Lapierre told me of the death first; don't recollect upon my saying anything to me of reward; (Mr. J. H. Cameron repeated the last question, and witness said he had no recollection of Lapierre saying anything about the reward at all;) Lapierre told me about the murder; I told him I heard a pistol shot when I was in upper town. I merely told Lapierre that I had heard the shot, not that I had seen the shot fired. We then separated. Did not see Lapierre again until I was first brought before a magistrate. After speaking with Lapierre, I told nobody about the matter till Pinard came to me. Did not tell Paul Lavesque and a man named Barney by the name that I did not see the shot fired, but merely heard it. I may have said it and I may not. Did not tell any one I saw the shot fired as if I showed Pinard the place. I told Lapierre I heard the shots fired and was very much frightened. I may have told Pinard I saw the shot fired. It was in a house in the flats, treated from Lafleur, that the last conversation alluded to occurred. Pinard asked me to show him the place where the murder was committed. When I was taken to the gaol, 8 or 9 days after, I was taken into the corridor where prisoner was. I saw him in his cell; prisoner was in his shirt sleeves, there were the prisoner and other persons who accompanied him; there was nobody but one person in the cell and he had no coat on; did not say that I could not recognize him, but that it was difficult to recognize him in his state. I asked to dress him in the same clothes as on the night of the murder. I said that it was difficult to recognize a man without all his clothes on; I recognized the face of the man; I always asked to see him in the same clothes and in the shape that he was on that evening; I don't say who drew my attention to the man; it might have be n the governor of the gaol or the Sheriff; it was an elderly man; I did not know at the time who it was, but I have found out since it was the governor of the gaol. He took me in gaol and asked me to look inside the cells and see if the man was there. I went out and said it was difficult to recognize the man without his clothes on; about mid-day I was shown the man dressed; he had on the same of these as on the night I saw him; it was not because of his having on the clothes that I had already recognized him; I had already recognized him by his walk and appearance; I did not acknowledge that I did not recognize him when he had his coat off because I did not like to admit to anything about it; the cause and the effect I experienced both on the night of the murder and in the gaol.

Q—Do you know Cosgrove of Buckingham?

A—I do.

Q—And Richard Kane and Patrick Kane of Belleville?

A—I know some man named Patrick Kane.

Q—Do you know any person named Barney Dowdle of Hull?

A—Perhaps I may, perhaps not; I cannot say.

Q—Do you know a person named Oliver Lascar of Hull?

A—I may know him, but I am not sure.

Q—Do you know a man named Brown in gaol for debt?

A—I may have seen such a person several times and conversed with him.

Q—Have you said that if Whelan was hung you would receive a large sum of money?

A—No, certainly not. He continued: I have been three times to the gaol to see the prisoners and have been there ever since and have not said anything to that effect to any person.

Re examined by Mr. O'Reilly.

Q—When did you see the man at Chaudiere last, of whom you got your house which you lately moved into?

A—I saw the man on Monday and he promised to let me move in as soon as possible.

Q—Which did you move into the house?

A—On Saturday. He said he would let me have the house; if not, I should have another.

Q—What is his name?

A—Lafleur.

Q—Did you see him on Monday?

A—Yes, I did. Lafleur told me that if I could not have it at house I could have another on Monday. I was engaged in looking for a house. The Chaudiere mills were not in full work. I did not tell Lapierre about the murder because the man keeps a tavern; was busy and was no ing about. In addition, I was not obliged to tell Lapierre anything. I did tell him that I had been frightened in the Upper Town, and had heard a shot; I did not go to any magistrate to inquire anything about the murder; the officer Pinard came and brought me to the office; I did not go any where to see about it, and did not take any trouble about it; I both went at the house if I was wanted. Others I was to be found; I made no appointment at the time; had arranged to work for my brother-in-law; the sub ject of the murderer's trial; the officer put me in the gaol; I positively pointed out the cell where the murderer was; the officer put me in the prisoner, and helped me to see if I could recognize the man; why I asked the clothes to be put on was that I to be satisfied in my conscience that it might have been

The Salary of the Governor General.

The following despatch has been received.

DOWNING STREET,
20th July, 1868.

My Lord,—I have the honor to acknowledge your despatch, No 95, of the 23rd May, transmitting a Bill passed by the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, "to fix the salary of the Governor-General," which bill you have reserved for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure.

I need scarcely say that it is with reluctance, and only on serious consideration, that the Queen's Government can advise Her Majesty to withhold the royal sanction from a Bill which has passed two branches of the Canadian parliament. The present, however, is a measure which has important bearings for beyond its first aspect as a mere reduction of expenditure.

The annual salary of the Governor-General was fixed at £10,000 sterling as early as the year by the Imperial act of Union. Within the first few months of the existence of the new Parliament of Canada, it is proposed to red ce that salary to the two.

I fear that the effect of such a reduction, if operated to, must be prejudicial to the interests of Canada. The Governor's salary in the Colony of Victoria is £10,000 per annum; there are several colonies in which it is £7,000; in Canada the eminent counsellors of the full under consideration is £ 5,000. Instead of being as it ought to be, an object of the highest ambition, the office of Governor-General is, by the proposal, placed, so far as salary is a standard of remuneration, in the third class colonial governments.

The effect would be not merely to restrict Her Majesty's ministers in the choice of Governors General, to those who may follow the career of colonial Governors as a profession, but further, to confine the choice, even among those, to gentlemen who are still rising, and who would have to look to other places than Canada, as offering the highest amount for approved abilities and services.

But the Governor-General is the representative of the Queen, and the highest authority in a dominion, vast in extent, rich in resources, and peopled by several millions of people comprising within itself various Provinces recently brought together, which can only be held into a compact and lasting whole by wise and conciliatory administration. Not to the position considered. The Governor-General is so intimately called upon to act on questions affecting international relations with the United States. The person who discharges such equired functions ought to possess not only sound judgment and wide experience, but also an established public reputation. He should be qualified both to exercise a moderating influence amongst the different Provinces composing the Union, and also to bear weight in his relations with the British Minister at Washington and with the authorities of the great neighbouring republic.

I am sure that Queen's advisers in this country would at all times wish to obtain for Canada a Governor-General so qualified, but they could not ignore his services if the income of his office is not sufficient to meet the demand on his resources, and to uphold in a becoming manner the dignity of the Queen's Representative in Canada.

For these reasons Her Majesty's Government have felt it their duty to advise Her Majesty not to press into law, by giving the royal assent, the bill reserved for Her Majesty's pleasure for the reduction of the Governor-General's salary.

I have, &c.,

(Signed,) BUCKINGHAM & CHANDOS.

Governor
The Right Honorable
Viscount Monck,

A LAWSUIT FOR A MILLION.

A PHYSICIAN AND A CATHOLIC SCHOOL THE CONTESTANTS

(From the Louisville Courier, August 24.)

One of the most extraordinary cases on record is now pending before Judge Bruce, in the Circuit Court. The facts connected therewith, so far as we have been able to gather them, are as follows:

Dr Samuel E. McKinley, son of Judge McKinley, f rmerly Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, and United States Judge of the Circuit, was residing and practicing his profession at New Orleans, when the city was captured by the federal army. He was retained as a surgeon f r the Confederate sick, and was afterwards re ained in the United States service. The doctor married a very wealthy belle, a Miss Morrison, of Louisiana, by whom he has two children, one a boy named James, who is now with him in St. Louis, and the other a little girl. E. J. Lyon McKinley, twelve years of age His wife dying during the infancy of the girl, the doctor in 1865 moved to New Albany, Ind., taking with him these two children. About a year ago last winter he moved to this city, where he r mained till some time in 1867, and becoming desirous of going back to New Orleans to look after his property, left his little daughter at the Ursuline Academy, a Catholic female school in this city, for education, sending her from time to time money to pay her expenses Before or about the time of vacation, the doctor having moved and established himself in St. Louis, requested Judge Taylor to send by Adams Express his little daughter to him, the Express Company agreeing to undertake the care and custody of the child. When Judge Taylor applied for the child the superior of the academy objected to letting her go till her tuition should be fully paid. The doctor, on learning this, declared that he had sent by mail the full amount, and in a name for her himself. His counsel advising him that the academy could not hold in a law on the child for the money, he sued out a writ of habeas corpus before His Honour Judge Bruce and this case, as it happens, is the first brought before Judge Bruce since qualifying as our circuit Judge. The superior of the academy, answering to the writ, stated that the girl was named Lizzie Brown; that she was not the doctor's daughter; that she was fifteen years of age, and that the doctor was drunken and unfit to control the child. The answer was yesterday adjudged insufficient, and the respondent was required to state the time and the means by which it responded obtained possession of the child; that a mere allegation that the doctor was not her father was no ground for the respondent to retain her. While the doctor was away, some two weeks ago, it seems that the superior applied to the County Court to become her guardian, and exhibited, it is claimed, a private envelope with the name of E. J Lyon McKinley, in which the father had enclosed money to his daughter—this being the true name. It is also alleged he has letters from the superior calling her his daughter, Lyon.

It is further said that she has become a Catholic, contrary to her father's wishes, who is an Episcopalian, and that she will, at her grandfather's death, become the heiress of more than a million.

The case coming up yesterday afternoon, and the parties not being ready for trial on account of absent witnesses, it was continued till next Friday, at nine o'clock a. m. The court ruled the answer of the respondent insufficient, and required her to be more explicit.

The trial will develope some of the strongest legal points of law and fact known to jurisprudence.

Judge Jeff. Brown and Judge Taylor are attorneys for McKinley, and Judge Barnett, and W. G. Mercer for respondent.

The Goderich Signal says the following has been sent to us by a gentlemanan who lived several years in Goderich, and is well known to most of our citizens:—Buffalo, Aug. 22nd. 1868.—DEAR SIGNAL,—According to the Scriptures it is impossible to "entertain angels unawares" but in these degenerate days it is also quite within the limits of possibility to entertain beings of a different order without at the time knowing it. I arrive at this supposition by reading in your last issue, of a sort of reception on board the United States Revenue Cutter "Michigan," lately in your harbour, with the promise of a future visit. I am informed by a reliable authority, that at least two-thirds of the officers and crew on board of said vessel are members of a certain institution known as the "Fenian Brotherhood." No further comment is necessary.

THREATENED FAMINE IN THE RED-RIVER COUNTRY.—The Fort Garry Nor' wester says the crops in Red River country have been completely destroyed by the grasshoppers. Within the whole colony not one bushel of any kind of grain will be harvested, while the potato crop will be very meagre. In some quarters where no hailstones have been equipped this season, there being none to be found north of the Missouri river—Consequently emigration starts many in the fore. The colony numbers fourteen thousand souls, and the nearest point whence provisions can be obtained is Minnesota, four hundred and fifty miles away.

BOARDER'S REVENGE.—We have to record this week the descent of a most painful accident which occurred to a Presbyterian minister of St. Williams, of the township of Middlemarch. It appears that one day last week he was working in a field, and his dinner was conveyed to him by a boy, and his dinner consisted of the usual and accessible to hungry men upon the table of the reverend gentleman. Where the unfortunate parson failed upon it, the hungry spirit, letting him rat heavily upon the stake underneath, which entered his body to the distance of some six or eight inches and inflicting an ugly and most painful wound. The poor fellow was removed home and Dr. Mackie commenced to attend him. He is suffering very much from inflammation, &c., of the injured parts, but we are glad to learn that at the time of writing (Tuesday p. m.) hopes are confidently entertained that he will survive the counterquerses.—Colborne Express.

THE DEGRADING OF DRUNKENNESS.—A man named Jones who states that he came from Whitby, was found by a police-man reeling up Yonge street at a late hour last night. He was taken into the station-house and provided with lodgings for the night. A pawnbroker's document found on him ascertained his indentity and revealed the fact that he was a M. A., and an ordained deacon of St. John's College, Norwich, England. The certificate of ordination, which he had stowed away in an old tobacco tin, had appended to the signature and seal of the Bishop of the Cathedral Church of that diocese.—Toronto Globe.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darby's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or gives such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. OUR FORTIFICATIONS.—It is now nearly fifty years since our fortifications have been looked after in any way, we think it is now high time, and that it behoves our government to put them in a proper state of defence, and have our Lakes and Rivers well protected, "one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; but while we are protecting ourselves against a foreign enemy we should not forget to fortify ourself against bruises, front-bites, chilblains, pains in the back and side, cholic, cholera morbus, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the most effectual medicine Sold by all Dealers in Medicine, at 25 cents per bottle.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, rendering the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, convulsive extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, tardiness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

Poetry.

FORGIVE AND FORGET.

O! forgive and forget, for this life is too fleeting,
To waste it in handling o'er wrongs we have met;
It is better, far better, to smother out anger,
To touch the proud heart to forgive and forget.

In the path we must tread, leading down to the valley,
And crosses and trials to lift and to bear,
And the shadow of life's noon which we are beholden,
Oh! leave to our lips drops of sorrow and care.

But life is so short, be it sunshine or shadow,
That we cannot afford to brood over a wrong,
Let us lift up our burdens and bear them as heavenly,
We'll lay them down shortly, it cannot be long.

Then forgive and forget—if the friends you love fondly
Prove themselves to be false and unworthy of trust,
Deal with them kindly, for they are but mortals,
Erring like us—for we too are dust.

Deal with them tenderly, pity their weakness
We know every heart has its evil and good;
We all have one father and hence we are brothers,
Then let us forgive and forget as we should.

COMPANY MANNERS.

Well, said Bessy, very, emphatically, I think Russell Morton is the best boy there is, anyhow.

Why so, pet? I asked, settling myself amidst the ba-by group gathered around in the fire-light.

I can tell, interrupted Wilford, mockingly. Bessie likes Russ. because he always touched his hat to her.

I don't, you may laugh, little Bess, said Frank; that is the reason, at least, one of 'em. He's nice; he don't stamp and beat in the best o—and he never says, hallo, Bess, or laughs when I fall on the ice.

Bessie wasn't company manners all the time, said Wilford. And Bel added, we should not grown up, if she had her fastidiousness suited.

Bel, he it said in passing, is very fond of long words, and has asked for a dictionary for her next birthday present.

Demoiselle Bessie made haste to retort. Well, if growing up would make some people more agreeable, it's a pity we can't hurry about it.

Wilford, what are company manners? interposed I, from the depth of my easy chair.

Why—why—they're—its behaving, you know, when folks are here, or we go a visiting.

Company manners are good manners, said Horace, sagaciously.

Oh, yes, answered I, meditating on it, I see, manners that are too good—for mamma—but just right for Mrs. Jones.

That's it, cried Bess, give it to 'em, cousin Ess.

Not at all, I replied. But let us talk it over a bit. Seriously, why should you be more polite to Mrs. Jones than mamma? you don't love her better?

Oh, no! indeed, chorussed the little voices. Well, then, I don't see why Mrs. Jones should have all that's agreeable; why the hats off, and the tones softened, and "please," and "thank you," and "excuse me," should abound in Mrs. Jones' house and not mamma's.

Oh! that's different.

And mamma knows we mean all right. Besides, you are not fair cousin; we were talking about boys and girls—and not grown people.

Thus, my little audience smelled me, and I was forced to a change of base.

Well, about boys and girls, then.—Cannot a boy be just as jolly, if, like our friend Russell, he touches his hat to little girls, doesn't pitch his brother in the snow, and respects the rights of his cousin and friends? It seems to me that politeness is just as suitable to the play-ground as the parlor.

Oh, of course; if you'd have a fellow give up all fun, and keep for ever bowing and scraping like a Frenchman? grumbled Wilford.

My dear boy, said I, that isn't what I want. Run, and jump, and shout as much as you please; skate and slide and snow-ball; but do it with politeness to other boys and girls, and I'll agree you shall find just as much fun in it. You sometimes accuse me of undue love for Burke Holland, whom you say I pet more than all my child friends. Can I help it? For though he gets into scrapes in plenty, and is thoroughly frolicsome, his manners are always good. You never see him with his chair tipped up or his hat on in the house. He never pushes ahead of you to get first out of the room. If you are going out, he holds open the door; if weary, it is Burke who brings a glass of water, places a chair, heads a fox, springs to pick your handkerchief—and all this without being told to do so, or interfering with his own gaiety in the least. Moreover, this attention is not given me as a guest, or to Mrs. Jones when he visits her, but mamma, aunt Jenny and little sister, just as carefully; at home, in school, or at play, there is always as much guard against rudeness. His courtesy is not merely for state occasions, but a well-fitting garment worn constantly.

Why, I understand; he treats everybody just as Bernard does Cousin Zelphe, exclaimed little Daby.

Ahem—yes, I consented. I think his good-breeding, or gentlemanliness is, after all, genuine loving kindness. In fact, that is exactly what real politeness is; carefulness for others, and watchfulness over ourselves, lest our angels should interfere with their comfort. I am sure I think we all ought to cultivate it. The apostle Peter must have deemed it important, when among other charges, he bade the brethren "be pitiful, be courteous."

I know you wouldn't let us off without a sermon, said Wilford, half crossly.

Hush up, you grumbler! said Horace. Cousin is right. We all will begin to be polite at once. We'll be as polite as the man I read about the other day—somebody great too—but I can't remember his name—any way, somebody, who, when he tumbled over an old cow lying across the sidewalk one dark evening, took off his hat, and said, "Excuse me, madam!"

How the children laughed. So our talk ended in a frolic, which lasted till the children's bed-time.—Congregationalist.

HOTEL RECEIPTS.

PRESERVING PEARS.

For currants, gooseberries or cherries, take one fourth sugar, cook slowly fifteen minutes, put in cans and seal hot. For pumkins, plums, ripe grapes, and sweet apples, one-fifth sugar is sufficient. Having tried this method, I can recommend it for several reasons. Fruit canned in this way is not so expensive as that preserved in the old way with half sugar and half a day's cooking, and makes a much more wholesome and quite as delicious a sauce. It will not ferment or become moldy as easily as that canned in the usual way without sugar.—Homestead.

CELERY SAUCE.

Make half a pint of melted butter, of course using only milk or cream, or both mixed. Have ready three heads of celery the white parts well washed and cut up into small bits, and boiled for a few minutes in water, which strain off; put the celery to the melted butter, and keep it stirred over the fire for ten or twelve minutes. It is better to put the celery in before the melted butter boils up—as soon as it is hot will do. This is a very nice sauce for boiled fowl or turkey.

TO FRY LIVER.

It should be cut across the grain in slices half an inch thick. Then put into a deep plate, and pour boiling water over it. Let it lie thus for a few minutes, drain it, and season with pepper and salt. Dip each piece in flour and drop in hot lard.—Make a gravy as for beef, and pour over it.

FRENCH STEAK.

Cut thin slices of cold roast beef, and put in a chafing-dish; season with salt, pepper, walnut cat-up, a little vinegar, a little warm water, and plenty of butter, with some browned flower rubbed into it. The meat should be entirely covered with the gravy. Light the lamp and put on the chafing-dish, and let it steam thus, until the gravy is reduced two thirds. A nice breakfast dish.

TOMATO JAM.

Take ripe tomatoes, peel them and take out all seeds; put them into a preserving kettle, with half a pound of sugar to each pound of tomatoes; boil one or two lemons soft, then pound them fine, take out the pits, add the lemon to the tomato, and boil slowly; mash to a smooth mass; continue to stir until smooth and thick, then put in jars and tumblers.

TO STEW PEACHES.

Take small, unripe peaches, pare them neatly, put them into a kettle with water nearly to cover, and set over a gentle fire; to each quart of peaches add half pound of sugar; let them stew until the syrup is rich. Serve cold for tea or dessert.

HOUSEHOLD GLUE.

Crack up the glue and put it in a bottle; and to it common whisky; shake up, cork tight, and in three or four days it can be used. It requires no heating, will keep for any length of time, and it is at all times ready for use, except in the coldest weather, when it will require warming. It must be kept tight, so that the whiskey will not evaporate. The usual corks or stoppers should not be used. It will become clogged. A tin stopper, covering the bottle, but fitting as closely as possible, is better.

TO KEEP BUTTER SWEET IN A CASK.

A compound of one part sugar, one part nitre, and to parts of the best Spanish salt, beat together into a fine powder, and mix thoroughly with the butter in proportion of one ounce to the pound, has been found to keep the butter in every respect sweet and sound during two years that it was in the cask. It is also said to impart a rich, marrowy flavour that no other butter ever acquires, and tastes very little of the salt.

OILING HARNESS LEATHER.

Oils, when applied to dry leather, invariably injure it; and if to leather containing too much water, the oil cannot enter.—Wet the harness over night, cover it with a blanket, and in the morning it will be damp and supple; then apply neatsfoot oil in small quantities, and with so much elbow grease as will ensure its disseminating itself throughout the leather. A soft pliant harness is easy to handle, and lasts longer than a neglected one. Never use vegetable oils on leather; and among the animal oils, neatsfoot is the best.

Self will is so ardent and active that it will break a world to pieces, to make a stool to sit on.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but I did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

Look, Read, and Learn,

THAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Jose phus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic Language, we can safely say, may be applied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has incited admiration some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former Cures and celebrity, we defy human skill to equal the Shoshonees Remedy ever offered.

THE WHELAN TRIAL.

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.

John Downes sworn—Am driver for Patrick Buckley; was driving for him on the night of the 6th April; I drove Sir J. A. Macdonald to the House that night about a quarter to 8; I returned then to the stable; I know prisoner slightly; I first knew him at Quebec under the name of Sullivan about 3 years ago; saw him a couple of times in Ottawa before that night; knew him as the same; had known him in Quebec as Sullivan; the last time I saw him was near door of the Parliament House when I drove up Sir John. He was leaving—passed the door that night about 9 o'clock; after I came back from feeding my horse; he was there when I got back; he then went in; he was alone. I saw him again about an hour after; but I can't rightly say; he was coming out and went in the direction of the Russell house. I drove Sir John home that night. I saw Whelan go in again at one. He came out again; I am not sure as to the time; he stood about the door and went in again; he was not long standing; he came out again in a few minutes; the house adjourned then and I drove away; before he went in the last time I asked him if the house was near adjourning, and he said he did not know, but when he came out he said they were all cheering; Sir John and Buckley were coming out; Sir John went into the carriage and left Buckley standing; I drove away. Whelan was going down the centre walk straight down towards Wellington street. I saw no one with Whelan. That night is was the first to come out when the House adjourned. I took Sir John home to Daly street. I can't tell the distance from here; it took me about five minutes to drive there. I returned at once driving at a walk. I met people coming down from the House. It was a quarter past two, passing the clock at McGillivray's; Russell House was lighted up; Patrick Buckley was at the stable when I got there.

To Mr. M. C. Cameron—I knew prisoner in Quebec; I was driving for a man there; prisoner came to his house a couple of times; knew prisoner was a volunteer; spoke to him; think I might have spoken to him here but don't recollect; saw him first time he came out; saw him the whole time he was out. as I was sitting on box of carriage; did not notice anything suspicious in his actions; drove down by east side from the house; there were persons going down that road; prisoner was going towards Centre walk; there were other persons, possibly a dozen; they were all going together; those were going down after him; Whelan was standing about 20 yards from the Tower; he walked slowly down; my carriage was under the archway when the prisoner came out; my horses' heads were under he tower; prisoner said they were all coming out; I drew up; saw Sir John and Hereford come; it might take me, as I went back, about 15 minutes to go to Sir John's; that would make it about 2 when I left. Sullivan was the same. Knew him by it in Quebec in the cutaby. There was a sergeant boarding with the man I lived with, and he called him Sullivan.

To Mr O'Reilly—Prisoner had on a long black coat and a cap on the 6th April.

To Mr. M. C. Cameron—When I got my horses fed and was going to bed it struck three.

Wm. Graham sworn—Was employed last session as a door keeper in the Commons. My duty was to receive the tickets from those going to the public gallery.—The entrance is by the first door to the right after coming in to the main lobby.—Buckley's seat was close to it. Saw prisoner several times. He was what might be considered a general visitor during the 2nd part of last session particularly; he visited the house nightly from that time; Mrs. McGee was able to come to the house when McGee was ill. Whelan was near there; I recollect seeing prisoner there times on that night; 6 o'clock; he gave me three tickets, one each time. He went up to the gallery before a half-past nine and a quarter before 12 The first time he went up he remained about a quarter of an hour or each session; he had a general conversation with Buckley; the two appeared to be very intimate acquaintance; every time I saw him he always had an interview with Buckley before going into the gallery; they spoke in so low a voice and so low a tone that I could not hear what they said, there might be three-quarters of an hour between each time of coming down and going back; he took my attention more that night than any other; he appeared to be very much excited; he had on a black frock coat, cap and light pants; he had on a cravat with green in braid round part of it; a quarter before 12 he gave me the last ticket; that was last time I saw him; there are other passages he could make his way up, but not to this gallery; did not see McGee leave the House; don't recollect seeing him that night; but I understood he was in the House. To J. H Cameron—Don't remember if Mr. McGee was in House during first part of Session after election; don't recollect if he was present at opening of second part. He was much improved in health the second part of the session. Knew that he spoke. Said that from the time Mr. McGee was able to be in the House Whelan was a visitor. Was told that McGee addressed the House, but did not know it of own knowledge. He might have addressed the House every night, but don't know. Mr. McGee was not in the House every night the second part of the session. The description I made of the prisoner going up from time to time was wrong. Recollect his clothes perfectly.

To Mr. Cameron—Was sworn at that time that he had on a light trousers, a light coat on. Did not know what cap. Is that true, I state now what clothes he had on. It can be a mistake. Don't recollect. Had no quarrel with Buckley on or on that night we had a few words about a chair.

To Mr. O'Reilly—I gave the depositions there some here been a mistake in taking down words by the magistrate. What I state this a.m. is correct.

The clothes of the murdered man were here brought into Court; when Whelan saw them brought in he seemed fascinated and an expression almost of horror came over his face.

Detective John O'Neil sworn—Recollect the morning of Mr. McGee's assassination; it was the morning of the 7th April. Made search for the parties who committed the crime. Received information from various parties—Patrick Buckley among others—that led me to arrest prisoner at Michael Starr's tavern, Chaveau street, immediately behind the asylum. It was about half past 9 in the evening of the 7th. Am not clear as to time. I got into the house. Constable O'Keefe went to the back door. Asked his name on entering. He said James Whelan, and told him to stand up, and to raise his hands until searched. Found a box of cartridges. [Produced and shown.] Found in his right hand pocket some tickets and paper, the Irish American for the week ending March 7, 1868; green badge Toronto Hibernian Benevolent Society, established 1826, with the rosebud and shamrock on it; a card of member of St. Patrick's Benevolent Society, dues paid up to last December, the collecting Treasurer's name signed, Thos. C; ticket of the Shamrock County ball; ticket St Patrick's Society; two tickets Shamrock Quadrille Club, one blank the other admit Mr. Jas. Whelan and lady, W. D. O'Brien, Secretary and Treasurer, no date, the blank one is also signed by O'Brien. Sergt. Dave took a revolver from Whelan; saw him take it; has during there are other papers and a cleaner like a rammed taken by Donohue; the revolver was taken from outside right pocket of his coat, the cartridges in left and cleaner in breast pocket; we brought him to his room and he pointed out his clothes; there were a saddle cloth and rosaries. (Produced). The cartridges are known as the Set cartridge; are marked C. D., and are used in the Smith & Wesson's revolver. Some of them have fire, some six chambers.

Revolver produced by Davis.

F. Davis sworn—Am police officer. Was with O'Neil at Michael Starr's. Searched and found the pistol on prisoner; it was loaded. Knew prisoner. Had known him at Eggleston's, the tailor, as I had seen him working there, although I did not know his name.

O'Neil recalled—This I believe to be the revolver. Since taken out I examined it at once. Five cartridges in it appeared to have been recently put on. The top of each had fresh grease wax pressed into the chamber. Grease was not caused by the motion of the cartridge. In one chamber it was all round the ball, as it core was taken to do it. The grease is still there, the grease on the cartridge was dark as it old; the other was fresh; the interior of barrel showed recently greased, but muzzle was marked with fresh powder, as recently fired off; the one cartridge was quite different from the others. They were covered with dirt, as if not moved for some time; the teeth was clear of all dirt around the edge; there was no grease around the copper end; the flange on the one was a little thicker than on other. Dr. Van Courtland gave me a bullet and some teeth produced. I held to that bullet came from a cartridge same size as this taken from Whelan. I took prisoner to the police lock-up; told him he was seen in the gallery when House adjourned; he said he came away before it adjourned; past post office across Sapper's bridge straight down Sussex street to Starr's. He said, why should I be remarked going there that night, when I was often enough there before? He made no other statement to me.

Mr. O'Reilly produced the Irish American.

Mr. M. C. Cameron said they were in an awkward position with the amount of prejudice. It was dangerous to object to anything.

Mr. O'Reilly said he would not in the meantime produce the paper.

To Mr. M. C. Cameron. The revolver showed marks of being newly greased; I could easily tell

To Mr. O'Reilly—We also found a pair of light pants and a dark coat.

To J. H. Cameron—I assume that if a pistol is carried about the grease will be dirty; I believe marks of recently fired powder will not last over two days; I can swear positively that the grease I spoke of was not from cartridge; it must have been put in afterwards, it was evidently pressed in. Any revolver of same size would take same ball.

Sergt. Davis recalled.—I noticed the chambers of the revolver when I took it from Whelan; one had been newly put on; it could easily be moved out; the others were tightly on.

To J. H. Cameron—Showed one out entirely; after I got to the City Hall I saw the difference; traced them and found one showed easily; it is the one with a ring.

Elias Turney Rolor after being sworn, was asked as to her age, her education, if she knew her catechism, &c. She has not been to school but has learned catechism; she is about 10 years old, intelligent looking, but entirely uneducated; she said—served at Michael Starr's; recollect the time of Mr. McGee's death; went to Starr's six weeks before; knew the prisoner; he was there when I came and remained till Mr. McGee was shot; his room was the middle room, first flat up stairs; have been in that room; saw a pistol in the looking glass drawer; did not look at it particularly; saw a pistol on a chair at Whelan's bed room; Whelan was in bed and the room was more two feet; it was about half past seven in the morning; that was about a week after I came to the dressers; remember the Monday night before Whelan was arrested; Whelan went out after supper; he was dressed in light pants, black vest and black coat; had a cap on; did not see him again that night; went to bed, and saw him next morning coming down stairs between 6 and 7; breakfast is at half past seven; he took no breakfast but went out; he washed himself in the dining-room. Mr. Dillon told the cutler, girl, and Whelan that McGee was shot. Whelan said nothing. He went up stairs, dressed, and went out. Knew a person called Kitty. Starrs and he were in the bar when Whelan went in. I saw Whelan about dinner time. The back door is not fastened at night.

To M. C Cameron: Whelan asked if breakfast was ready, but took none.

Jos. Foulton, sworn—Live at Huntingdon; lived in Montreal about four years, till last March; am a tailor; know Whelan since June 1867; remember the Montreal election between Devlin and McGee; Whelan was in Montreal then; we both worked for Mr. Anderson, of St. St. James street; we used to converse occasionally. Knew McGee by sight. We used all to speak of him in the shop. Heard prisoner in speaking of him say he had deserted his principles, and he was opposed to him.—After reading a paper one day, I think a speech of McGee's, the prisoner said he was a traitor, and deserved to be shot. I was about the election times. It was about six or seven months before I left Montreal. He was always very much opposed to McGee in political principles. I heard him say McGee inoculated him when young with his principles, and now blamed him for sticking to them; remember the pic-nic after the election, a short time before the prisoner told me he was to the pic-nic; he had a pistol in his hand which he pulled out of his pocket; it was a common revolver like this shown; he took out the piste to show me; I asked him why he was going to a pleasure party with such a weapon; he said there had been a row at a pic-nic before and he might want to defend himself; he expected there would be a row on board; if not wanted they were going to land on the island and practice. In the shop the prisoner was close along side me; one of the men in the shop said, prisoner would shoot McGee with it like a rat. Nothing had led to this remark. Prisoner might not have heard it. During the election prisoner did not work much, he was chiefly attending to the election.

Mr. O'Reilly—What are prisoner's politics?

Mr. J. H. Cameron—You must show enmity against Mr. McGee.

Mr. O'Reilly—I will show that.

Mr. J. H. Cameron objected to the question.

The court said they could call the witness again.

James Inglis sworn—Live in Montreal and am a collector of accounts; know prisoner since 21st April, 1867; saw him in his own home; I boarded there; arrived here from Dundas; recollect a conversation before the election; don't remember the words that preceded, but Whelan said if McGee was elected he would not take his seat, but if he did he would not reign or keep it long; I said who would touch him? He said "I would, if nobody else would;" remember hearing the prisoner call McGee a traitor to his country; shortly before the election; he came to my room after the election; about the end of September or the first of October; he was cleaning his revolver; he said he was so far up as McGee's house last night; he left the room immediately; when the prisoner called McGee a traitor, he said after all that the Irish had done for him, he was ungrateful; recollect nothing more in way of a threat; I was at Mrs. Scanlon's on several occasions and met Whelan there; there he was playing cards; recollect New Year's night, was not living with Whelan then.

To M. C. Cameron—I was unconcerned about both parties; don't remember ever having discussed McGee with Whelan; he knew I was a Scotchman; the political feeling ran high, the candidates said hard things of each other; heard a good many things said against McGee; did not attach much importance to what prisoner said.

To Mr. O'Reilly—Never heard Whelan make any other threats.

Mr. O'Reilly (interrogatively) Never? Be careful.

Witness—never.

Leon Digues sworn—Work at the Rideau; remember the morning McGee was murdered; don't know the day; saw the body on the side walk; it was about three o'clock in the morning; was going to Chaudiere; I had gone to Lepierre's, and was there a good while; had no sleep that night; met a man on the bridge walking very fast; it was dark, but it looked to be Lacroix; would not like to swear positively; thought from his appearance it was Lacroix; had known him before; as I passed Trotter's they were picking up the man.

To Mr. J. H. Cameron—I saw Germain at Lepierre's; there were two or three others; I came up Sussex street; met nobody till I got to the bridge; when I passed I thought it was Lacroix whom I had met, and was sorry I had not said good morning.

Mrs. McKenna, sworn.—Live opposite Mrs. Trotter's; know prisoner by sight; saw him first with Doyle, now a prisoner; they stayed in my bar nearly two hours about three weeks before the murder; the following night but one or two Whelan came in to wait for Doyle; he remained till about eleven o'clock; went out two or three times; told him did not think Doyle coming at that time of night; the night following he came very late, after twelve; the place was shut, but he came in by the side door; he remained till about two o'clock, he said that parliament had closed at twenty minutes past twelve; some thing he said to the girl frightened her, and she ran off to bed, while I was out of the room; he did not go out till he finally left, that was, I think, the Thursday preceding the murder.

Alex. J. Turner sworn—Lived in Montreal last year; was employed in the St. Lawrence Hall; became acquainted with Bernard Feeney in the fall of 1866; went to board at prisoner's house; have been to Whelan's company; was at the time with prisoner; before the election I heard threats used at Mr. McDonald's, St. Lawrence Hotel, Main street, by prisoner; he said he would as soon take McGee's life as take a glass of rum; he said this at his own house while reading McGee's speech about the Fenians; the prisoner seemed very much enraged and had some words with his wife; he said he would go up and blow McGee's bloody brains out; he had a revolver at this time; he went out that night and returned the following day; I saw prisoner at Pork's restaurant; he said he had been up to McGee's house the night previous and that Enright was with him; he did not say for what; saw McGee pass on Notre Dame street in a carriage a few days after the election; was alone at the time; he said it was a good job McGee's brains was not in flames last night; heard him threaten the life of McGee again in his own house after the election; he said although McGee was elected the bloody old pig would not reign long. I will blow his bloody brains out before the session is over; he gave no reason; told McGee in Notre Dame street of the feeling of Whelan to him; said there were parties accumulated in Scanlon's who threatened to do him bodily harm, if they did not intend to kill; he asked if they were interested in Devlin; I said yes; he said only election excitement, it would blow over, but to tell him if anything more happened; did not see him again till I saw him speaking in the House of Commons; heard prisoner say McGee received money from the Fenians, but the bloody old pig was a traitor to his country, and turned over to the Protestants; believe Kenealla saw me speak to McGee. Was then called an informer. Mentioned to Kenealla that prisoner would get himself into trouble if anything happened to McGee. Met him at the Russell House. Was called an informer by Murphy. Know a person named Doyle. He was a client of Whelan's. He lived in the Russell House. Saw them together in Montreal; there was great intimacy between them; left Montreal for Ottawa in November; saw prisoner here in December or end of November; remember him going to Montreal in December after christmas; recollect when he returned; I was then in Russell house; Whelan came several times to see Doyle; have seen them in close conversation in the passage to the glass parting at the head of the dining room; he came probably a dozen times; Doyle asked Whelan if he had been up to D'Arcy McGee's; prisoner said yes; that was after New Year; Doyle said did D'Arcy open the door; prisoner said no by J——s, for if he had I would shoot the b——r like a dog; he said McGee's brother opened the door and took him up stairs, but the bloody bastard locked the door before he let him up.—Prisoner told McGee he had come to give information about some one who was going to set fire to his house on the following morning. He said McGee gave him a letter. He told McGee that they opened the bloody letter and had a good laugh at it before they took it to the police station. Doyle then saw me looking through the chink of the door, and ceased talking about McGee. I went out. Doyle and prisoner reddened up in the face. Am from London. Am here two years, I was in India as a soldier. Left the service and returned to London. Was between 15 and 16 years old when I enlisted. Was in the service about 4 years when discharged on account of sickness. Was at Lucknow.

To M. C. Cameron—Am now 24 Joined in 1858. My discharge is with my mother. Did not care to bring my discharge. Brought no certificates. (The cross-examination related to witness's past history.) I had not left St. Lawrence Hall when the conversation spoken of took place. Boarded with Whelan from July, 1867. Boarded no where else in Montreal. Was dismissed from St. Lawrence Hall on account of a quarrel with the head waiter. Macy Johnson, Jas. Inglis, a book keeper, and another man, a shoemaker, but don't know their names, were, besides myself, boarding at Whelan's. I was there week's at prisoner's before I got into the Ottawa Hotel. After that I boarded there and only slept at prisoner's. The night of the conversation at McDonald's we went there from the theatre. I believe the prisoner got half a dollar from his wife to go. We met a man named Kelly going there. All three went to McDonald's after the theatre. I don't know the date. It was before the election. We had some drinks. Whelan was under the influence of liquor. They got talking about the election. I was not interested in the election although was glad McGee got in. Believe McGee's name was spoken of in the theatre. They were playing a game and prisoner was talking, when a man behind said, "hush."—Prisoner turned round and choked him, and a friend of the man that was getting choked said 'take care, that's some o. Devlin's men" referring to the prisoner. In McDonald's the prisoner spoke of his wife, and said he loved dearly a young girl in Quebec, but that he did not care for life and would as soon take McGee's life as a cup of tea. We went home about four o'clock. I was not angry. There were others in the bar. Prisoner and I were in a separate room. The next threats that were made use of were in Whelan's own house, close on election time; it was between 7 and 8 in the evening. (The witness emphatically repeated that the prisoner threatened, immediately after reading a speech of McGee's, that he would go up and blow his brains out.) Was asked if I gave information to the authorities, and said no; had told the same now in his grave. (Deposition read). Said on the morning of murder, "Good God that must be no one but Whelan."

The counsel, taking the deposition, pointed out that nothing was said of this, or the letter, or Doyle and Whelan talking about it, although John McGee was examined before him.

AFTER RECESS.

Cross-examination resumed—It was between 12 and 1 o'clock in the afternoon when the conversation between Doyle and the prisoner took place; they stopped talking when Doyle saw me; they turned all colours when they saw me; there are two doors to the glass pantry; it was through the door leading to the passage I saw them, they were not speaking loud, but I could hear them as soon as I went in to wash my hands. Heard McGee's name mentioned and that attracted my attention; had gone in quietly; there are different ways to get to the passage; it was from the dining room I went to the pantry; did not see them going to the passage; don't know how long they were there; there is a kind of head waiter there (Dorin) who has lodgings; Doyle and Kenrick and myself lodged there; have seen persons about the pantries besides waiters; was in P. Egleson's on Tuesday morning; don't think Whelan was then arrested. Know Patrick Egleson. Was not there on Wednesday. Think I would be sorry to say poor Jim had been arrested. Did not explain it was James Whelan I meant. Said nothing about the reward. Said a thing in reference to Doyle giving evidence, and the prospect of his getting a large sum of money, neither to White, Russel, Gebbing, nor Egleson. Nothing about $16,000 being given to Doyle, and that he could leave the country, and that it was a large sum. Did not wish to get into the case. Would give £200 now to get out of it. Merely told what I was questioned about. Said nothing about the county conversation, but spoke of it to Buckley and Bernham. Before I gave evidence, told Burnham and Buckley that I lived in Whelan's, and believed no man but he committed the murder. Did not give details of the conversation. Told Burnham on the morning of the murder. He told me first of the murder, and I made an exclamation. The detail of examination I only gave to O'Reilly. Said nothing of details till after John McGee's evidence. Was too frightened to say much about it.

To Mr. O'Reilly—Only answered the questions at the examination. The play at the theatre was Arrah Na Pogue. There was something about men hanged for wearing the green, and that roused the prisoner and he throttled a man for calling "hush!" Whelan called at McDonald's and spoke about a young lady he was in love with in Quebec; the photograph produced represents myself, Inglis, Geo. Paine, the prisoner, Paine's wife and the her young lady; at McDonald's prisoner was about half gone, but knew what he was saying.

Vaughan Bryce, sworn—Was here in April last; came in November; knew prisoner about 18 months before the murder; knew him in Quebec and Montreal; was a messenger in the House of Commons; saw prisoner there; did not see him on Monday night before the murder of McGee; on Thursday previous saw him in the House; he was standing at the door talking to Pat Buckley about McGee; had seen him previously in the House several times. Saw the case in the bar of the Senate with Buckley, eight or ten days previous to the murder. Think another messenger went with me. Was in the House on Monday night till adjournment. Lodged at Buckley's. Waited a little for John Buckley. He, Pat Buckley, Frechette and myself left together about five minutes after adjournment. Witness described route taken as other witnesses. It was about half-past three when I heard of the murder.

To Hon. J. H. Cameron—Wore black coat, trousers and cap on the night of the murder.

To Mr. O'Reilly—Saw prisoner at Pat Buckley's house on Sunday. He was engaging a buggy. It was after St. Patrick's day.

Reuben Ward sworn—Lived in Montreal. Lived in London last year. Was constable, station master and detective. Was in Montreal last December, on my way back from Nova Scotia. Stopped at Michael Duggan's house, corner of Mondelet and William streets. Two entrances to the house. (Sketch produced, prepared by witness.) That represents the house. Private entrance on William street, shop entrance on corner. Was there a few days. Formed an intimacy with Duggan. He kept a grocery and groggery. Was a grocer. Don't recollect seeing Duggan at home for two or three days. When first went was about 17th December. Four rooms up stairs, one sitting and three bed rooms. They all entered off sitting room. Saw prisoner there on night of 21st December, about seven, after ten. There were two others besides the prisoner and landlord. Was reading. They were in conversation. The landlord said, as he warmed up, that but there been a few more like my brother John, he could not have been returned. Prisoner then spoke up warmly and said that government money won the election. Only for government money McGee never could have been elected. Saw nobody named Smith, of the Grand Trunk, there. Prisoner said D'Arcy had sold his friends—those who did so much for him and put so much confidence in him—like a dog, and said he must and shall have satisfaction out of him; what could I not be done there must be done somewhere else or elsewhere; he might hire to see the new year come in but not pass out. One of the strangers, clapping him on the shoulder, said, "Such here is our man, he's sound on the goose, not a better man can be had for the job." He called prisoner Smith on that occasion. They were close together. The conversation was carried on in a lower tone after that; did not catch more then; the landlord and a man with a fair complexion and large nostrils took the principle share in the conversation; they had two glasses of spirits each; they seemed rather warm when they came in; there was another man with light brown hair, whiskers somewhat red, with a kind of oval face, large eyes I think inclined to blue, it was he who slapped Whelan on the shoulders; they met again next night, prisoner included; there was another one besides them; they talked of election matters, the landlord said "My brother John thinks two should go in, and two or three stop out;" something was said about taking different directions; the next I knew from the man with extended nostrils was "D'Arcy, poor devil, if he only knew the fate that awaits him he would fly, and not the first time time either;" the conversation then turned to Fenian delegates; there was nothing said then about Sullivan; on Tuesday, 23th, about same time, the parties came again, the same four and another; in a conversation about the Orange Hall, one of the men present on Sunday night said, "Sullivan, how was that job at the Orange Hall done?" the landlord interrupted him and said, "Why sometimes call him Sullivan and sometimes Smith, when you know his name is Whelan?" the prisoner replied it was done at or under the foot of the stairs. One of the men who fired came on Tuesday evening and said I had not heard before how it was done. Left on Friday following, on my arrival at London communicated the matter to Hon. J. Carling by letter on Monday morning. Was afraid trouble would grow out of what I heard. Reached home Saturday evening.

To J. H. Cameron—Have been in London about eight years. Unfortunately an Englishman. Was Station master on Great Western at Lynden in 1857—8. Was about two years there. Went to London into the lumber business. Took up detective business from early boyhood. Was employed as detective on Great Western Railroad. Was seven or eight years in their employment altogether. Was first in the lumber business. For about six years was County constable of Kent and Middlesex. Was sworn before John Walker, at Chatham, in 1865. Am still on the roll. Have not done service for the last two years in Middlesex, but have in Kent. In July 1867 went to Halifax. Remained about two months. Went to St John, N. B. for two or three weeks. Came on to Grand Rapids and River du Loup. Remained a few days in Quebec. On the morning of 17th December reached Montreal; that forenoon went to Duggan's; was not directed there; found the place when looking for lodgings; did not see the prisoner till the evening of the 21st, either on Friday or Saturday; had a long conversation with the landlord; the prisoner and the landlord are the only two whose names I know; only prisoner's name was mentioned. The room was about 16 by 17 feet. There was only a table in it. We seated there reading. There seemed at first a little shadow when they first came in, till the landlord said he's all right. The conversation between the landlord and me. Heaven forbid it, should have lead to this remark. They spoke very shy. Heard every now and then as they warmed up.—They were less on their guard on subsequent occasions. Wrote two sides of foolscap to Mr. Carling about the matter.—Don't think I saw him in London. Wrote to him.

To Mr. O'Reilly—Have been from early youth a constable in England. Have a certificate from Lord Norbury and two from Mr. Denison, Speaker of House of Commons.

Witness produced a large lot of testimonials bearing distinguished names. Had names of parties in England and here. Had conversation with Duggan on Saturday.

Andrew Cullen sworn—Have been detective in the city of Montreal for 3 years next November. As detective was here the day after the death of McGee. Got news about six in the morning. Reached here by afternoon train. Was present at the arrest of Whelan, with O'Neil. Have been in Ottawa gaol and through corridors. Know corridor and cell where prisoner is confined. Is first to left as go in. The prisoner corridor is at side of building.—The cells are to the left of window. His cell is at east end. Examined cell of prisoner, the turnkey of gaol being with me. Whelan and a prisoner named Doyle, were in the cell or in the corridor. Whelan was nearest the door. Doyle seven feet off. Outside is a landing. At head of stairs an iron door between the corridors and landing. Another at head of stairs.—On that landing you could go within two and a half or three feet from him. On the evening of the 10th of April heard a conversation between Doyle and Whelan.—Here with me. Remained from half-past five to 6. When there prisoner and Doyle conversed. Doyle said "James, I'm sorry you've done it." Whelan said, "don't care a damn, I'm prepared for the worst, I'll either swing or go to Penitentiary for life, don't care a damn only for one thing." Doyle asked "what was that."—Whelan made allusion to the old woman, and said "the bloody guts would fall out of her." Doyle said, "the whole world will know it. Whelan answered 'yes, I'm a great fellow, I shot that fellow, you are here, poor bugger, and here am I, which makes three of us.' Doyle said 'what's that.' I was standing with my boots off expecting he would repeat the same thing. I nodded to the man that was with me as Whelan repeated 'I shot the fellow like a dog,' adding 'I'm a great fellow, my name will go down to posterity.' Doyle then said 'I'm sorry for you.' I forget, till reminded by Doyle, that he said also "I'm sorry you did not tell me you were going to do it, and I would not have let you."—They then talked over little matters.—Whelan was asleep three quarters of an hour. Before I left could hear him breathing—snoring—he would go to bed, more shortly after, and again jump up. Made a minute immediately after coming down stairs, both of us together. I signed it.—(minute produced and identified.) Don't recollect any other conversation.

To J. H Cameron—Believe the handwriting to the sheriff's. Believe it was he took down the notes. Was three hours up. Believe the prisoners were not aware we were there. The conversation was in scotches. It began so soon as the sound of the footsteps of Doyle died away. There were long silences. So far as we could recollect, that was what we heard. If fresh from hearing it could recollect more. I now remember more. Whelan said 'I don't care about anything but my poor mother, and there is more of us in trouble, my brothers are in for Fenianism, for firing at the Police barracks, Celbght, Ireland.' He then mentioned about Turner swearing bad agent ion. That he swore they were all Fenians, and there were fourteen witverage, he said also that I was covered by a fellow in Gentleman at Guernsey gaves— You the same man as was shot by Garner, Don't know where he is. Both accounts were the same I gave of the shooting.— Received $500 from Mr. Devlin on that account. He is now here. The first words Whelan said 'are you there John?' I was sailed very tight to-day. Do you know who was the informer? It was Mick Turner, Doyle said 'No' on a loud voice. Whelan said 'Yes, by Jesus Christ I would'nt give much for his carcass for that. Another voice called out loud from the other corridor. "Whelan, how did you get on to-day?" Whelan called out in a loud slow tone, "bloody bad;" the answer. "I'm sorry to hear it;" Whelan then said to the voice, "I had a nod from you to-day, the voice asked 'Are you sure?' Whelan called 'yes,' and added, 'you must keep on quiet as a mouse for me.' Do you understand;' the voice said 'yes.' That finished the conversation, but I heard Whelan tell Doyle that he saw Mitchell's brother to-day. He also said to Doyle, 'John, you and me must quit talking about what we know; we must be quite as mice because these detectives might be round listening.' Doyle began talking what he done said said. 'I wonder what they will do with me? Whelan said 'I guess are all right. They can't prove anything against you. I wish I was as safe as you. They will only keep you a week or fortnight.' Doyle said, 'I want to buy wife and two children do?'— Whelan said 'they would be all right, as that would get his pension.' Doyle said 'no!' Whelan said 'they would be all right, I'se as long as his (Whelan's) wife has a bit or sup she would share with Doyle and his family.' There may be more in the paper than I have stated but don't know.

Sheriff Powell sworn—Selected Detective Cullen as the most competent I could find, and with him placed a prisoner named Hess, employed occasionally as turnkey, to listen to any conversation. After they came down I committed to writing what they said, word for word.

To M. C. Cameron—Hess was committed for assault for twelve months. He was allowed out for the purposes of labor during his term of imprisonment. He was out from day to day. He has been in the yard in the employment of the governor of the gaol. Am not aware he has been at large within the town.

To Mr. O'Reilly—Had the authority at the Minister of Justice to employ this man to any capacity named.

Robert Hess, sworn—On the 13th of April, about half past five, I was left with Cullen when the turnkeys went away in the corridor near Whelan' Was about 12 inches from Whelan. (He corroborated generally Cullen's statement.) Had personal conversation with Whelan in the corridor. He asked if any prisoners had come in. I said some for drunkenness. I said 'Whiskey in the dark;' if it were not for whiskey I would not have shot Darcy M'Gee."

Sensation in court.

To Mr. K. McKenzie—Was in for assault. Was in 13 months and 8 days altogether. Was allowed to go out occasionally, I believe for my good conduct. Was only in for striking a fellow. Was two or three times at the Sheriff's. Was allowed to go out before Whelan came and since. Used to work in shanties. Have not been working since I came out of gaol. The Sheriff went security for my clothes. First time I saw Whelan was when he was brought to gaol from the court house. Was told to go to the corridor, and the Governor of the jail pointed out were I was to stand. Cullen then took off his boots at the head of the staircase for fear of being heard. The Governor and turnkeys went into the corridor, we came behind and waited. I was standing when I heard. I had been in the corridor that day putting in Doyle's bed. I had to bring in their meals. When Whelan and Doyle spoke I knew Whelan's voice. I had heard him speak before. I had seen Whelan put into the cell, although I could not see him in it. I know Casey, a prisoner. I never told him I had been prosecuted a stranger if I would swear against Whelan. Have had no particular conversation with Townsend about the trial. I never said that I would have to stretch Whelan's neck or my own would not be safe. Have not yet lost my head to make such a statement at that. I knew Brown, a prisoner. Did not tell him I was promised a suit of clothes to give evidence.

There was a good deal of badgering about what Whelan said regarding Turner, but nothing shook the testimony.

To Mr. O'Reilly—I have wrought as an engineer. Took charge of the gaol engine for the Government without pay. My clothes were worn out in the service, and the County Council allowed me some. I had to get clothes as I did not like to go out naked. (Laughter in court.)

John Little Ferguson, sworn—Was employed in April in the gaol here. Prisoner's cell was at the upper end of the corridor. Heard a conversation on Saturday, 19th April, between half past eight and ten in the evening, between Whelan and Doyle. Doyle asked Whelan was he sheeping. He said no, he was thinking about his trial, and Whelan said, "There were three of us, but I alone was present when I murdered McGee." Doyle asked where the other two were. Whelan said, "The other two skedaddled, and had I not been half tight I would have done so too."

To J. H. Cameron—On that particular occasion I was placed on detective duty. At the time there was no other turnkey but myself in the corridor. I saw no light there.

John McLaughlin recalled—On the day Mr. McGee was buried John McGee said that the photograph of Whelan was that of the man who called at his brother's house. Noticed when I went home that the envelope containing the letter from Mr. McGee had been tampered with before it was brought to me. That morning information was given of an intended attack on Mr. McGee's house. My attention had not been directed to it before.

Francis Kerby sworn—Heard of the murder of Mr. McGee at half-past two in the morning. About half an hour after I went to Michael Starr's. That was about a quarter to six. Whelan was there. I told Starr of Mr. McGee's murder. Prisoner was standing in the middle of the bar room. We spoke of how it could have been done. I said "the man who could do the treacherous deed should have been torn limb from limb." Prisoner gave a wheel round on one foot. His face had a strange expression, a grinning smile, and he asked for something to drink. He had on a black frock coat, and lightish pants. He had I could not say was on. That was a quarter to six. The bells were ringing at when I left. Then closed the case for the crown, and the court adjourned.

THE CASE.

It is generally acknowledged that Mr. O'Reilly made a distinguished appearance. His conduct of the case was splendid.— There is a picturesque completeness about the whole that strikes the imagination.— Every witness brought clinching evidence of the fearless and prepossessing to Euclid. He has had a herculean task, but shirked it admirably, coolly, and dispassionately. Cullen floored Mr. Hillyard Cameron today. There was a dead stillness while Cullen was giving his evidence, and his solemn voice, with a ring in touch of eloquence was very effective. The cross-examination of Mr. Hillyard Cameron tried to break Cullen down, but only added Whelan's coffin lighter. Two or three times a shudder ran through the court at parts of the evidence.

THE EVIDENCE FOR THE DEFENCE.

On Friday, Kate Scanlon was sworn—Keeps a grocery and bar in Montreal; she knew Whelan and Turner; they both met to drink at her place; never heard the prisoner threaten McGee.

Mr. O'Gara, Police magistrate of Ottawa, also gave evidence, but nothing except in reference to the evidence taken at the inquest.

Michael Carey's evidence was principally intended to weaken or destroy that of Hess. Carey heard Hess say when Whelan objected to his bringing in bread with dirty hands, that it was good enough for him, for he would get his bloody neck stretched one of these days.

James Young, a Scotchman, of Montreal, was sworn, but gave no material evidence.

Jas. Sherry's evidence was of trifling import except in reference to his not having received any money from Mr. O'Farrell.

John Canty sworn—Knew Hess for 13 years; went to see him in jail. He was a murderer, and was only flesh and blood like other human beings, not very strong nor very wicked.

John Wethers, a Junor, had heard of Hess in Golbourne where he had worked. Knew nothing bad of him about truth; never spoke to him.

James Dunn, knew Whalen, but not well; knew Turner; had made experiments as to hearing at the pantry of the Russell House; none of the waiters could hear; repeated the experiment at the wish of Mr. Cameron. First made Whalen's acquaintance in 1867. He slept once in my house for about 2 hours. Had sent refreshment to one of the prisoners, but not to Whalen.

Jas. Fitzgerald, one of those that tried the experiment at the glass pantry, but could not hear the waiters speaking in a low tone. This witness also knew Whalen from staying at his house in Montreal.

Richard Quinn, knew Whalen, and saw him in the gallery on the night of the murder; they went out together when the House adjourned, and saw him go towards the East of the city. This witness did not know Whalen before he came to Ottawa. Had heard that McGee was to speak. He saw Whalen about three quarters of an hour afterwards; Whalen stayed till the House adjourned. This witness swore that Whalen did not leave his seat till the adjournment, but also says that as soon as out he ran home to bed. Witness was in the United States ten months. He reads Fenian papers; his mother takes them.

Alfred Brown, swears to the pests near Mrs. Trotter's place, and to the gateway, but thinks it was at that night.

There was then an adjournment granted in order to get the evidence of Mitchell, formerly of Toronto but just now living in Cincinnatti, and during the recess the jury visited the scene of the murder and the places referred to in the evidence.

Mitchell's evidence— Was arrested for Fenianism, but was released; recollected the conversation between Whalen and Doyle in the jail. The prisoner and Doyle were in the next corridor. He did not know whether they were locked up or not. It was about six o'clock, or between 5 and 6 o'clock; could hear plainly what was said in the adjoining corridor; was kept in the corridor 4 hours was not locked up at the time. I stood close to the door and could hear voices in the corridor. A question was asked by Doyle, "How did you get on to day?" Whalen replied "I planned bad; that fellow, Turner was bad against me. If I could get a good jury all would be right." Doyle asked what would become of him. Prisoner answered. "They can do nothing with you, if those beggars would only keep quiet"— Slattery was in the corridor with me and asked the same question. He repeated what he said to Doyle. He asked Slattery who was in with him. He replied one Mitchell. Whalen said, "poor beggar." Immediately after this Whalen whistled and sang a song which lasted for about ten minutes only. Did not last for hours. I never heard him (the prisoner) admit that he shot Mr. McGee. If he had said so I would have heard it. The prisoner said Turner had sworn damned hard against him. I took the oath of allegiance in 1865. I refused to take the oath then because at the time of the Fenian raid, Mr. Cumberland insisted, and orders to that effect would not be obeyed I therefore refused. A. H. Baxter subsequently took my oath of allegiance. I considered it an indignity to put on Catholics, and therefore refused.

Alex. Powell, governor of jail, examined by Mr. O'Reilly—I am governor of the jail, County of Carleton. I recollect the evening of the 17th of April. I locked up the prisoners in the corridor opposite the prisoner at the bar at half-past five. I locked them up this early because I intended to place Cullen and Hess on particular duty. I saw Mitchell locked up before I placed Cullen and Hess in the passage. Mitchell was in his cell before I placed Cullen and Hess on special duty. I kept no memorandum, but swear positively that they were locked up.

Cross-examined by Mr. M. C. Cameron—It was about half-past five when Cullen and Hess entered. I instructed them positively to wait, and Mr. McEwan locked the other corridor. There were two in Whelan's corridor and four or five in the other, among them Slatter and Mitchell. I had a conversation with Mitchell and Slattery. Don't recollect the nature of the conversation. Did not say much to any of them. Recollect saying "good evening" to Mitchell and Slattery. Recollect they were locked up, whether few or many. The object of locking them up earlier was to place men on a particular duty. I specially superintend the locking up of the prisoners, but as I had matters to attend to and am my own judge in locking up, I take my own time, and generally make my regulations. I don't think they could possibly easily engage footsteps of Cullen or Hess. It was my own planning to get the evidence out. I was been carrying out this a week before the Sheriff knew anything of my proceedings. I had Hess frequently in the corridors during the day, but that first occasion I wanted to strengthen Hess' testimony by Cullen will explain my reasons. There were some songs sung; one about bloody D'Arcy M'Gee and another on "beat to jail for wearing of the green." These song, with another in Irish and conversations were overheard at different times by Hess and myself, and I thought it important that Cullen should hear all these tis, so as to corroborate Hess' testimony. I have a diary of the date of the singing of these songs. (The judge's memorandum was here, at the Messrs. Cameron's request, handed over by Mr. O'Reilly and submitted to the witness, who read it and was identified.)

W. McEwan, turnkey, sworn—I recollect the evening when Cullen and Hess were put in the corridor prisoners. About half-past five. I locked the corridor door locked up at half-past five o'clock. The first that was the one locked first. It was locked for the particular purpose of placing Cullen and Hess there on special duty. The corridor opposite that in which the prisoner was was the one first locked. The prisoner and his companion were locked up in the cells. The two corridors were locked about the same time.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1868.

WHELAN GUILTY.

This celebrated trial was brought to an end on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, the jury returning a verdict of "guilty." This is just as the public mind expected. The evidence taken at the inquest fully warranted the people to look for conviction. That evidence was not in any respect different from what was given at the late trial. To Whelan's antecedents and the antecedents of his family this is a fitting finale. There can be little doubt in the minds of those who have read the evidence but that the jury rendered a true verdict. This Whelan acknowledges, when he said that had he been in their place he could not have done otherwise than they did. J. H. Cameron addressed the jury in a speech of over 2 hours, leaving nothing undone that could reasonably be done for the prisoner. O'Reilly, in his address, remarked that herculean efforts had been made to save the man who cut down one of the foremost men of the land, but the facts could not be removed. He had dogged his footsteps from Montreal to Ottawa and from Ottawa to Montreal. He is at Ottawa with the pistol loaded, beside his bed loaded, carried about loaded, in his pocket at the parliament building, and all without any fear of injury to himself, all pointing strongly to him as the intended murderer, Men were bound to go and swear anything required for the small sum of $5, but all has proved of no avail. He now awaits the penalty of the law, the sentence is that he is hanged on the 10th of December. We cannot afford space to give the speeches of the Counsel and of the Judge. The Judge's summing up of evidence and his own remarks occupied six hours. Before the sentence was passed Whelan made a speech of 20 minutes duration, in which he declared his innocence, and the wrongs of Ireland, and tried to advance religious feeling on his behalf, until stopped by the Judge. We are informed that when he returned to jail he danced and sung, and appeared to glory in his position. We trust that this will prove not true; we could not expect to find the man so lost to everything human as to act in this way.

The exhibition of the beautiful paintings of scenes of Bible history, and Bible subjects last night in Hill's Music Hall attracted a large crowd. The paintings are consid'ered excellent—deserving of the highest praise. Each scene affords a vivid representation on which the eye rests with pleasure, while the mind is borne in bringing up the incidents connected therewith.— All who can should avail themselves of the opportunity to see them. In addition pieces are distributed to the audience.

Rice Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges.

The Committee met yesterday to open the tenders for the above bridges. There were present in addition to the Committee, Messrs. Cluxton and Graham as follows:—

Wm. Dobbin, $28 per rod or about	$11,231
Craigie & Stevenson	12,000
Gilbert Turk	10,300
Angus Williams	12,000
Wm. Wynn	16,464
Jas. Walsh	15,000
Wm. Clarke	13,700
Thos. Martin	14,000
Wm. Tremain, for the Mud Lake Bridge	6,000

We understand that the committee one template changing the place of crossing Pigeon Creek, and we are informed that by doing so the cost of the Pigeon Creek bridge would be reduced to one fourth of the Engineer's estimates at the place first spoken of. We are also told that the road through Hamilton would not require so much outlay to make it passable as the one first projected, while the entire distance to Bobcaygeon would not be materially increased. If this be so the bridge will be immediately proceeded with as the $10,000 granted by town and county, and the $1,000 granted by Hamilton would be sufficient to warrant the committee to go on with the work. There are no doubts but that Messrs. Grant & York's tender will be accepted. Mr. Grant gave such general satisfaction in the erection of the new Jail that the committee know with whom they have to deal, and that they can rely on the contract being completed as agreed.

GRAND TABLEAUX.

The Town Council has become somewhat notorious of late for the rich scenes that take place in the meetings of that august body but public opinion yields the palm to Monday night last.

The Railway Company finding that one or two of the Councillors would be unable to attend, rallied their forces, and amidst strange confusion of tongues, succeeded in carrying the By-law permitting the company or their lessees to continue and construct the road upon and along Bethune street.— There could not be a greater piece of injustice perpetrated than is there forced on those ratepayers on that street; their property will be materially de eriorated in value on account of the road along the centre of the street; respectable families will not be found willing to rent property on that street, and their rate of insurance will be increased on account of the increased risk, and yet the Council, in the face of all this, and in the face of petitions from every ward in town against running the road unless damages are guaranteed, take advantage of the absence of some of their number, grant the utmost demands of the company and their lessee. If this proposed extension only crossed a street or two, very little could be said against it, but even then, damages to property should be paid; as it is it will run along the street to the foot of Smithdown Hill de-troying the frontage of all the lots on the whole route; and the men who grant this praise to be acting for the interest of the town, while they vote to destroy their property without granting remuneration. The citizens of Peterboro have often had reason to complain of the acts of the Council, but we do not remember of a greater outrage ever transacted by that honorable body.— We, by all means, wish to see justice done to the company, but let no injustice be done to citizens for the company's sake. We are informed that some of the champions of the railroad were willing to show fight in the Council room. We have often heard of a 6-tooth for honor, for amusement, and for fun, but very few skilled in the pugilistic art stand on their muscle or nought. Some wag thinks the noughts had a few units as backers that would account for the holy ire.

BUCKLEY AND DOYLE.

True bills have been found against Patrick Buckley and Doyle, for being accessories before the act to the death of Mr. McGee. This will not fail to give general satisfaction in the country. A verdict of "guilty" against them would be as generally looked for as was against Whalen. Buckley appears to have been on terms of intimacy with the murdered man all the while the plot was being laid for the foul deed, and at the same time was giving Whalen every opportunity of making observations and laying his plans to take away the life of the innocent man. A despatch to the Toronto Telegraph of the 12th instant says:—

Patrick Buckley and Doyle were arraigned after the other proceedings. On being brought in dock Buckley was dreadfully excited. His bearing was like that of a man out of his senses. When the indictment was read over, he cried out "My God! to think I would hurt the man who was the darling of my heart! The man that I loved like my own soul? I call God and Heaven to witness, I would not hurt a hair of his head! The man I loved above all others! He was my friend and I was his!" Below down here, being thoroughly prostrated. The tones of his voice were most pitiful. Doyle looked a poor craven creature and, whining out, "Oh! my God! Sure I know nothing about the man! Sure I wouldn't hurt a hair of his head! I fought for my Queen and country, and ought'nt to be placed here now charged with a crime like this!" Being asked by the court if he had any counsel he said, "Sure I don't care. I know I'm innocent. I don't care what they do with me."

The pleas of not guilty were entered up, and further consideration postponed till Monday, prisoner's counsel not being present.

Very few were in court, but those present could not help showing their disgust at Buckley, who was so insolent and defiant in April, last, and who, when in the witness box then, snapped his fingers at everybody.

Mr. Weller for Crown; S. Smith for defence.

The Queen vs. Robert O'Brien, for stabbing. The prisoner, arriving at Peterboro in a drunken spree, stabbed Joe Mulligan in a tavern or grocery. Weller for Crown; S. Smith for defence. Guilty. Sentenced to one month in jail.

The Queen vs. James Kerr—Kerr, in connection with a swamp gang, was charged with having robbed an old man named Kendrick, on the 8th of June last, of $15.25 in one handkerchief and 17 or 18 cents in another handkerchief. The old man Kendrick, gave his evidence in his own way, evidently having arranged the whole to the force of an address to the court and jury, to the no small amusement of all in the house. There is little doubt but that he told the truth, and was corroborated by two boys who saw the affair, but as there were others present, Ann Brennan and Joseph Sutleff, a discharged soldier, who swore they saw differently from what the old man did, the jury rendered a verdict of "not guilty." Mr. Weller for the Crown; T. M. Fairbairn for the prisoner.

Then followed the Queen vs. Peter Cunion, who was charged with the same act, of robbing the man Kendrick. Mr. Smith defended the prisoner Cunion, and during the trial the whole Court House were kept in one continued outburst of laughter at the old man and the Learned Counsel, in cross-examining him to amuse the house, annoy the counsel, and extend the time of the trial, and not to have side-arms about him, he gave the Learned Counsel some sharp practice. The same evidence was given as in the preceding case, Cunion, Kerr, Ann Brennan, Ma y Fells, Sutleff, and a woman claiming to be his wife, and some others, all being present when the robbery was committed. The jury however, brought in a verdict of "not guilty." Old Kendrick deserved to suffer, as there are strong reasons to fear that more than pious motives induced him to visit the "canal" on the 8th of June. Cunion and Kerr, however, should learn a lesson from the late trial and choose better company in future.

The Queen vs. Robert Northcott and Wm. Yelland, for a "nuisance." The crime being that Messrs. Northcott and Yelland saw fit to fence in their own lots, south of the town, and thereby stop a by-way that has been used for travel for some time. Verdict "not guilty."

This finished the criminal cases. The only civil case not before given, was Eason vs. Landrigan, for the amount of a promissory note. W. H. Scott for plaintiff; Weller & Hatton for defendant. Verdict for plf. $108 subject to points reserved.

The Town Council of Port Hope voted a bonus of $30,000 to the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company, on Monday evening, for the purpose of extending the road to Beaverton; this sum to be paid out of the harbour debentures. In Lindsay we understand the threat is held out that if you do not give $50,000 to the extension we will build the extension from Beaverton to Mud Lake, and take all the trade that way. That is as much as saying if we extend from Lindsay to Beaverton we will not extend from Peterboro to Mud Lake. The fact is both Peterboro and Lindsay are at the mercy of the Company and their clique, and may look out for a leeching.

EARTHQUAKE.

A frightful earthquake occurred on the Western Coast of South America on the 13th to 22nd of August, during which towns and cities were levelled to the ground. Many persons were killed, and about 300,000 left homeless. A correspondent of the New York Herald says:—

"We were safely anchored in the bay, when suddenly a shock was felt which made us all believe we had got upon a rock. The passengers, terrified, came crowding around me and wanted to know what was the matter. The next moment our vessel shook and trembled as if it had been made of India rubber, and almost at the same time we were thrown all our feet to the deck. I was just asking our agents to come along with me and take a glass of brandy and water to recompose himself, when our chains snapped asunder like thin wire and the receding water carried us out to sea. We had with great steam up to make an attempt to escape but the next moment an enormous wave swept us resistlessly towards the shore and threw us clear over the cliff into the channel beyond. Not till then we succeeded in making our escape, which was truly a miraculous one. Arica is in ruins, the wave swept Chala, a small port of liquize only have been saved and nobody known how far North the destruction may reach, as no news has yet arrived from Callao.

A German photographer relates the following:—

"On the afternoon of the 13th, I was busy at my house developing some pictures, when several shocks of earthquake we e felt in rapid succession. My Chilean assistan , sharing the terror nearly all his countrymen have of volcanic outbreaks, rushed into the street and I was just about following him to induce him to return, when the earthquake became so violent that a sensation akin to sea-sickness overcame me. Having reached the street I felt the ground moving under me as if I had been afloat. From that time I remember but little. I just recollect the falling of the church steeple at the moment I arrived on the market place. I closed up over the [illegible] ing houses and, the roaring waves behind me, made straight for the mountains. It was the most perfect picture of the flood you can imagine; such a it was fairly standing on end. Heart-rending lamentations and despair. Mothers seeking their little ones and wives without their husbands. Everybody was glad to escape safe and sound, for all around the most frightful misfortunes might be witnessed. On the mountains near the coast we spent a wretched and anxious night, terrified by the ever recurring shocks of earthquake, of which we counted more than thirty. Next morning nothing was to be seen of our dwellings. The town was one great heap of rubbish; not a single street could be recognized."

The following was appointed in the Halifax Witness:—

"SEPARATE SCHOOLS.—Protestants to the number of [illegible] A petition has been forwarded to overthrow the common schools of this Province, and to introduce separate schools.— A system of pauperized sectarianism, "begging," and lobbying has been pursued in the Province Building for the last fortnight. All possible pressure is being brought to bear on the Legislature, and except men are not wanting that they may yield. Protestants of all denominations and parties must resist them with the immediately, or all may prove too late. The common school system is now perilous a boon to be wrecked in a week or a fortnight, and to be given up without a struggle. The time for action is now. The short time left can be done outside this city. We call on the Government to pause before inaugurating a system which is sure in [illegible] to three-fourths of the people of this Province. If time permitted, petitions against the separate schools would come in in such numbers that neither the Government nor the House could disregard them. Members who yield to the pressure must be brought to bear upon them, may be sure of being called to a sharp account by their constituencies. Be it observed that no case of grievance has arisen under the present law. No R oman Catholic child has been oppressed. In fact we can assert without hesitation that the Roman Catholic laity desire no change. The proposed change involves the establishment of separate schools, but the ecclesiastics, who compose the canvassers in the Legislature carefully disguise it."

THE CHINESE AMERICAN TREATY.—The London Times has another long article on the treaty recently concluded between the United States and China. The article which nearly fills three columns, is mainly devoted to a discussion of the views advanced by the other metropolitan journals. The writer reviews the course of the British policy in China, which he characterizes as one of peace, submitting to frequent aggressions the disregard of treaty, basis, ill faith, and violence, until leniency is interpreted at Pekin as fear. Coarse diplomacy is seemingly a matter of situation. They laugh the English treaties to scorn, and policy forbids quelling the Taepings. Now they give their policy to the principal foreign power in foreign policy. They send a mission to order indefinitely the clauses of the treaty of Tien-Tsin, opening the Empire admitting civilization. They must be told, if they cannot, that, while England desires peace, mutual treaties must be enforced, and no step further will be taken until that is done. Then they will submit, and there will be peace. China will not be the theatre of war between foreign powers unless at the wish of American policy. The article ends with the assertion that only the rulers of China cling to exclusion. The people want free intercourse, and it is the duty of England to maintain the rights of the people against their rulers.

The other day the Archbishop of Sophia was asked by her chaplain for money to pay for masses destined to secure the repose of her unfortunate son Maximilian's soul. The Archbishop without reflecting, at once put down her name for a considerable sum Encouraged by this success the chaplain took the list to Archbishop Alberti, and begged him to subscribe. "I will gladly subscribe to a collection in memory of my unfortunate brother, but I shall insist on the money being applied to pay his creditors, which appears to me the first thing to be done," was the reply.

The two waiters reported to have been discharged from the Russell House for threatening the life of the Crown Prosecutor were discharged on other scores. They swore that they were discharged from the Hotel because they were witnesses for the defence

OUR FORTIFICATIONS.—It is now nearly fifty years since our fortifications have been looked after in any way, we think it is now high time, and that it behoves our government to put them in a proper state of defence, and have our Lakes and Rivers well protected, "one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," but while we are protecting ourselves against a foreign enemy we should not forget to fortify ourself as against bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, pains in the back and side, chafes, cholera morbus, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the most effectual medicine Sold by all Dealers in Medicine, at 25 cents per bottle.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

Buy it, try it, and you'll like it, Jacobs' Liquid.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

MOTHERS READ THIS.
HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, an acated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with fever at many seasons, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the facsimile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy for all disease of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary persons, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure-all, but for such diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among whom we would name the following:

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. T. & O.—Gentlemen:—I Wheeler Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued nothing just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not talking of money, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected some of the most Marvellous Cures ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. TROUBLE IN SPAIN.

LONDON, Sept. 20, midnight.—The following important news has been received from Madrid. The Prime Minister, Gonzales Bravo and Mayalde and Bolde, members of the Spanish Cabinet, have resigned. The Marquis of Hev a has been requested to fill their places ad interium. The Queen is returning to Madrid, and martial law has been proclaimed in the capital.

PARIS Sept. 22.—The journals here have reports that a general movement against the Queen has commenced in Spain, and that it is headed by Gen. Prim, and by the Generals who were recently exiled.—Some accounts say that the rebels are moving upon Madrid in force.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—The Herald's London special says, telegrams from Madrid state that the Queen's admiral, Topete, commanding the naval force off Cadiz, with the whole of the men serving under his orders, has revolted against Isabella's Government.—the result of a political revolutionary agitation, which has been silently but actively progressing among the royal sailors since the period of the banishment of military Generals, and the exile of the Duke and Duchess de Montpensier.—The Generals so lately banished have returned from the places assigned to them under the royal warrant. Marshal de la Terre headed the movement, and the leading men of the old Odonnellist party sustained it. Several towns have joined in the insurrection, a most intense pame prevailed at the Court in Madrid. Troops have been despatched South, and G. n. Concha has been commissioned to command the loyal troops. A rumor prevailed in Paris that Queen Isabella, who met Napoleon at St. Sebastien, has abdicated the throne; but it is not stated whether in Madrid, St. Sebastien, or Biarritz on French territory, whether she went immediately after Napoleon's return from the interview with Her Majesty at San Sebastien.

NEWSPAPERS.—A man cannot sit comfortably down to breakfast without having the small talk of the world served hot upon the table, and he cannot sleep in peace unless through the day, like a genuine quidnunc, he has been harassing "great and startling intelligence, the shock of empires, and convulsion of the body politic." Lord Lytton but expressed a common feeling when he declared in his well known speech, that the noblest legacy to posterity would be not our railways, docks, or public buildings, but a file of the Times. The same feeling led the great Fredrick to insist upon the circulation of the journals in Prussia and to order his schoolmasters in every village to read out the news to the country folk. To many of us this seems but common sense; but many well informed people will tell us that we have become too proud of our newspapers, and too prone to vaunt their superiority over "all the works of Thucydides;" they compare the intense publicity of our modern life to the solar microscope; and, to borrow another expression from Emerson, "are tired of so public a life and planet, running hither and thither for nooks and hiding places."—Cornhill Magazine.

METHOD OF ASCERTAINING THE STATE OF THE LUNGS.—Persons desirous of ascertaining the true state of their lungs are directed to draw in as much breath as they conveniently can. They are then to count, as far as they are able, in a low and audible voice, without drawing in more breath. The number of seconds they can continue counting must be carefully observed; in a consumptive person the time does not exceed ten, and frequently less than six seconds; in pleurisy and pneumonia it ranges from nine to four seconds. When the lungs are in a sound condition the time will range as high as from thirty-five seconds.

THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.—There are in Europe 4,631,700 Jews.—Sixty years ago, when missions were commenced to them, there was scarcely a convert to Christianity in Great Britain. Now there are said to be 3,000 converts in England and 20,000 on the continent. About a hundred clergymen of the Church of England are converted Jews. In Berlin, 4,000 of the 18,000 Jews have been converted Jews. The Jews on the continent manifest a stronger desire proportionately than Christians for the higher branches of knowledge, arts and sciences. Some of the best literary, scientific, and political are edited by Jews; and some of the most celebrated poets, painters, engravers, musicians, and composers are Jews. In many of the countries of Europe where they have been sorely oppressed, they are now enjoying equal privileges with others.

A NOVEL CARGO.—Sigh no more ladies. A vessel has arrived at Havre with a cargo so offensive in odour; that the ship was about being subjected to quarantine. Her cargo consisted of human hair, of extreme fineness and brilliancy, and must lower the prices of locks gathered in Brittany, and in Normandy. The Apaches and other Indian tribes scalp their enemies, and the glory of such warriors is estimated by a number of perukes they can display. Surprised by the French troops, these Indians were deprived of these capillary trophies as well as the bones of their ancestors—which appear to be the only baggage they carry about with them—in caves. Some camp followers discovered the prize, and soon it will be fit for doing duty.

Great consternation was occasioned at one of the hotels of Ostend by the suicide of three distinguished guests—the aristocratic and elegant Countess de P——, the Count her husband, and Monsieur L. M——, of Vienna. The three were seated at a table where they had been dining together, when they were suddenly observed to fall back lifeless. Every effort was made to restore them, but life was extinct. It was found that the champagne glass of each one had contained prussic acid. No clue has been obtained as yet to this mysterious and tragic event.—Court Journal.

WHELAN'S CONDUCT AT THE TRIAL.—A special despatch to the Gazette dated Ottawa, Sept. 14, says: "Whelan, in the dock has been cursing horribly all day. I heard to night the words of a remark made by Whelan yesterday to a person belonging him, who told them to a friend, swearing him to secrecy. The repetition I heard was that when a man was swearing that no one saw the murder, and it was impossible that Laundy could have seen Whelan. Whelan said, "By God, the b——r is right. No one could see me, and no one did see me, when I shot D'Arcy McGee."

GAMBLING IN NEW YORK.—During the month of August the suppression of the prevention of Gambling detected sixty-eight gangs of merchants' houses in New York and Brooklyn, who were found abusing their attention and means in gambling in rare tenets and in lottery policy offices. During the six months ending in Dec. 633 cases were detected and 318 houses of various kinds closed; this includes faro banks, policy shops and places of that like.

Mr. John H. Cameron was always a warm personal friend of poor McGee's, and it seems singular, to say the least, that he should be selected for the rescue of his alleged murderer.—Whig.

The Railway Commission and Other Matters.

At last, after several weeks of suspense, the Commissioners have been named. John A. McDonald, who labors earnestly and unceasingly to concentrate all power in himself, has also succeeded in appointing three Tory Commissioners on the Intercolonial Railway. The whole scheme has been conducted from its conception with a view to place it in the hands of allies who might thus have an opportunity of feathering their nests for the labors they had spent in support of John A & Co. Mr. Walsh has received the appointment on behalf of Ontario, Mr. Bridges, of the Grand Trunk, on behalf of Quebec, the Hon. Mr Chandler o New Brunswick, and Mr. Meredith of Nova Scotia. Mr. Walsh is also permitted to retain his seat as representative of the people, without going back to his constituency. It is an acknowledged principle that whenever a representative of the people accepts an office under a government he should go back to his constituents and see if they will endorse his act, by electing him again; but it was found that in the case of Mr. Walsh, he ought not go to his constituents, for they would unceremoniously reject him. Indeed, he went almost feeling their pulse for a few days, and when it was ascertained that the chances were doubtful, John A. at once ordered that there was a flaw in the Act for appointing Commissioners that enabled Mr. Walsh to accept the office and at the same time jump his fingers at the people who sent him to Parliament. So much for their regard to established usages when they are in the way to self aggrandisement. But where was Mellvgall when these appointments were made? Had he no hand in this piece of political dodging? He felt when he remained in the Cabinet contrary to the wish of at least three-fourths of the Reformers of Ontario, that he presence there was needed to restrain the excesses of McDonald, Cartier & Co. It is now quite evident that he is either as bad as they are, or that his presence has no restraint on those wily schemers who are bent on filling the cup of their iniquity to the brim." We may rely on it, that all the extravagance of the past mismanagement of Railway affairs will be eclipsed in the Intercolonial matters before its completion.

IMPERTINENCE.

When we read the address of the wily J. A. to the government of the provinces, asserting his right of veto on all matters enacted in the Provincial Assemblies, we looked upon it as the most cool piece of impertinence yet manifested in the history of Canadian statesmen. Confederation was sought for and obtained in order to relieve the provinces from the night-mare of John A's influence, backed by Lower Canadians, who were willing to sell their votes and influence to obtain, in return, whatever they might demand. Upper Canada became restive under the injustice she was forced to endure, and willingly submitted to some of her exhibitions entering the famous coalition, even in the sacrifice of a little feeling, it, perchance we might obtain the cost of our own harmonies. But now what do we find? the Tory Despot demanding still that no act shall be passed without his consent, first obtained. What will John Sandfield think of these unwarrantable claims to prerogative? Let J. A. the only man in the province rightly able to judge of what is right and what is wrong, and what should be enacted in the management of the affairs of the Provinces, without the assumption of there power than that of advice granted. If the power to disallow of any act of any of the provinces rests anywhere it should be in the Dominion Parliament, and not in any one man; nor should that power be exercised unless when the Lieut.-Governor reserved something of which he had doubts, or concerning which he held different views from the local assembly.—Such assumption on the part of John A. McDonald is nothing more or less than an attempt to usurp the power and functions of the local governments and of their governors, and we trust that in each of the provinces there will be a strong protest against permitting him to assume powers that he is unfit to use and would be ready to abuse.

The Rifle Tournament at Montreal.

It will be no little cause for pride that the 57th Battalion has made its mark at the great Dominion tournament. In the Battalion Match the 57th came off second best, being beaten by only 1, by the Victorias of Quebec. In the Dominion of Canada Prize of $20 and a badge of first class to each of 30 who made the highest scores, Capt. J. Z. Rogers, of Ashburnham, is successful. The following are the 30:—Col. Sergt. Mills, 19th batt, 50; Private May, do. 49; Sergt Fust, 20th batt, 48; Sergt Morrow, do. 48; Ensign Chase, 40th batt 48, Ensign Scott, 9th batt, 47; Private Warren, 14th batt, 47; Private Miner, 52nd batt, 47; Private Morrison, Queen's Own, 46; Captain McLean, 42nd batt, 46; Ensign McEwen, 42nd batt, 46; Private Wedge, 7th batt. 46; Sergeant McCaw, 34th batt, 46; Captain Cole, 41st batt, 46; Captain Harrington, 9th batt. N. B., 45; Captain Fletcher, 21st St John's, 45; Lieutenant Gibson, Queen's Own, 45; Lieut Williamson, 42nd, 45; Ensign Cawfield, 22nd, 45; Capt Coop r, 20th, 45; Lieut McDougall, 5th Royals, 45; Private Bell, Queen's Own, 44; Lieut Flag, King's Regiment, N. B., 44; Major McAdam, Charlotte, N. B., 44; Captain Meyne, 52nd, 44; Private Liet, 54th, 44; Captain Rogers, 57th, 44; Sergt Campbell, 57th, 44; Brigade Major Jackson, do, 44. The next 30 who made the next highest score received $10 each and a badge of second class. We do not, however, find any of the names of the 57th in this class.

Among the individual winners of prizes in the Battalion match, we find the name of Ensign Johnston, of the 57th Battalion. We cannot help but take a little pride to ourselves in the manner the members of the 57th who attended the Dominion Rifle Tournament have acquitted themselves.

There is a rumor that John H. Cameron has resigned or is about to resign his position as Grand Master of the Loyal Orange Association of Canada, because of some remarks that have appeared in newspapers, and also because of the action of some Lodges in reference to his defending the assassin, Whalen. If he resigns it will be because he thinks he can use the Orangemen no longer as political engines for his own aggrandizement. Perhaps he could be induced to retain the office. This is no doubt what he looks for—to be flattered to retain it. Of course it is silly twaddle to talk about him for defending Whalen. Every lawyer is understood as ready to defend a prisoner, no matter what the crime is with which he is charged, and it would have been a stain on him as an Orangeman if he had refused to see that Whalen would get a fair trial, when retained for that purpose.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION.—From reports of the dailies we learn that the Exhibition of 1868 is nothing behind that of previous years. The trains are crowded with visitors from all parts of the Province. A number of farmers from this neighbourhood have gone to compare the progress of the Province with that in their vicinity, and we have no doubt but that they will be amply repaid for their trouble. There is no greater stimulus to progress than witnessing the progress that is manifested at these yearly exhibitions of our skill and industry.

Late cable news brings the intelligence that Lord Monck is to be succeeded by Sir John Young, a countryman of the present Governor General, and late Governor of New South Wales. We learn that he is a Conservative in politics, but we trust possessed of enough common sense to mind his own business and let politics alone in Canada. The Tory press is quite jubilant over the fact of his being a Conservative; we can only say that they are satisfied with small favours.

ALL ENGLAND ELEVEN.—The international cricket match between the all England 11 and the 22 of the United States, resulted in the defeat of the latter. The score was—All England, 375; New York twenty two, 149. At the conclusion of the game a match of base ball was proposed and agreed to, when the all England eleven defeated the Americans at the game by 30 to 14. In Montreal the Canadian twenty two were beaten the first innings badly.

ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday last a young man named James Innes, in the employment of Mr. Samuel Dickson, received a severe injury by the lumber sliding on him off a truck as he was removing it from the mill. We are glad to learn that, although his body was much injured, he is recovering under the skillful treatment of Dr. Geo. Burnham, of Ashburnham.

We invite attention to the new advertisement of Messrs. Gray & Beebe. They have enlarged their premises, increased their stock and are determined to supply the wants of the public at a low rate. They solicit a call.

Ritualism Deemed in Canada.

The Examiner that at the Anglican Synod in Montreal last week, there was considerable ritualistic practices. It seems to learn that the Synod have changed the law of decorum, during discussion with the Bible on sacramental occasions, and the use of the wafer be tested.

The following are the resolutions passed:—

1. Decreed.—The elevation of the elements in the celebrations of the Holy Communion, the usual manner during Divine service, and the mixture of water with the sacramental wine are illegal, the above mentioned practices are hereby forbidden in the Church of this Province; and

Whereas,—The Bishop at the end of the communion office enacts that the bread shall be, "such as is usual to be eaten," the use of wafer bread is hereby forbidden, and this synod expresses its disapprobation of the use of lights on the Lord's Table, and of any vestments except the surplice, stole, or scarf and academic hood, in reading public prayers and in the administration of the Holy Communion, and declare their determination to prevent, by every lawful means, their introduction into the Church of this Province."

Amongst the other business of the Synod we learn with pleasure that the Bishop found time to consider the awful effects of intemperance, and to bring in a motion for a petition to establish an Inebriate Asylum for the Dominion. The following will be read with pleasure, as pointing to the desire of the Bishop to establish means of reclaiming drunkards:—

The presiding Bishop informs the Provincial that the House of Bishops have appointed the accompanying petition to Her Excellency the Governor-general and both Houses of the Legislature, respecting an Asylum for Inebriates, and requesting the concurrence of the Lower House.

The petitions of the undersigned humbly showeth:

Whereas there exists in the Dominion of Canada a comparatively large number of inebriates, who constantly or frequently partake to excess of intoxicating drinks. That, according to medical authority, this habitual intoxication results from a diseased state of the physical system, which condition, gradually created, eventually becomes a barrier to reformation, although the individual may desire to relinquish his habit of excessive use of alcoholic drinks. That a large number of inebriates would gladly avail themselves of any suitable means to be restored to their former state of mental and physical health. That the possibility of accomplishing a complete reformation of drunkards by medical and mental treatment is a testes of by the reports of Inebriate Asylums in New York and Boston, the last named which Asylums has been in successful operation for two years. That the alarming number of lives made useless by excessive drinking demands the earnest consideration of the public, and warrants the adoption of any means which promises to bring inebriates back to usefulness. That it is the humble opinion of your petitioners that an Inebriate Asylum for the Dominion of Canada ought to be established. That while for its support much assistance may be expected from private philanthropy, as well as from patients while inmates of the Institution, public aid is necessary to establish and maintain such an asylum. Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray that your Excellency grant a sufficient sum of money for the establishment and maintenance of such an Institution in the Dominion.

Chancellor Hale said it seemed to him that they had no authority to demand a grant of public money, belonging to all other denominations as well as themselves. His first impression was, that, although the object was a good one, and he would rejoice to see something of that sort done, yet they were going beyond their authority.

Mr. Bull concurred that they had met together, not only for the good of the Church but for the good of the whole Province. He hoped the idea of the Bishops would be carried out unanimously.

Archdeacon Patton moved, seconded by Mr. Bull, that the House concur with the House of Bishops in a memorial to the Legislature on the subject of an Asylum for Inebriates.

Carried unanimously.

What a pity that the Bishops did not go farther and resolve to give no rest to our Legislators till a law be passed to prohibit the manufacture of what makes drunkards. They should also declare themselves against the use of intoxicating liquors in the meantime. "If all the churches would take the subject up, we might expect the removal of the evil, and Asylums at home in every dwelling.

To the Editor of the Examiner

SIR,—It is generally conceded that the Press is the echo of public opinion, and as such, its conductors should be guarded in making dogmatical assertions. Nothing tends more to undermine its influence in a community than loose, incorrect statements that are wanting in fact. Such were some of my thoughts on reading in the last Review, "Gleanings from the Trial." The Editor says "So in the whole, as there are one or two deductions which may consistently be laid before our readers.—The first is the urgent necessity there is for a strong public sentiment to be brought to bear against the growing practice of bearing fire-arms. It is illegal, but every one knows how general it is on the face of the law." I have endeavored the early portion I object to in the above, and I object to it for the reason that I do not believe it is correct. It is not illegal to carry fire-arms, and I question if every one knows that the practice is general. In Canada at least, I do not think it is common, or if it is, I do not think it is generally known. The only times or place that I know of he carrying of fire-arms being declared illegal are at elections or at public works. I, however, will not speak positively that I am right in my objection, the learned Editor of the Review or yourself, sir, may possibly be able to show that I am wrong. My object in writing is not to be captious or merely to criticise, it is simply either to correct a public statement that can through the Press or a private individual who has the temerity, if you will, to call in question the truth of the assertion. I heartily concur with the Editor, of a "strong public sentiment" against the practice of carrying fire-arms; nor, from my present knowledge, would I object to the Legislature passing an Act declaring illegal the objectionable practice. My impressions are that an act to that effect already exists.

And remain, sir,

Your obed't serv't,

CLERGYMAN.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged stomach, or sour stomach, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with fever at times, stomach and bowels constantly filled with pain in the head and stomach, sinking sleep, fainting, trembling, coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child: drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound prepared after far ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Kreestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Andrew Wood, of Cobourg, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr Bell.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE
OF
CONSUMPTION!
IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different remedies, but all without any good effect. Squire Peterson, of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottles at once, with the Pills; as soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, chills, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

Miller, Esq. for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and credible person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs, will please to call before the end of October.

WILLIAM LEON.

Peterboro, Sept. 16. 38

night's concert on this evening) stepped forward.

'You have forgotten that I was to have the first waltz, Violet,' he said; 'I hate leave anything you; come.' He took her unresisting hand, gave his brother, who was about to interfere, a look that WILL called a 'stare-away,' and led her away. They did not go back into the ballroom. When I reached the hotel, I found my pet in tears.

'You are over-excited, my darling,' I said, and began to talk of her own acute.

'I am in such trouble, I don't know how to tell you. Will you ever forgive me?'

'Dear child, you have done no harm.'

'Do you know, do you really I'm.

'Yes, I was there, watching you. We quite intended to shoot you the Roman some evening, and Mr. Bell would have explained the game to you. There was no harm in your going, but Lionel was to blame for taking you in your half-dress.' After this the little soul sobbed all the more. I put her into her bed and sat beside her, holding her trembling little hand in mine, until her breathing became regular, the tears dried on her face, and she slept. Perhaps another tear fell upon it as I turned her, but I know that I thanked God for His mercies, and for the beauty and brightness in this present world.

I am sorry to have to tell you that my old favorite, Lionel, did not behave himself very well during the next month. Miss Pree was in a state as nearly bordering on distraction as propriety allowed her.

'The young man must have his fling,' said the kind General; 'he has never seen anything of the sort before. He'll soon come straight again. Don't worry him, Pree; he is a good lad.'

'Worry him! What expressions, brother! Counsel, advice, are now to be spoken of—of aggressive dogs. Worry, indeed!'

At last, however, things were getting too bad. Lionel took his seat at the green table as soon as the doors were opened, and scarcely left it again until they closed for the night. We all besought the General to interfere.

'Our little plans for Violet will all be ruined by his present thoughtlessness,' I urged. 'Then the father told his son he must either give his word not to re-enter the gambling saloon or return with them all to England, and at once. Lionel chose the former alternative. He must have felt grateful to his father, who had allowed him to run on in his own way, and given him all necessary moneys with a word of complaint, until a check was absolutely necessary. So Lionel acquiesced with a good grace, and now sought to pass his time, and forget his craving for play, in a fresh burst of love-making. But in Violet there was a change that chilled these thoughts of his. She did not turn from her merry-faced friend; that might have augured hope in the winning her back; but she met him without any of her wonted interest and sprightliness. She did not care of he came, stayed or went. She did not mind walking with him, but she showed neither liking for disinclination when such walking was proposed. We all saw the change, and I acknowledged that I had been hasty, and that the woman's feeling still slumbered in the little breast.

'Perhaps she will never care for any one,' said Will. 'This is the the second lover in six months.'

'She has never been beloved yet,' I answered, fearing to say more, as I had been so manifestly wrong in my former ideas.—My husband shook his head.

'You are very queer creatures, you women, very queer, and not to be sounded at all. You're either too shallow or too deep; it's not for me to say which. Have some girls would have clung to that handsome young fellow all the more pertinaciously, just because he was thoughtless and foolhardy, and turned his back upon them a bit, and hankered after forbidden pleasures.'

'That would have been so if a girl—if Violet had loved him. But, indeed, matters went too fast and too smoothly; we might have been sure they could not all end in rose-colour.'

'The old theory about its being unfortunate to win the first rubber! Cards and love have something in common.'

'Have they though? Then I will thank you for some information about——'

But that led us on to another subject, with which Violet has nothing to do. That young person was altogether in a somewhat contradictory and unsatisfactory frame of mind for weeks after the ball at the Redoute. She made desperate love to the dear old General, and turned her back, as Will says, on all her other friends. I never found out what passed between her and Herbert when he led her home on that eventful night; but I know that she shunned him, could not be induced to take a walk with him alone, and scarcely answered if he spoke to her. And yet I caught her eyes earnestly fixed upon his face sometimes, and I knew that she heard, by and eagerly listened to, the few words he spoke. He was not much with us; he hired walking, and would often start away with his knapsack on his back, for two or three days' tour.

October was coming upon us now, and and we began to speak of going home. I had received that nothing but absolute necessity—or a good husband—should take our darling from us again. She was such a blessing and comfort, and so constantly remained us, by her very same even, of spring and sunshine, and all that is sweet and pure in Nature's day of promise.

How long might she be with us? I thought. I held a letter from Mr. Ashley in my hands. I had told him my wishes and opinions honestly, and he had responded with all possible kindness. He would not take her away. How about that handsome lover with the tawny mane?

We elders were sitting out in the beautiful avenue, listening to the energetic band, and the two in my thoughts were walking leisurely up and down. Lionel's arm had been offered and rejected, and he had folded his hands upon his back. Violet, a little pouting, a little trifling, wholly charming, toyed with her parasol, looked provokingly into his face, and gave him part answers in her own pert way. At last he grew impatient of her nonsense, and said—I judge from later confessions—have said something like—

'You are making fun of me, Violet. I am in earnest, and will not be laughed at. I tell you plainly, once for all, I love you and want you to be my wife. I am tired of all the play. Let there be an end to it.'

'I don't think I made the beginning!'

'You did. I thought you brought that very first day, when I placed your little foot in the waking-place. I wished then that you might have put it upon my neck instead, and called me your slave. I could have done your bidding fast enough.'

'Now you know me better you want me to dismiss. Thanks; I don't care about a master at present.' And she laughed merrily enough. Then he stood still, frowning her.

'Violet,' he said, 'I ask you for the last time, will you be my wife? I know Mr. Ray would like it, as would my father; he wants me settled; and surely your father could not object. Violet, may we marry and not like?'

'No!' she said, and I saw her foot and parasol fly only down into the ground. 'No, no, no! My friends always said I was a rash girl, Lionel, you will never change me, but if you marry me all the five shall be step together, you still never change me. I don't love you, and I don't love Mr. Otis, though you have picked up that silly story, and choose to say so, and—and—and—I don't think I know what love is, and—and—I don't wish to. There!'

'Let me touch you. I can't find out.'

'You as you I could never learn it. Let us be friends, shake hands, and have done with this nonsense, once for all.'

Of course he would not shake hands but went away from her with hasty and angry steps.

She told it all to me afterwards, and showed all commercial enjoy.

'Dearest and kindest of mothers—and you do seem to me like a mother,' she said, with her eyes full of tears, 'you love me, and you love dear Mr. Bell, and you know how nice that is, and we are all so happy. Let us go on so! I am sorry if he cares for me; I know it won't last; but I do assure you I can never care for him, in the right way, you know.' And she would say no further word in the matter.

After that walk Lionel did not come near her. He was a somewhat spoilt and vain young man, and his vanity had received a smarting blow, which he could neither ignore nor forget.

The last morning of our pleasant stay had come. Violet had hurried away to her mineral bath, from which she was wont to return like Hebe, or any one fair one for recruit health. Herbert had been away for a day's walking, but had promised to return in time to see us off.

After her bath, Violet walked away along the winding path, up to the heights that tower over the town.

'I wanted to take a last look at the dear place,' she told me, afterwards, 'and I marched away, up and up, till I came to the brightest point for the view. I took my hat off and stood panting and looking down, when, all at once, Herbert stepped out of the wood. He startled me so! And I was so warm, and so out of breath, and my hair all untidy! I was so ashamed! He said he had been walking here before sun-rise, on purpose to—to—to see us again before we went, and to offer me a little flower that he had found. He said, 'Was it not a very strange time of year for a—for this?' Then he showed me a forget-me-not. It seemed to come in answer to his thoughts and wishes, he said, just as now came the Violet in whose hand he wished to lay that other blossom. Then he gave me the flower, and held my hand, and—and—somehow, all at once, he held me too, and I cried, and I think he cried, but I don't know. He said he was too happy. Dearest of mothers, I do know that I do love him, and that I am too happy, and that it is—so sure!'

So the woman had arisen at last. It was not very long before I had to give into another's keeping the glorious flower that had come so young and guileless a blossom into mine.

It is only a sketch, you see, a little jotting down about sunshine and love; perhaps a rain or a storm cloud, but it speaks of a time that has led to a very beautiful summer in two human lives, now one.

CHOOSING A SCHOOLMASTER.—Some of the instructions of founders as to choosing a master are very curious. They nearly all require that he should be "a learned and godly man;" many that he should be a priest; but others add details of a less ordinary character. The statutes of the grammar-schools of Guisborough shows two put dishes on the part of the founder. 1 the master must if possible be a priest, and "no Scot or stranger born;" if no priest, are conveniently be had, then an unmarried layman may be appointed; "but if, after his admission, he do misery, then immediate by his office shall be void and the said wardens shall remove and utterly put him from the same for ever." William Fettyplace, of Childrey, in Berks, who founded a chantry at that place in the reign of Henry VIII., also takes unusual precautions to keep objectionable men out of his mastership. "If any chaplain," says the statutes, "shall be-come otherwise benefited, or shall not observe the will of the founder, or shall be a fornicator, or shall keep hawks, or a stirrer up of contentions in the town of Childrey or the parts adjacent, or noted for any grievous crime, and shall not be able to clear himself of the imputation, such chaplain shall be forthwith removed from the said chantry."—Gentleman's Magazine, new series.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.—The Chancery Court at Toronto has just given a decision which cannot fail to prove of the highest importance to the United States in the settlement of those international difficulties which form part of the legacy of the late civil war. It appears that in 1864 the rebel privateer Florida overhauled a steamer on her way from New York to New Orleans, and captured twelve thousand dollars' worth of postage stamps intended for the New Orleans Post Office. The postage stamps were sent to Liverpool and there sold to a Mr. Wood. Mr. Wood consigned the stamps to certain parties in Toronto, with a view to getting them sold in the United States. The stamps were ultimately seized by the United States authorities. Hence the suit in Toronto. The Chancery Court, leaving gone into the whole case, has decided that all United States property captured by the Confederates during the war, no matter where found or by whom held, is the property of the United States. We cannot refrain on this occasion from giving Canada that praise which she so justly her due. Her example deserves the attention and consideration both of England and France. A little more of this spirit and our international difficulties will be ended.—Globe.

Queen Victoria was lately made to feel the inconvenience of submitting to the laws relating to the introduction of foreign cattle. The Duke of Saxe Coburg, sent a splendid heifer to her as present. When the animal had been landed at Hull it was discovered that by the terms of the law it must remain their quarantined a short time and then be slaughtered. But of course a loop-hole was found. There is a clause allowing cattle to go onward, so Her Majesty's present was, under the head of £100, forwarded by steamer for London, and there she will be transhipped to Southampton, from whence, after a quarantine of 28 days, she will, under a certificate, be taken to the royal farm at Windsor.

Great consternation was occasioned at one of the hotels at Ostend by the suicide of three distinguished guests—the anti-Semitic and clerical Countess de P——, the Count her husband, and Monsieur L M., of Vienna. The three were seated at a table where they had been dining together, when they were suddenly observed to fall back lifeless. Every effort was made to restore them, but life was extinct. It was found that the champagne glass of each one had contained prussic acid. No clue has been obtained as yet to this mysterious and tragic event.—Court Journal.

THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

BY ALICE CARY.

When skies are roaming warm and bright,
And in the shadiest harvest
The opening ways to hay-pole, linked colors
Lo coalition up the heavens,
When air with mixed little bees
The rustlers in the leaves
And the dusky-throated sheep
The seeds of yellow corn;
What a beautiful enclosure
Or is devoid of pride,
To the good old-fashioned homestead,
With doors so open wide!

But when the blighted sh- is comes
Thin to the pale red sage,
When all the vales are filled with gold,
And all the air with sweets;
When fields of pea nut, sweet grain
And pet sunflowers of rye,
Remind the ripe husbandman
Of ample threshing Years;
How pleasant from the din and dust
Of the thoroughfare aloof,
Inside the old-fashioned homestead,
With steep and mossy roof!

When home the woodman plods with axe
Upon his shoulder swung,
And to the knotted pole tree
Are scythe and sickle hung!
When low upon her chestnuts nest
The mother swallow trills,
And decorously slow, the oxen
Are we ding down the hill,
What a stained picture I comfort
In the evening shadows red,
To the good old-fashioned homestead,
With its homespun table spread.

And when the winds moan loudly,
When the wood are bare and brown,
And when the swallow's clay-built nest
From the rafter crumbles down,
When all the watted garden patch
Are lea, all with frozen leaves,
And icicles silver-like
Are set along the eaves;
Then when the book from the shelf is best
And the firelights shine and ly,
In the good old-fashioned homestead
Is the farmer's holiday.

But whether the brook be fringed with flowers,
Or whether the dead leaves fall;
Or whether the air be full of songs,
Or never a song at all;
And whether the vines of the strawberries
Or frost through the grasses run,
And whether her in rain or whether in shine,
Is all to me as one;
For bright as the brightest sunshine
The light of memory streams
Around the old-fashioned homestead,
Where I dream my dream of dreams.

Selections.

KATE BOYNTON'S MISTAKE.

'But where is Ned?'

'Oh! he's gone off to the lodge again. I predict he'll get quite out of patience with his latest. When we were first married, he never left the house of an evening; but now he's off sometimes two or three nights a week. And he's so aggravating about it too. He won't tell me a word of what they do, or what they talk of; and if I get out of patience—as what woman of spirit will not at times?—he won't retort, or answer me back, but just says in his quiet way, "Ah! I'm sorry you take it that way, Hetty dear. I hope soon it will get over—you see the day will not look as this matter as though you were a child." As though I were a child indeed! If I acted half so much like a child as his treatment would indicate, he might have some excuse for it.'

And Kate stopped quite out of breath, as her custom was things were then off and gathered into a huge bundle in her arms, preparatory to being carried into another room.

'So Ned has become a full-fledged Mason, has he?' queried John Anthorp, as Kate returned from the other room.

'Yes,' answered she. 'I guess "full-fledged" is a good word to use. That is what they apply to geese when they arrive at maturity and I warrant it'll grace him as well. They're all a parcel of geese to spend the time at lodge meetings, whether they're Masons, Sons of Temperance, Sons of Malta, or whatever they call themselves. Better stay at home with their wives, or take them with them to some lecture or concert or the theatre.'

Kate did not stop to think that she had little cause for complaint on this score, for she averaged at least two nights a week at some such entertainment, best as frequently attending a matinee. But women who part from their lords as Kate had from Ned that evening, to sleep sing to reason, and Kate was no exception to the general rule.

'Well,' said John, 'Masonry is something of a humbug. I wish he were here to-night, so we could make an end of what we are. Nellie, here, and coming over, oh I it had been a long time since we had had a game.'

'So it has,' responded Kate; 'but there's no telling when Ned will be at home, and I hardly know who I could send for.'

'Well, never mind, we'll have some music instead. Do, Mrs. Boynton, let us have some of those opera gems. I think you made the other evening just know you must have learnt them by time.'

The urged Kate took a seat at the piano, and soon lost all recollection of the vexations of the first of the evening. They all loved music, and the evening passed very pleasantly. Kate and John were playing a duet when the door opened and Ned stood upon the threshold.

'Hush!' he exclaimed as the music ceased. 'By Jove! I wish I had known what I wanted me here. I don't know but I would have been as well away as ever.'

'And not taken that last ride on the goat,' laughed John; 'or given that ram-head-on a-ation rail across the floor. I suppose you can sit down now, outright, but I quickly requested at that hot gait.'

'Oh! don't!' laughed he, as he shook hands with John and his wife, and looked pleasantly at the fair Kate, to see if her appetite was high, "I don't want to hear you have passed a very pleasant evening.'

'Doubtless,' answered John. 'And of course you have.' But I say, Ned, why don't you ask a fellow to join of it's such a jolly thing? I've been waiting for an invitation from some one to the ring.'

'I will carry in an application from you Anthorp you wish,' responded Ned, 'but doubt never urge or even invite you to join.'

'Ohe! So like the fox in the first fable, one can not advance others to despise what he can't obtain! I hear you, Ned.'

'You misunderstand me,' said Ned, 'that's a good boy,' said Kate coming over to him, and twining her arms around his neck, 'don't go to it again. You're too good, too noble to be with such a crowd. You're disappointed, and won't acknowledge it, but won't help to get anybody else into the scrape.'

'But it's so much then,' said Ned 'We are of one profession, and one which a good fellow may never forgets, to never urge any one to become a member, so one can only blame himself if he is disappointed (he can understand.) I am satisfied, and more than satisfied, with my experience inside the lodge room. But let us change the subject. I don't wish to be the means of bringing discord into the midst of the harmony that existed when I crossed the threshold. Let us have some more music.'

Soon all was most quite again, and the recent subject was forgotten for the time, and it was late when John and Nellie Anthorp took their leave.

Edward Boynton and John Anthorp were both bookkeepers in large business houses, and each enjoyed the confidence of the firm he was with. Both houses had all along been considered the most prosperous in the city; but, at one of those commercial crises that occasionally sweep over the country, both houses had been deeply engaged in speculations, and went down. Both Ned and John had fared pretty well up to their means, they having fashionable tastes, and having an eye to the adornments of art and the pleasures of music and literature. So they both found themselves in the middle of a storm one day, each about all their means gone, and business still prostrate all around that they could find nothing to do. It was especially hard to the young wives, who had hitherto had all that heart could wish, and now found themselves cramped for even necessaries.

Added to other misfortunes, Ned was taken sick about this time, and confined to his bed. His illness was a fever, brought on by anxiety and care. Several payments whose Kate contributed but slightly, came to patch with loans and others called to make inquiries. She was grateful, and entreating that they were Masons, felt more kindly towards the order, but still regretted the money Ned had spent upon it, thinking, with her empty flour-barrel and purse, how many nice things it could buy. She said as much, a little bitterly, one evening, to one of the watchers, who lived at her in a way she could not understand, and then made some remark about charitable societies not always practising what they preached.

The next day about noon as Kate was eating the last bit of bread in the house, after having made the last meal into some gruel for her poor husband, who was still out of his head, the bell rang and she admitted a stranger, one she had never seen before.

'Does Mr. Boynton live here?'

'He does.'

'Mr. Edward Boynton lately with Small, Pallet & Co.'

'Yes, Sir.'

'He is sick, is he not?'

'He is.'

'And need a little money would not come amiss, to buy luxuries, &c.?'

'To buy necessaries, rather. Oh, sir! —But who are you?'

'No matter. You would not know me if you had dealings with our bank, and there is a balance at sight to his credit.'

'Many to a bank! He never told me of it.'

'Possibly not.'

'But how much? O! it is so fortunate!'

'I do not now recall the exact amount. But you can take what you think necessary to-day and I will enter it in the books.'

Two or three times the gentleman came, and each time left a sum of money. The fourth time he came, he said,—

'Suppose I should tell you that our books are open now, and no more is due your husband? What should you do?'

'Oh, sir, do not say so. It is such a mystery, and I have been hoping that it would continue.'

The gentleman did not immediately reply; but after a moment's silence he said:

'I see large painting in the parlor, opposite the door, is a beautiful thing, Mrs. Boynton. What do you call it?'

'Oh, that is "The Poet's Paradise." That is poor Ned's favorite.'

'Oh!' he said sweetly, a moment later, rising to go, 'I hope the balancing of our books will not be a source of inconvenience to you. You have immediate means I presume, to last until Mr. Boynton's recovery?'

After Kate's reluctant and tearful confession, the stranger said:—

'I should like the painting I spoke of a few moments since. I would pay you a good price for it.'

The sum was short. Kate finally agreed to let it go, upon condition that Ned should have occasion to redeem it at some other time, which was finally consented to, with the promise extracted from Kate that her husband was to know nothing of it until he perfect restoration to health.

Again and again the stranger came and offered many times more pictures in question until Kate grew to dislike him, denominating him as the tempter, and with difficulty restrained her tears when she saw her deserted parlor.

At last Ned got round again and began to grow strong. But Kate kept the parlor door closed, and never left a fire there, dreading the day of exposure and explanation. She no longer before kept a secret from her husband; and the more she pondered on this, the more dreadful seemed its monstrous proportions.

'I've got to more to tell,' Mr. Pawnbroker,' Kate said calmly one day about the time, as Mr. French, the one who had rendered her parlor, brushed unceremoniously past the servant girl to the house.

'Softly, Mrs. Boynton,' said the gentleman. 'Does your husband know of this yet?'

'No sir.'

'Well, I thought it would be a good plan to have me here, to smooth the matter over when it was told him; and as he is almost well now, and ——'

'I will take you to see the gentleman, and perhaps you will tell him yourself,' said Kate, a little haughtily, as she ushered Mr. French into the sitting-room, where her husband was, and passed on into the kitchen.

A few minutes later, she appeared at the door, and said:

'Won't some one at the front door Ned, dear? I thought I heard a rap.'

'I guess I left the door open when I came in,' said Mr. French, coming and intercepting her as she was about going to see. 'Pardon me, madam, it was my neglect, and I will close it. Do not leave your station.'

Mr. French did not come out of the front door at all, but led Kate into the sitting-room, telling him in a few terse, 'Did you see my signal?' and 'everything Bright?' guiding an answer to the affirmative.

'My dear,' said Ned, the next time the room was come, 'I have invited Mr. French and Mr. Jewett to dinner, after which we shall be pleased to have our music. If Mrs Brown is helping you to-day, let her hand a fire in the parlor.'

Poor Kate came near sinking to the floor.

'But,' she began, 'I am afraid I cannot sing or play to-day. I am not very strong since ——'

But her husband's kind words reassured her, and thinking it would help to fill the void of the picture and statuary, she said no more, but went out and sent Mrs Brown in. As that woman passed out, Mr. French, who had changed his position to one near the hall-door, put on a low tone, 'Whatever you see or hear, manifest no surprise, and keep a still tongue.'

After dinner was over, and a few minutes had been spent in the sitting-room, Ned spoke about the parlor and music.

'Please let these gentlemen go first, said Kate. 'I have something to tell you all about.'

So they went in and left the husband and wife alone.

'You know, dear Ned,' she began, 'how much it costs to live, and how little we had to do with when you were taken sick. Your lodge friends were very kind in coming to watch with you, and sending little luxuries; but they never dreamed how destitute we were, and how much we needed—necessaries, and —But please don't go on fast,' she said, as they had risen, and were already in the hall; 'I can't hear you dearly, and care for you, and would do anything to please you!'

'Certainly Katie. But what is the matter?'

'Oh, if you only knew ——'

'Knew what?'

'Knew how I love you. No not that.—How I tried to get along without ——'

Here she burst into tears, and could say no more.

'Oh! can't tell you after all,' she said presently, as they neared the parlor door. 'You must see for yourself!'

'See what?' he asked as she opened the door for him to enter first.

'Why all ——'

She stopped in astonishment, as she herself looked into the parlor and saw 'The Poet's Paradise,' and the other paintings and the statutes on the brackets, and everything else she had parted with for money. She was speechless, and looked first at her husband, then at Mr. French, and the at the works of art.

Probably I can explain this best,' said Mr. French stepping forward and telling how he had the things returned to the room for, at a given signal from him, when Kate was in the back part of the house.

'But what about the bank?' said Kate smiling a wildered smile through her tears.

'That was as I told you,' said Mr. French. 'Mr. Boynton had and now has money on deposit in the bank which always honors its drafts.'

'What bank is it,' asked Kate.

'The Bank of Manners, which every worthy member always finds a safe investment. Hearing what you had said on one or two occasions, and knowing what you so long were, I took the method I did to teach you a little lesson. The wife of a Mason may not know unimportant secret rites of the Order; but she must know of its workings of charity and humanity, and of its brotherly love, and pure and unsullied religion. If it had not been to teach you your error, Mrs Boynton you might never have known from whence came the succor that aided you through a crisis that is liable to ascertain all who dwell in this world of Entered Apprentices; for one needs do not dwell in entertainment, but imitate their Master, who went about doing good, and praying out of it, eighteen hundred years ago.'

It is needless to add that Kate found herself in a singing mood, and that an afternoon passed happily that had promised her much bitter sorrow.

'O, Ned!' said Kate a few days later, after he had started in business, 'I saw Nellie to-day, and they have had a thing left. All their furniture and pictures and dishes, and almost the clothes they have on their back, went before the crash.'

'Well, I'm sorry, but that is because they had no money in the bank.'

An old Scotch lady was engaged in teaching her grand daughter that most perfect of all pleadings—the Lord's Prayer. The pious grandmother slowly and slowly pronounced the short, simple sentences so well known to us all and the child repeated them demurely until the old lady came to the words: 'Give us this day our daily bread,' when the child looked suddenly into her face, and earnestly added the native request—'Ay, and butter on't, Granny.'

The End of a Life of Fashion.

BY THE REV. STEPHEN H. TYNG, D. D.

One of the most beautiful rural sections of the United States, are the counties of Maryland lying between the Potomac and the Potomac rivers. It is undulating in its surface, ornamented with abundant natural groves of varied forest trees, and presenting a soil for cultivation of unrivalled fertility. In the days when [illegible] was introduced and [illegible] the whole region was redeemed and occupied by a class of large and well prosperous planters, whose names were distinguished, whose equipages were elegant, and whose hospitalities were boundless. The labour of its land was accomplished by slaves, under the practical management of overseers, and the families of the owners passed a life of luxury and indulgence, almost without limit, and without restraint.

In this beautiful section of country my early ministry was passed, in great happiness and prosperity. I have not seen it for near to 40 years, and few, if any, of my old companions and acquaintance then, are now living. My personal dwelling was in the richest section of this whole fertile delta, called "The Forest of Prince George's." The plantations around me ran from five hundred to two thousand acres each.—From my own house but three others were within sight, though it stood on the summit of a moderate hill.

The main crop for cultivation in this whole region was Tobacco. Indeed the term "crop," in their familiar language, meant Tobacco only. The wealth of the planter was familiarly estimated by the number of hogsheads of Tobacco which he raised and sold. Fifty to one hundred and fifty constituted the scale of wealth from a good sale to a large computation. The inhabitants were a generous and cultivated people. Every man had a theory of some extent of his own, and every house was the abode of gaiety and wealth. An average of ten to twenty servants made up the household, and carriages and horses, in the most costly profusion, were at the constant command of the households and their visitors. Slavery was in mild and moderate as was, perhaps, consistent with its existence at all, and the slaves were the objects of as much kindness and protection as in any region in which their lot was cast.

In this fertile, luxurious region my home was appointed for several years of my youthful ministry; and among those settled on luxurious people my constant duty carried me from house to house, in long rides of minister, amidst a circle of friends as kind, generous and faithful as man will ever find on earth. I saw there much of earthly misery; much of the coldest gratifications, the most extravagant plans, and much of the bitter disappointments and reverses of a luxurious and unbounded life.

Among these was of large wealth was one whom I shall call Mr. Maxwell. His property was on the largest scale of population among his neighbours. He owned several plantations, and ultimately occupied two very elegant dwelling one on the banks of the Potomac, just above Mount Vernon, and the other in the inland region, called the Forest of Prince George. His tastes and habits were expensive, and his style of living was of the most costly and showy character. He habitually travelled in his coach-and-four, from one home to another, and maintained the most expensive and unlimited hospitality to each.

He had an only daughter, whose mother was taken from her when she was young. She was light and graceful in figure, beautiful in features, and animated in spirit. She grew up a most attractive girl, her father's idol, the very pride of his heart, and the joy of his eyes. A part of every winter her father spent in the gathered society of Washington; and an annual summer visit was made to Saratoga or the Virginia Springs. His daughter was the admiration of multitudes. Her education had been conducted at home by private teachers, without regard to expense, and she had gained as it all that eye can see and glow which passes for intelligence, and gives a sufficient zest to conversation in fashionable circles. As she emerged from childhood into early youth she was much seen and equally caressed. Her father's indulgence was without restraint. Servants were at her command on every side, and were offered wise was greatest attendance, constant care and profusion. She could hardly be said to have had any youth, for while a mere girl all that this world presents to a wealthy and gay womanhood was spread before her.

These winter and summer visits multiplied her acquaintance, and brought many visitors to her father's house, to whom the most free and friendly attentions were habitually given, and among whom it did not fail that the beauty and wealth of the daughter found many personal suitors.

The favored gentleman was a resident of the far South, and this child of wealth and indulgence, at eighteen years of age, was transferred to a new home of a similar character to her own, in that far Southern region. Her husband was a man of abundant wealth and her new life found all the gratification that wealth, fashion and vanity could give. Free as her life had been before, she was now much more beyond the reach of any outward restraint. Her father's watchfulness and real apprehensions of principle had kept her from what would have been called excessive dissipation in her youth at home. But the taste, habit and freedom of her new abode opened an unbounded scene of gratification. In the fashionable dissipations of Natchez and New Orleans, she was a leading star. Her husband delighted in her ability for display, and freely met the cost of her most absurd expenditures. Perhaps no woman's life was a more gay, or in outward aspect, to a more sensual and worldly taste, more attractive. Her annual summer visits to Saratoga were still maintained; and there, with all the dash and show which so distinguished the Southern wealth and habit of those days, were employed to dazzle the eyes of the beholders and to proclaim the happiness of wealth and gaiety for the children of earth.

How little could this devotee to sensual pleasure imagine, in those days of opposition, the scene which she was to meet in the end of this whole career. But a few years passed before her life was changed. This gay and fashionable creature became a wife. Her husband died while she was yet but a few years past twenty, and left her that legacy so habitual in the fashionable English of this South—still worse completely bankrupt, a prey to creditors who absorbed the whole. And this young wife returned to her father's home solitary, disappointed, and deeply distressed. To her the World was gone, and she had nothing left. A life of unceasing fashion and gay indulgence had perverted all the pure tastes of her heart, and created a demand for excitement and gratification which nothing else could meet. The years of her absence and the memory of these enjoyment had made their father's splendid home seem intolerably quiet and tame, and she could find nothing to restore the western scenes of the present, or to relieve her sadness in the remembrance of the past.

Here commenced the development of a habit which had been unconsciously adopted in the intervals of excitement in her previous fashionable and dissipated life—I mean the use of opium, the fatal effects of which upon her was in no respect more horrible than in other case of its indulgence which I have ever seen. It was at first an indulgence entirely concealed. It seemed to minister a tranquility and, apparent restoration to her habits of mind and action, which removed, in a degree, her personal attractions and gave an agreeable animation to her conversation and thought. How far the indulgence was at that time suspected in her family I did not know. But it could not be long concealed.

Her father had married again to a widow lady whose son of adult years, an officer in the army, was living with her. He was a young man of a quiet and gentle temper, of fine character, and of pure habits. Between these two, of nearly equal age, there brought together, a mutual affection grew, for which the present solitude and quietness of their abode presented a favorable opportunity, and which resulted in their subsequent marriage. In his character there was everything which she could have desired for the cherished happiness of her future life. And when she accompanied him on his return under orders to Florida, the parents of them both felt a grateful satisfaction in the prospect before them. To these parents the time had come, when the calmness of repose in comfort seems happiness to man. And they had them farewell in peace and hope.

But the one growing habit of her life utterly forbade all happiness in their home. She had but one passion—the love of excitement—the easy excitement of excessive gaiety and dissipation if she could gain it and the fearful habit of her secret indulgence when she could not. The first was an entire contradiction to all her new husband's tastes and habits; the last was inconceivable and abhorrent to his purer tastes and wishes; and he soon found himself miserable and worse than alone.

More and more fearfully the accursed habit grew upon her. Large became her restless demands, and more open and undeniable her confession of odious indulgence, until at last she could no longer be enslaved by love, or be willing to remain with him. And she returned to her father's home in Maryland, again made desolate by the death of his second wife and herself more desolate and wretched than human language can describe. There is no human misery more wretched than a heart wrung with disappointment, without one ration of honorable consolation, and a body powerless in the grasp of a dominant appetite, intensely hated, yet supremely controlling, and doomed to inevitable ruin.

This wretched self-condemned result of heartless fashion it devolved to her father's house as much concealed as possible, while the cultivated taste and habits of the neighbourhood forbade all notice of its condition, or any reference to it in behalf of conscience. Many was were intimate there no stranger could suspect all that was of peculiar, to the past sorrows of her life and wholly ignorant of the reality of its condition.

Her state seemed desperate. Arguments and entreaties with her were all in vain. Her fearful appetite increased, increasing supplies were demanded. Her father remonstrated and pleaded with her without effect. His anguish was intense. The fond pride of his heart, the child of his earliest pride, and of his young paternal love, was rapidly sinking into a restless degradation or a hopeless death, under the dominion of a mere beast habit.

At last, rebelling against restraint, and in lucid moments ashamed of her degradation, she fled from her father's house, beyond the reach of his investigation. She was traced to Baltimore, and there her track was completely lost.

More than a year had passed, after her elopement. Her aged father supposed her dead, when a stranger called on me to ask a visit to a poor suffering woman whom he had found in a deserted house a few miles off. I went with him to the designated place—a lonely, half-ruined cottage, appearing uninhabited by any human being. There, upon an old and stained leather bed, on the floor, in a corner of the room, lay a haggard old woman, as she seemed to me, curled up in a heap of wretchedness. A single broken chair was in the room, and lying by the bed a broken stone jug, from which she had drank her last supply of intoxicants, which she appeared to have brought with her to the place. A small black boy was the only other visible being there, whether by accident I knew not.

The aspect of this person was that of extreme age, filthy with neglect. A strange, unnatural, scattered growth of hair was on her sallow cheeks and around her lips. Misery in the most extreme degree marked her as its victim. The man who came with me did not know her. I recognized her immediately, and she still knew me. She could or would give no account of her wanderings, or how she came to this wretched place, and no one ever could give the information.

The reaction and sinking of her worn and suffering body, destroyed and haggard as it seemed, now that her only instrument of excitement and of prolonged life had been lost, left her to expire as a painful shocking death. In vain I tried to call her in the last dark hour to cause higher, better, encouraging thoughts—to the love and mercy of a Divine Saviour to the poorest and the most unworthy. She would listen, perhaps—she could listen, to none of this now. There she lay. There she closed her eyes in death. She was scarce thirty years of age, and yet had the aspect of four-score.

And thus was all that the fashion of this world, and its most profane enjoyment, had left of the beautiful Celia Mayo!—the child of the gay, the envy of the giddy, and the life long possessor of unbounded wealth.

A TOTAL ECLIPSE IN 1869.

Prof. S. V. White writes to a New York paper of a total eclipse of the sun which is to occur in August, 1869. His line of the track of the beauty, calculated fifteen years ago, are as follows:

The sun will rise out pool in the interior of Siberia, on the morning of August 7th, 1858 whence the shadow will move in a northeasterly direction; then, turning westerly and southwestwardly, will pass over Behring's Straits and Northern Alaska a little after noon, local time. Thence, moving across part British North America, it will enter the United States in Montana, between 2 and 3 p. m., local time. Moving thence across Western Nebraska, it will pass diagonally through Ohio, passing near Sioux City, Des Moines and Keokuk about 5 o'clock. Thence it will pass still to the southeast over Jacksonville, Illinois, across Southern Indiana, Central Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee, into across North Carolina, and will touch the sea coast in Pamlico Sound; and it will finally leave the earth not far from the Bermudas.

It will be visible in all parts of the United States, and total over a belt about 100 miles wide along the line just indicated, the sun being hid more than four minutes.

THE PRISONER DOYLE.—The Ottawa News says that in his closing speech the Hon. J. H. Cameron regretted that the Crown had not seen fit to call the prisoner Doyle as a witness; and that Mr. O'Reilly replied by regretting that the Counsel for the defence had not seen fit to call Doyle. To most listeners this little incident seemed but a freezing on the part of clever legal facilitians; nevertheless, both gentlemen were sincere in their regrets. Mr. O'Reilly would have very much liked to call Doyle; but by doing so he ran two risks—one that he would deny all he had previously acknowledged, and the other that his mouth would be shut by the Camerons the moment he entered the witness box. If he denied all he previously confessed, then Mr. O'Reilly would have been completely non plussed, as the law does not permit any one to call in question the integrity of his own witness. On the other hand, if Doyle entered the witness box willing to answer any and every question, it was morally certain that the Camerons would appeal to the Judge to warn him against saying anything to criminate himself. Mr. O'Reilly, therefore, deemed it best to allow the defence to call Doyle. Had the defence done so, Mr. O'Reilly would either have got Doyle to admit the truth of Cullen's evidence, or he would have put two or three witnesses in the box to prove that he had admitted its truth in the presence of the Police Magistrate. But the defence did not fall into the trap prepared for them. Before or during the trial, the Hon. J. H. Cameron had an interview of an hour with the prisoner Doyle in his cell. What passed in that interview of course no one will ever know. All that is known is the result—Doyle was not called as a witness.

A CLERGYMAN'S STRIKE.—A novel suggestion is made by a curate in letter to a contemporary. He wishes his brethren to organize a strike. After an education which cost his friends about £3,000, he is ordained, while a Deacon, to a curacy of £80. Perhaps, as a priest, he gets for the next ten years, £130. At the end of that time he may be fortunate enough to obtain £150 and a house. He is comforted with the reflection that he has a "position"—the more need, he thinks, that he should have the money to keep up that position. He suggests that where a living is over £400 a year, the curate, who does the whole work, should have half the income. Then he would be able to relieve the poor and needy and show hospitality. His suggestions are not likely to meet with any practical result. An incumbent with a living of £1,000 a year pays a curate £100 to shoulder the work. His justification is that he can get plenty of expats men to do it for that. Thus the law of supply and demand introduces the vulgar presence into the Church.

We have the unsightly spectacle of the poor curate appling to the rich beneficed clergyman of "Put me, I pray thee, into one of the priest's offices, that I may eat a piece of bread." The shabby curate in the counsel of his well to do parishioners, until he summons up courage to woo an heiress and marry her, or is lucky enough to obtain a good living and engage a curate in his turn. This is the result of the "World in the Church."—English Paper.

Buying and selling babies has been reduced to a system in New York. Those who engage in the business keep "establishments," where a great many women are killed during the year, leaving babies numbering in the aggregate several hundred beside the offspring of mothers who do not die and don't want their babies. The little things are regularly advertised, and persons wanting infants to adopt apply as the advertisement directs them, and generally get one for a very low price—say the value of the few rags in which it is wrapped. Sometimes a record is kept of the persons procuring infants in this way, but generally speaking, nothing is known about them, and the mothers of the infants, supposing them never to get out alive, can never get a trace of their off-spring even if they wished to do so, when many of them do not. We have heard a great deal about the "wicked" man who kept a dance house; but can conceive of nothing so positively "wicked" as this business.

The delegates to England on the Northwest question are expected to leave considerably sooner than was anticipated, the British Government being entitled to have the matter thoroughly gone into. The Hons. Messrs. Cartier McDougall and Campbell will compose the delegation.

The Nova Scotia Legislature have passed a resolution antagonizing the Government to the tune of $500,000 for "undertaken purposes." Seventy-three Repealers spoke on the motion, and said they would vote the whole revenue of the Province in the same manner, if it were needed, in order to bring about a repeal of the Union.

Pleasant Hints for Dusty Dress Dressers.

There may be seen daily, on Church street, a man clad in fashion apparel, with a great diamond upon his breast, while endeavoring to enlighten the magnificent soldiers upon his figure. In a Christian university he learned chemistry, and got even Liebig beaten it better. His occupation is the mixing and adulteration of liquors. Give him a dozen casks of denatured alcohol, and the next day each of them will represent the name of genuine wine or a popular spirit. He enters a wholesale drug-store bearing a large basket upon his arm. Five pounds of bruised stone are first weighed out for him. To one hopes the imparts a degree of smoothness and oleagin source that gives to imitation brandy the ghosts of that which is best matured. An astringent called catechu. That would almost close the mouth of a glass lubricated, is next in order. A couple of ounces of strychnine, next called for, are quickly conveyed to the vent pocket, and a pound of sulphate of zinc (white vitriol) is accurately placed in the bottom of the basket. The oil of cognac, the sulphuric acid, and other articles that give the real body to the liquid poison, are always kept in store. The mixer buys these things in various quarters. They are the staples of the art.

The New York World says:—"His Excellency Sir John Young, Bart, P. C., etc., is no less known by birth, and represented for many years in the Imperial Parliament, the County of Canan, in which he estates and house of his connection, the Marquis of Rosslyn, are situated. Distinguishing himself in the Legislature by his remarkable talents and attention to his duties as a popular representative, he soon attracted attention in the House. Being recognized as an authority in Irish matters as a person of more than usual difficulty in the affairs of that country, he was transferred from the position of a private member to that of Privy Counsellor and Chief Secretary of Ireland. As a responsible Minister of the Crown, his executive ability had rare opportunities for their exercise, and while in the Irish Office he was mainly instrumental we believe, in carrying through Parliament the measure "Maynooth Grant." He was subsequently transferred to Corfu as High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands, then under the protectorate of Great Britain. During his tenure of office there he was created Knight of the Colonial Order of Saints Michael and George. The important colony of New South Wales, in Australia, was the next and more difficult field of his labors. There he showed himself, by his accomplishments and public spirit, a worthy successor of Brisbane and Sir Thomas Maitland. The position of an Australian Governor, important as it undoubtedly is, is in many respects not an agreeable one, and it has been so. Placed at the Antipodes, unable to advise with the Colonial Office in less than four months, he is at once responsible to the Colonial Secretary and obliged to decide between the Legislative Council and the lower chamber, the Legislative Assembly—bodies generally imbued with crude notions of dignity and constitutional law, borrowed from the maternal country, though by no means improved in the appropriation. While in the neighbouring Colony of Victoria a "deadlock" between the two branches of the Legislature has exausted the patience and tried the ability of two Governors—Sir Charles Darling and Mr. Manners Sutton—as well as of successive Colonial Secretaries, from Mr. Cardwell to Lord Buckingham and Chandos, Sir John Young, with admirable tact, kept the machinery of his Government in excellent running order. There is no doubt but if his firm hand guided the executive wheels during the late Fenian excitement in Sydney, the unfortunate O'Farrell would not have been tried and executed with that indecent haste which ultra loyalty, inspired, nor would the now famous Treason-Felony bill—making it a high crime to speak disrespectfully of royalty—have disgraced the statute book of New South Wales. During Sir John Young's occupancy of the Government House at Sydney, a few winter ago, the Roman Catholic Cathedral was destroyed by fire on June 29. As an instance of his liberality, it may be mentioned that although a North of Ireland Episcopalian, he immediately telegraphed his sympathies to the venerable Archbishop John Bede Polding, then absent at Bathurst—he did not confine his sympathy to this, but at a public meeting, held sometime afterwart, made a warm speech calling on all classes to restore a building in which every Australian felt pride, and supported his appeal by a handsome subscription. To Americans this may not be a matter of wonder, though it is to those acquainted with the bitterness of Irish phrases. Sir John Young returned to England some twelve months since. His appointment will secure an able and experienced ruler for the Dominion."

Death of the First of the Canadian Zouaves.

Mr. Arthur D'E-timauville de Beaumonchel, one of the Canadians who went to Rome to help Pius 9th out of his troubles, has himself been sent to the place where "the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest," by the malaria common to the Italian swamps in which Napoleons seem to enjoy existence like the lowly soldiers. About ten days ago he wrote to this country in perfect health and in his usual flow of spirits. A contemporary adds that it will not be surprising if other deaths are reported from the same cause.—Quebec Chronicle.

THE THEATRE TO BE USED FOR ANOTHER PURPOSE.—The papers who found fault with Lord Cecil for assisting ecclesiastical function" while bearing the Queen's Commission as a military officer, will probably be equally shocked at his proposing to turn the theatre into a place of worship. But he intends to do so; and being a progressive, very much given to disregarding conventionalities, we suppose he will not care a great deal about what they may say. It is not, the first time that such a place has been used for such a purpose. It has happened often enough in England, and it was some years ago, and may be all for anything we know to the contrary, the practice of having Divine Service in some of the theatres in Boston on the Sunday. It is true, at any rate, that Lord Cecil was engaged "Her Majesty's" for next Sunday afternoon, when he expects to be aided by his young and zealous coadjutor, Mr. Dunlop. We have little doubt that, for once there will be a "full house."—Ottawa Citizen.

THE LEARNED SECRETARY.—Mr. M. C. Cameron is falling into bad company. After he had finished his part of the work of defending Whelan, he hurried up from Ottawa by a special train, as people thought, to resume his labours as provincial Secretary in Toronto. Not so, however; he made only a brief stay here and pushed on to London to defend a keeper of a house of ill-fame, charge with the offence of what only shooting a man! Who can say that Mr. Cameron has abandoned his appointing to Confederation when he does things into accompat the Government of which he is a member, and the system which he is sworn to carry out?—Globe.

It is reported on good authority that Beasley's pretended insanity is a mere ruse, and it is said that the medical report is quite towards a contrary opinion, and that Buckley is perfectly sane. The medical commission was appointed on application of Mr. John Millyard Cameron as representations presumed to have been furnished by Mr. O'Farrell.

The Late Agricultural Exhibition

The Twenty-second Annual Provincial Exhibition was held last week, and is spoken of as the very best yet held. It is well to bear in mind that in the midst of all the various industries which Canada is engaged in, that of agriculture stands foremost. Every event tending to advance the primary science tends likewise to our material prosperity. In this light we must view the recent Exhibition. It has the effect to bring together the best products of the country, in animals, grains, roots, fruits, &c., as well as the latest and most improved specimens of agricultural implements. Then there is a congregation of the best practical farmers, not in our country only, but also from a distance. Notes are compared, suggestions are made and matters of fact given in the multifarious matters of a farmer's avocation. It is almost impossible for any one engaged in the cultivation of the soil, possessed of but an ordinary judgment, not to come away from such an exhibition as that just closed in Hamilton, without being benefitted. He sees what is possible to be done by attention and care, he feels stimulated to renewed efforts to improve his stock, his crops, or maybe to try improved implements of agriculture, especially those which diminish manual labour. In reviewing the rise and progress of the association since its establishment, the President in his address noted its steady advancement. Its first show offered but $1,000 to be competed for; at the present one $13,000 were distributed as prizes. Everything presented at the exhibition gave evidence of the giant strides made in the business of agriculture, and the farmer who came away from it without feelings of pride for his country, and without resolves to improve in his system of farming, had no business to go there. The wise and observing man looks upon the exhibition not merely as a holiday gathering but as a place where he may learn in a short time by sight and by hearing more than he could for a long period otherwise.

Next week the first Agricultural Show for the West Riding of the County of Peterboro will be held in this town, and we would earnestly impress upon our agricultural friends and others the duty they owe to their own County in patronizing this Show. Let every one if he has any products of the soil, or implements of husbandry or industry worth exhibiting, forward them. Let the coming Show be the best we have yet had, one of which we shall not be ashamed of. The Society has put out a very creditable prize list, embracing a large variety of the industries of the country. There is, too, a magnificent place for the Exhibition in the Drill Shed. The Committee promise security to the articles brought, and we trust the community will duly appreciate and make use of the facilities they have provided by making this Show worthy of the Society and the West Riding of our County.

Mr. Beatty is now publishing an "Evening Leader," at 5s a year in advance.

The War of the Titles.

It is very clear that public bodies and persons having occasion to address the Lieut.-Governors of the Dominion are really in a fix. Amidst the jar of contending parties and smart journals about the question of Titles, the common herd will be at a loss to know how to address the occupant of this exalted office. The Leader and Spectator, sticklers for everything imperial, admonish all their readers that "His Excellency" is the only suitable title, established by law, for our Lieut.-Governor. The Toronto Telegraph, which, by the way, is fast getting into favor, and holding Tory proclivities to a fine, logically and forcibly urges that "His Excellency" is the proper title, and that it was an undue interference of the Duke of Buckingham when he commenced dabbling into Canadian titles. We are not much troubled, however, about the matter. It is strange, though, that at Montreal Sir N Belleau was addressed "Your Excellency," and at Hamilton Mr. Magill, M. P., styled Mr. Howland "Your Honor," while the Corporation of Hamilton called him "Excellency." Thus the whole order of titles is disturbed; Can da is going to ruin; the world is being turned up side down daily. But, soberly, what had the Duke of Buckingham to do with the titles that are assumed in Canada? The same despatch that unhinged the "titles," foolishly, (but sometimes statesmen act foolishly), sought to establish an order of religious titles, or to establish a quasi religious pre-eminence for one denomination, and entirely forgot that in Canada there is no Canadian Church, and that all ministers of every denomination are equal in the eyes of the people and in law. True nobility in the church consists in doing most to reclaim the world from Satan, so as to establish the kingdom of our Lord and of his anointed, and the ministers of religion in Canada may rest assured that the Canadian people will not be slow to award proper titles to those men, irrespective of denomination, who are foremost in winning souls to Christ. The Colonial Secretary might as well try to turn the course of the St. Lawrence as to set up a religious state church establishment on its banks. What the churches want is "life," not "a name," and "love," not jealousy about who shall be "greater."

THE REVLUTION IN SPAIN.

Late telegraph news informs us that the revolution in that unhappy country is assuming alarming proportions. There seem to be comparatively few sections of the Kingdom but where the disaffection exists.—The Royalist General Pairo has been unable to suppress the rebellion was obliged to stop in the vicinity of Cordava, till reinforcements of troops came to his assistance, as large numbers of his men were deserting him.—The spirit of disaffection seems to prevade the spanish people generally, and from present appearances the revolt will very soon become so general that Queen Isabella must abdicate her throne, or fly. There seems a deep rooted aversion to the Bourbon dynasty, which is now manifesting itself so fearfully that none of that family is safe with a crown.

Since writing the above the cable brings the intelligence that the Queen has crossed the French frontier, and that her generals are not in a position to stay the rebellion; if all that is written concerning her be true, the sooner their country is freed from the rule of such a monster the better. But will they get a ruler of a better stamp? This is almost doubtful. Spaniards have not risen in the scale of civilization or intelligence during the last centuries,—on the contrary they have been sinking. Perhaps a revolution will also throw up to eminence a reasonable position among the nations of Europe.

THE NORTH-WEST.

We learn from Ottawa that a deputation composed of Sir G. E. Cartier and Messrs. McDougall and Campbell, are about to proceed to England with a view of arranging the matter in connection with the North-West—probably to have the Home Government so arrange with the Hudson Bay Company, that that large country may either come into the confederation or be attached to Canada, as it ought to have been years ago.

It is not out of our recollection when the first named gentleman was a violent opposer to any scheme, having for its object the attachment of this territory to Canada. Now it seems he is as much in favor of the scheme as formerly he was hostile to it—better late as never. It is well to see a man come round to advocate good measures, even after long opposing them. May their mission be successful.

McGILL SQUARE, TORONTO.—The Wesleyan Methodists have purchased the McGill Square, containing 2 1-2 acres, for $26,000, and are going to erect an elegant and spacious church thereon. Mr. Purslow is said is to be the parson.

The Daily Globe is about to be enlarged, clothed in new dress, and will be sold at two cents a number. This paper is simply the best and most reliable paper published in the Dominion. The change must increase its circulation largely.

The Market By-Law.

Last week there was considerable of a [illegible] By-Law, [illegible] objecting chiefly, looked upon this order as [illegible] maintenance of the Market Clerk, as shown by the By-Law in force from paying toll, and levied a license to the tenants of [illegible] peace with their guns, nor were they compelled to pay toll [illegible] where the validity of a sum [illegible] information before the Mayor, of one man selling wheat, and another for selling a load of barley elsewhere than at the market [illegible] The Market Clerk is therefore foiled by Mr. Clinton for the present.

Rossport, Lake Huron.—Toronto Police Court has lately been occupied for several days with an important trial of part on charged with having robbed an Express Company of over $100,000, and which, after much, seems to Toronto to be the most daring robbery ever committed. From the evidence adduced, parties named Burns, Tanner, Thompson and others started into a compact with a man named Brown, who was Express agent, for the purpose of robbing the Express Train loaded for New York. Brown agreed to allow himself to be bound hand and foot, gagged and, though one only while the robbery was being perpetrated, and on being released pointed the robbers and received part of the money, after, on arriving at Cornish, received his share, $40,000. Brown, however, turned fruit and came against Dan Thompson, Morton and others. But Thompson being released on some technicalities in the law for extraditing parties guilty of certain offences, he was placed in the witness box and made a clean breast of the whole matter—admitting that he was one of the gang who planned the robbery with Brown, but swore that no force was used, and that hence it was not robbery but simply theft, and through this the whole party now enjoy their liberty. This trial reveals the weak places of the treaty, and has invoked an almost unanimous call for its revision, with a view to bringing guilty parties to justice. It is too bad that from defects in said law we are forced to allow these men an asylum, while, undoubtedly, the proper place for them would be State Prison for life.

JOHN GLADSTONE BOWES AGAIN.—This redoubtable Anglo-Canadian detective paid a visit to our town a few days ago, and appeared in the Police Court on Monday morning last, preferring a complaint against a young man named Rogers, of having threatened to do him some bodily injury, and so he proved that said Rogers should be made to keep the Peace. He corroborated the charge by producing a letter from the young man, in which some rather severe threats were made.—Rogers admitted sending the letter, but pleaded provocation and unkindly treatment on the part of Bowes, as an excuse for the language made use of. The magistrate, very properly, had Rogers bound over. Immediately thereafter, a person keeping a very respectable hotel in town, heard of the presence of this notable in-dividual and came down to the Court and lodged information against him for having circulated all manner of stories about a Fenian lodge being held in his hotel, of his having arms secreted and what not. A summons was issued for his appearance in the Police Court yesterday morning, but Mr. Bowes was not on hand.

BELMONT COUNCIL.

The Council met on Saturday 19th inst., for the transaction of business. Members all present except Mr. Wilds. The Reeve in the chair.

The minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

The Reeve stated that he had applied to the Commissioner of Crown Lands, asking him to cause reservations to be made in the ungranted lands in Methuen through which the road lately surveyed runs, and that he consented to do so.

Mr. Young reported that he had expended the sum of $48, appropriated at last session towards opening a road between lots 7 and 8 in the 2nd concession leading to Blairton, and stated that a further sum would be required to complete the same.

On motion of Mr. Preston, Mr. Young was instructed to go on and complete the opening of the said road, and the sum of $48 was appropriated to that purpose.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, the Havelock Postage account for the half year ending 1st July, was ordered to be paid.

Mr Isaac Powell reported to the Council that he had taken 500 feet of pine timber off the road allowances, and

On motion of Mr. Preston, he was directed to repair the road near his place to the amount of $4 as pay out for the same, and to report to the Clerk when finished.

A By-law to fix the salaries of certain officers of the Municipality for the present year and an Assessment By-law, were passed.

A resolution was passed, approving of the steps taken by the Reeve to obtain reservations for a road through the aggravated lands in Methuen.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, Mr. William Anderson was instructed to expend $— in repairing the road on the line between the 6th and 7th concessions south of the Marmora road.

On motion of Mr. Young, the Postmaster of road beat No. 10 was notified to remove certain obstructions from the road leading to Blairton.

On motion of Mr. Young, Mr. George Lewis was ordered to go and commence a crossway over a marsh on the Oak Lake road preparatory to finishing the same in the winter.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, Mr. James Torbett was authorized to expend $3 additional in repairing the road on Lot 16 in the 12th concession.

The Council then adjourned to meet again at the call of the Reeve.

A second resolution, also providing for [illegible] subject, was passed by a small vote. But at next meeting, taking advantage of the absence of two of the members who so far had voted for justice being done to the owners of property on Bethune street, the movement of the Council pass a resolution and a By-law which does not prevent the interests of any of the ratepayers, whose interests all Councillors are bound to respect by their oath of office, which in this case seems to have been overlooked altogether. It is not a pity that any class of ratepayers should be at the mercy of such Councillors? But we trust that a day of reckoning will come, and that the people of the town will see to it that those men's places shall be occupied by gentlemen more worthy of the trust reposed in them.

I am, sir,
Yours &c.,
A RATEPAYER.

British Order of Good Templars.

The first Annual Session of the Peterborough County Lodge of British Templars was held on Friday last, 25th of September, at Garrison's School House, Belmont when about fifty representatives and visitors were present. Bro. Geo. W. Holcomb, W. C. T., occupied the chair, when the Lodge was opened under the "Degree of the Heart." The Secretary presented and read his Report which showed the Order to be in a prosperous condition. And, although her Lately organized, encourages favorably with any of the other temperance societies in the County. Several questions relating to the working of the Order were discussed, and the general routine of business transacted. The following are the officers elected and installed for the ensuing term:—

Bro. J. W. Miller, Worthy Chief Templar.
Sister Maggie Scott, Worthy Vice Templar.
Bro. F. J Jameson, Secretary.
" W. J Larmour, Treasurer.
" Rev Mr. Halsted, Lecturer.
Sister Isabella Garrison, Counsellor.
Bro James Agnew, Chaplain.
" James C Dafoe, Financier.
Sister Halsted, Recorder.
Bro. Mark Scott, Marshall.
Sister Carrie Lilley, Deputy Marshall.
" Mary Ann Lilley, Inner Guard.
Bro. W F. Armstrong, Outer Guard.

On motion the Lodge adjourned, to meet in the Town of Peterboro, on the last Tuesday of December, at 3 o'clock, p. m.

In the evening a public tea meeting was held, at which, addresses were delivered by Bros. Holcomb, Millar, Halsted and Pearce. The meeting was attended by a very large number, thus showing, by their presence, the interest taken by those residing in that section of the County in the welfare of the temperance movement.—C. B.

STEALING PEARLS FROM A DEAD.—The French thieves used to steal all family that even their victims were half inclined to pardon them. The Duke of Fresnes, nephew of Marshal Richelieu, was coming out of the opera one night in a splendid dress, embroidered with pearls when two thieves managed to cut off the coat-tails. He turned into his club where everybody laughed at him, and so he handed on what had happened and went home. Early next morning a well-dressed page called at the Duke's hotel and requested to see him at once, on a matter of most vital importance. Monsieur le Fresnes was awakened. 'Monseigneur,' said the visitor. 'I am an officer of police. Monsieur, the lieutenant of police has learned the wonderful which happened to you yesterday in leaving the opera, and I have been sent by him to request you to order the coat to be placed in my hands, that we may convict the offenders by comparing it to the mutilated tails.'—The three knaves up and the Duke was in raptures with the vilgance of the police. But it was a new trick of the rogue who had stolen the tails, by which he possessed himself of the entire garment.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—Another great enterprise is near its completion. It is expected that the Suez canal will be open for vessels of the largest size in the course of October. Its depth is 26 feet, its width from 180 to 300 feet; its cost about $80,000,000, and it will shorten the voyage between Europe and India by about one half. It belongs to a French joint stock company, and its construction is due to the genius, energy, and perseverance of M. Ferdinand de Lesseps, a grandson of Lafayette. Much of the excavation has been done by machinery, and where heavy masonry has been needed to guard the canal sides by the native Arabs, the Mediterranean cement has been manufactured for the purpose out of sand and hydraulic lime. About 20,000 Europeans have been employed on the work, and are settled in new towns along the line. A vast number of Arabs have also worked at it irregularly.

FENIAN ACT.—The Express train going east on the Grand Trunk, Tuesday night was about five hours late in passing this station. This unusual delay is accounted for by a telegram to the Central Witness [illegible] Kellogg, to the effect that [illegible] of rails were pulled across the track last night for some mysterious purpose, and far from Montreal. Both engine and tender were thrown off the track, but no other freight cars was the train to strike them. The engine and one or two cars were injured, but [illegible] The passengers [illegible] the [illegible] delayed the up passenger train five hours. Just Things to Laugh At.

I have finally cum tew the conclusion that larger beer is a beverage to not intoxicate.

I have been told by a gentleman who said he had drunk it all his life, just to try the experiment, and was obliged to go home entirely sober in the morning. I have seen the same man drink sixteen glasses, and it would be drunk, to one drunk in gineral, for nobody could understand it. It is proper enuff to state that the man kept a larger beer saloon, and could have no object in stating wh t was not strictly thus. I therefore ben to the full extent of my ability. I never did drink but three glasses or larger beer in my life, and that made my head out-west as the sun was going on the end of a string, but I was told that it was cawse I did n't like beer, and got down on the wrong glass, for I never biled over more than I did when I got down that mite. My wife then I thought now she said I was afraid that I should die, for it did seem as tho everything I had ever seen in my life was runnin tew the surface; and I do really believe that if my wife had'nt pulled off my boots just when she did, they would have come thunderin up too. Oh! how sick I was! 15 years ago, and I can taste it now. I never had so much experience in so short a time.

If many man should tell me that larger beer was not intoxicating, I shud believe him; but if he shood tell me that I was'nt drunk that nite, I shud ask him to state over in a few words just how a man felt and acted when he was well set up. If I was'nt drunk that nite, I had some of the most natural symptoms that a man ever had and kept sober. In the first place it was about 80 rod from where I drunk the larger beer to my house, and I was over 2 hours on the road, and had a hole busted into each one of my pantaloon seats, and did'nt have my hat, and tried the door by the bell-pull, and kicktapped noisily, and saw everything in the room trying to get on the back side of me, and in sitting down on a chair, I did'nt wait long enough for it to get seated under me when it was going round, and I set down a little too late and missed the chair about 12 inches, and could'nt get up soon enough to take the next one that came along; and that aint all; my wife said I was as drunk as a beast, and, as I said before, I began to spu up things freely.

If I get beer is not intoxicating, it must be mo-lassiphy mean, that I know. Still I hardly think that larger beer is intoxicating, for I have been told so; and I am probably the only man living who ever drunk any when his liver was not plump. I don't want to say anything agin a temperance beverage, but if I ever drink any more, it will be with my hands tied behind me, and my mouth pried open. I don't think larger beer is intoxicating, but if I remember rite, I think it tastes to me like a glass of soap suds, that a pickle had been put to soak in.

THE DUNKARD'S CURE.

Some months ago, a gentleman advertised that he had discovered a true specific for the cure of drunkenness. He would not divulge the secret of what compounds he had used, but furnished the medicine at so much per bottle. He did not have so many applicants for cure as he expected, consequently the terms of the cure. In fact the same unfortunate ones did not seem anxious for relief.—Those rather appeared to enjoy the malady. A few however placed themselves under treatment and some were cured—whether by taking the medicine or by not taking any strong drink. We are not prepared to say. One of the cured ones had faith in the medicine, rigidly carried out the directions of the doctor, and now he not the least taste for intoxicating drinks, whereas, one year ago, he was an inebriate, and could not get along with less than a pint to a quart of whiskey a day.

He sent he had, at some trouble and expense, procured the receipt for the preparation of the medicine, which he has published for the benefit of suffering humanity. It is as follows:

Sulphate of iron, five grains; peppermint water, eleven drachms; spirit of nutmeg 1 drachm; twice a day. This preparation acts as tonic and stimulant, and so partially supplies the place of the accustomed liquor, and prevents that absolute physical and moral prostration that follows the sudden breaking off from the use of stimulating drinks.—It is to be taken in quantities equal to an ordinary dram, and as often as a desire for a dram returns. Any druggist can prepare the prescription.

STAR PACE HANS.—Two Dutchmen; not long since, had occasion to go to a blacksmith's on business and finding the smith absent from the shop, they concluded to go to the house. Having reached the door, one says to the other: "Come, Hans, you as about do emit." "Nein, nein," said the other, "but you can as so better as I." "Vel den I knocks" The mistress of the house came to the door. Hans then enquired: "Ish de smith within?" "I can not understand you," said the woman Hans then bawled out "Isay, ish dee mit mitin?" The other Dutchman perceiving that the woman could not understand Hans like the first stepped up and pushing him aside said: "Let a man come up as can say something; ish de blacksmith shop in de house?"

MIND YOUR ASPIRATES.—Two elderly ladies were contemplating one of the family of the Felicanthi, at the Zoological Gardens in London. "There's a great beast for you!" said one. "Get along with you, sis pid!" rejoined the other; "that's not a camel, that's a beagle." The conversation growing warmer between them—"Ladies," interposed one of the officers of the society (as in the fable of the Chameleon) "you need not quarrel, for you are both in the wrong. It is neither an camel nor a beagle; the nerd before you is an ass."

Perhaps the dearest word that ever fell from the lips of man, or greeted the ears of woman, is one her. Around it cluster the brightest recollections, and no sound is so full of melody, no music so sweet. No syllable that was ever uttered in any language awakens deeper emotions or evokes a purer devotion. It is the one blessed word, followed by so much of truth and virtue, that keeps hope alive when adversity comes and friends forsake us.

MUSICAL.—An Exeter paper observes: It is an amusing sight to see a row of young ladies all eating corn as they would perform upon a flute. The operation, as practiced in these part, resembles flute playing only in this, that both are generally seen upon the ears.

If a seaman should turn back every time he encounters a head-wind, he would never finish a voyage. So he who permits himself to be baffled by adverse circumstances will never make headway in the voyage of life.

Young Fern objects to men shedding tears, he says it is an infringement on woman's most valuable "water privileges."

FURS! FURS!
CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is remarkable in any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, but only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada skins which them double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should be on their guard as the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, that I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were to all intents of inferior quality.

Parties wishing any alterations made to their furs will please to call before the end of October.

WELCOME PAPA.

Three little forms, in the twilight gloom,
Peep through the shadows across the room;
Six little eyes, 5 or 6 inch and two,
Bristful of love and happiness too,
Watching for 'pa.

May, with glorid and thoughtful brow,
Stands silent, speaking with sudden flush
Of bliss, which only the mother may,
Stealing on Alpen from dome Bay,
Watching for 'pa.

Nelly with ringlets of sunny hue,
Coyly nestled between the two
Fr ding her cheek to the window pane,
Wishing the absent one home again,
Watching for 'pa.

Oh! how they gaze at the passers-by!
"He comes at last!" the gayly cry;
"Look again, my pets!" exclaims mamma;
And Nelly adds, "There's the twilight star,
Watching for 'pa."

Soon joyous shout from the window-seat,
And eager patter of childish feet;
Gay, musical chimes ring through the hall
A manly voice responds to the call.
Welcome papa.

FATHER AND SON.

A COMEDY IN TWO ACTS.

PART I.

'And so, sir, this is your decision?'

'Hmm, father, for both my other.'

'Do you mean to say, sir, that you are engaged to the girl?'

'Not exactly. I await her decision.'

'Then you've proposed?'

'I have, sir.'

'And you've resolved to marry Miss Cameron, and not Miss Underwood?'

'If Miss Cameron will accept me.'

'Very well, sir—very well! This is your gratitude—this your first duty, you undutiful, unfeeling, ungrateful boy, for the trouble I've had with you—the efforts I've made to secure for you the best match in the country. Have I, or have I not, for months (nay, years) past, paid, and paid handsomely, to one of the first teachers of the country, whose very threshold for the sake of a good-natured girl of a clergyman's daughter?'

'Father!'

'Don't father me, sir—don't interrupt me—don't speak to me again! Get out of my sight!—but remember! the day on which you marry Miss Cameron you will cease to be a son of mine. I'll disown, I'll disinherit you, sir, and leave all I have to the new Orphan Asylum!'

Such was the scene enacting in Squire Chester's Parlor—a scene frequently presented upon the stage to sympathizing and delighted crowds—as seats tables, pretty, polished, and bordered, with hands beneath coat tails a la Pickwick, an eyeglaring wrath ably through gold-rimmed spectacles, upon a heads one and unbuttoned, bent upon wedding the object of his son's affections, against his father's wishes.—Yet in this instance it was no mere acting, but on the part of each serious and resolute earnest.

To add to the dramatic effect, at the moment in which the Squire's last words were spoken, a fine, delicate-looking girl who was about entering the room, catching the sound of the angry voice, paused an instant with her hand on the door knob, as a hesitating whether to enter. And then it happened that she heard her own name coupled with the threat already mentioned.

She turned, then, and glided swiftly up the stairs to her own room. Locking the door, she threw herself on a couch, and burying her face in the pillows remained long time quite motionless. She did not weep, but when she at length arose her face was very, very pale, and her sweet, blue eyes had a haggard look of suffering, pain-ful to witness in one so young.

Seating herself at a table, she drew towards her a writing-desk, and wrote as follows:

'DEAR COUSIN PHILIP: Since our interview of yesterday, I have thought the matter over, and come to the conclusion that it will be best that we should not marry. Do not blame me; do not question me, ever. Private reasons which I cannot explain, but act as I think will be best to both.

LENA.'

'Where is Miss Cameron?' questioned Philip of the servant who handed him the note.

'Gone over to Elmwood, sir, to her aunt, Mrs. Page. I heard her say she should stay there until her return to the city in a few days.'

An hour after, Philip Chester was on his way to Elmwood. The path was lonely, leading through a sequestered wood and he was consequently a little surprised when at an abrupt turning, he came suddenly face to face with a young lady—very tall, very handsome, and attired in a rich riding habit and flowing plume. Philip lifted his hat respectfully, and would have passed on but the lady paused full in the path before him.

'Excuse me—you are Mr. Philip Chester.

He bowed.

'And I am Josephine Dashwood.'

In his surprise he scarcely knew what to say. 'I did not know—I was not aware of Miss Dashwood's being in the neighborhood.'

'I dare say not. You were expecting, perhaps, you and your honored father, to remain over for the first time at the residence of our respected uncle and guardian, Simon Walker, Esquire. But, you see, I was too anxious to wait, so I concluded to run down for a day or two to Elmwood, on the strength of Mrs. Page being an old friend of my mother. I wanted to see you, Mr. Chester.'

'You do me honor,' said Philip, puzzled in what manner to treat this frank avowal. The young lady meanwhile carelessly played with her horse's mane.

'I am glad of the accidental meeting,' she resumed, 'for I was just thinking how it would be possible to obtain a private interview.'

Philip stared.

'I believe,' continued she coolly, 'that there has been some arrangement made between you, by these two old—I mean by your much esteemed father and my highly respectable uncle—a little matrimonial scheme, if I am not mistaken. Very kind of them, I'm sure, though it might have been kinder to have left us to choose for ourselves, and be happy in our own way.'

A faint gleam of hope began to glow in Philip's heart.

'If you will do me the honor,' he replied, 'I shall be most willing.'

'Ah! I see you don't like me; but you will after a while. Take them, as my escort. I am in haste—pray don't be alarmed—not with me.'

'Thank you!' said he, almost involuntarily.

'With a very handsome, very absurd, very worthy and deserving young one,' resumed Miss Dashwood, with unmoved seriousness—but poor. And you are to have both escorts, I perfect, but suffering under the same slight.'

She looked at him seriously, now, with her dark eyes, and he met the gaze frankly.

'Now we understand each other,' she said, resuming her former tone and manner; 'and now we can act as we best to suit the circumstances. It won't do to offend openly against these two old fogies—I beg their pardon—these wise and venerable old gentlemen; but we can manage quietly to circumvent them, and save our own way—can't we?'

'Perhaps so; you have formed some plan to that effect,' said Philip, half amused and half interested.

'You shall hear,' she answered. 'I am told that your dear, delightful father admires darling ladies, wants a dashing daughter-in-law and mistress of his establishment. You and he will dine to-morrow at Elmwood. He sure not to the opposite Miss Page, who knows all about it—just enough a touch and mysterious interest in the affair. Say with me whether he objects as to be satisfied with his choice—daughter-in-law. But, whatever occurs, Mr. Philip, you must, and shall, perfectly charmed. Will you accept your part, Mr. Chester?'

Half laughing and half wondering he agreed.

And so they rode on together through the shadowy wood-paths; Philip Chester thinking he never met a lady half so fascinating previously, as the beautiful Miss Dashwood.

PART II.

Scene second, act first, transport us to the drawing room, where sat that good lady, Mrs. Page, in all the formal dignity of a country dame who endeavoring to entertain some fashionable guests, of whom Squire Chester was one. Seated near an open window, he was eagerly awaiting appearance of Miss Dashwood, with vague hope as to the effect which might be hereby produced upon his unbending son.—But self-willed young man, having meanwhile cautiously conversing with a lady, with Lena Cameron, very pale and quiet, working over a bit of embroidery, with figure that trembled a little, and eyes that were rarely lifted.

Suddenly the sharp notes of a bugle pierced the ears of the assembled company.

'There is Jo!' said Mrs. Page. 'I am glad that she is come, as now we can have dinner.'

Joe! dutifully inquired one of the ladies present.

'Yes, Josephine, my niece, Joe' said Mrs. Page, with a nod to the window. 'And the Squire who was devoted to gaiety, looked pleased and surprised. It was one of his favorite anticipations, that of his son's side playing to his, and so [illegible] after dinner hours until the morning should be heard. And so he came up to the piano and took a seat.

Miss Dashwood glanced at the retiring couple, then suddenly struck into passionate, which caused one old lady to vacate her seat near the window and the Squire, undisturbed, kept his post, until a hunter's song with all the accompaniment of 'horn, hound and [illegible]' drew some one to the casement and he, too, retreated.

'Now, Lena, one of your favorite songs,' said her aunt, quietly; and the girl sat down, and in a sweet, low, and somewhat plaintive voice, sang 'Bonnie Dean,' and 'Annie Laurie.'

'That is the music that I like,' remarked Squire Chester to his hostess sotto voce.

'Those charming old songs are worth all the modern fashionable that have ever been written.' And he looked though fully at Miss Dashwood, and then at Miss Cameron. Likewise, he took not to the discourse going on between the former and he was

'I do so dote on horses,' observed the young lady. 'I could not be happy under any circumstances, without at least two of one sex—a rider and a hunter. I delight in hunting, wherever it is to be had, and especially on that account, pass my summers among the mountains, though deer are becoming very scarce, and deerless almost as much so. I wish we had fox hunting here as in England. I prefer novels in which fox hunting scenes in—'Guy Livingston' for instance. What a splendid fellow he was! and what a beautiful country is ours, where there is invited anything to amuse one except the theatres. If I had my own way I should be an actress. I've always had a inclination for the stage, and really think I should make a good actress. Don't you think so, Mr. Chester?'

'Capital!' responded that young man, with a phrase and a pleasant, half sneer, look which did't escape the watchful eye, though he might and smile [illegible].

THE CAMERONS.

When a man, to gratify his ambition, enters public life, he should lay his account to give up many things which, as a private individual, he might have properly done. Mr. Hillyard Cameron is a member of the House of Commons, and he has accepted and held for several years the leadership of the Orange Association. He was a fellow-member of the murdered man, acting with him in the same party—supposed to have a more than ordinary, or sort of family feeling towards him. Would he not be kept the closer of any account of murdering a member of his own household? In the hazard to do so if the brief is offered? The House of Commons ought to be a sort of close; there ought to be a strong "esprit de corps" among its members. That "esprit de corps" in Britain has done many liberties for England and their descendants in the new world. Mr. McGee fell, every one is convinced, a martyr to his out spokenness in the cause of loyalty—because he denounced disloyalty among a clique of a class of his fellow countrymen. Orangeism pretends to cherish such loyalty and oppose such disloyalty to the uttermost—to hold all other things cheap beside the defence of the throne—to be willing to make any sacrifice in that cause. The slaughter of the champions of so good a cause ought to have saved him to forget the lawyer in person and the public man. For all these reasons it seems to us that it would have been much better for Mr. Hillyard Cameron to keep out of the case unless he entered it with connected like an honest conviction that no innocent man was about to suffer through mere prejudice. Then any sacrifice of personal ambition were well made to secure the ends of justice. In such a case he might well accept, not grumbling and loss of friends alone, but downright obloquy cheerfully. But was that Mr. Cameron's case? Let us wait until his lips are opened; before pressing our charges or attempting his defence. He does so that, at least, at the hands of friend and foe alike. But with respect to Mr. M. C. Cameron we do not feel any doubt at all. If Mr. McKenzie was right-fully there, and Mr. Hillyard Cameron not certainly and absolutely wrong, we conceive that there can be no doubt about the incontinence of any person in M. C. Cameron's position appearing in defence of criminals in Ontario. The administration of criminal justice has been unwisely and improperly entrusted to the local governments—contrary, as it seems to us, to the plain intent and meaning of the British American Act. It may be a good ground of appeal on Whelan's behalf that the proceedings have been taken by the agent of the Attorney General of Ontario, instead of the attorney General of the Dominion. Can Mr. M. C. Cameron argue that on behalf of his client? Ought he not to have argued it at the trial, in order to give his client every chance? Can he impartially advise (as he is sworn to do) the Crown, as prosecutor, and his client, who is prosecuted, which as a barrister he is bound to do? If convinced of the guilt of the prisoner, ought he, sworn to aid and further the execution of the laws, to aid his escape from punishment? If convinced he is innocent ought he to advise his law colleagues to prosecute? Ought he not, to save an innocent man's life, to give up everything and insist upon an abandonment of the case? Which of us would sleep well o' nights if we failed to do so? The case is going to appeal. The Attorney General or his agent must fight the appeal and side and the decision obtained below. He has as right Mr. Cameron's assistance and advice. Can he give it? Could he use a knowledge of Whelan's guilt, obtained as his counsel, as basis for advice to the government? Did not the case look, in fact, as if the Dominion Government (whose adviser Mr. O'Reilly has long been) were already prosecuting, and the Local Government, through Mr. Cameron, defending the murderer? Ought not such a scandal to have been avoided? Or, suppose the Attorney General for Ontario had appeared also in the case, as he should have done with Mr. O'Reilly as his junior. Would it have been seemly that Mr. Cameron should have been pitted against him on the other side? Viewed in any aspect, this intervention of Mr M C Cameron was a blunder of a very grave sort. So long as Mr. Cameron continues to adorn the Local. Governor, who directs prosecutions, he should have sufficient respect for propriety—not to say decency—to give up his Old Bailey practice in defence of criminals. He has the repute of a scrupulous, conscientious man, nice about what he does, caring much for the correctness of his conduct: life in a point, for instance in election matters, unwilling to resort to means which most others use however reluctantly and shamefacedly. Such a man ought to have been more scrupulously careful than another not to breed scandal in a case like this.—Montreal Gazette.

The Earth Giving up its Dead—Five Hundred Skeletons Set in Motion.

Private letters from Lima, Valparaiso, and other ports subject to the recent terrible commotion, give many facts and incidents not alluded to in newspaper accounts heretofor published. One writer reports a singular and horrible sight that occurred in Africa, on the south side of the ruined city: As the earth opened and yawned there arose up five hundred mummies, who stand in long lines facing the sea, every one of the skeletons in perfect preservation—the heads doubled up and supporting the chin—the bones drawn up, and the feet supporting the flexible body! This must be one of the most frightful sights possible and quite beyond description. The spot where the mummies now stand was once an old cemetery—nearly ninety years ago, and the skeletons are doubtless the fabled Incas and Indians, who either buried themselves alive or were interred in this manner.—They so respond exactly to the mummies of the Incas, which I described in a former letter as among the curiosities to be seen at Lima. As the ground recorded, what a ghastly spectacle, amid the throes of an earthquake, the coming up again to earth of these long buried skeleton remains—five hundred ghastly mummies,

The Times of the 19th inst., reproduces the following extract from the Liverpool Mercury:—"We have great pleasure in holding our readers look for a speedy termination of the Alabama difficulty. We are informed that Mr. Reverdy Johnson, the new envoy from the United States, has received instructions from Mr. Stewart that all papers and documents hitherto issued with regard to the Alabama question have been cancelled by his Government. He is further authorized to make such terms with our own Government as he thinks fit. The spirit in which he will enter upon this undertaking was abundantly shown by his speech at the Mid."

A man living in Augusta was arrested on Saturday last in Prescott for passing spurious American quarter dollars. He was taken before the magistrate and committed to Brockville gaol on Monday, to await his trial.

FUTURE OF SPAIN.

(From the London Times.)

One of the obstacles in the way of the Spanish revolutionists has always been the difficulty of supporting a new Government in the event of effecting the actual ballot of power. Various constitutions might be mentioned for the occasion should it occur now. Not some would command popular enthusiasm. Bourbons of the Don Carlos branch are out of the question, although it is rumoured that some of their partizans are bestirring themselves. The ecclesiastical party might support them. But Queen Isabella's religious tales have at least done her the service of subjecting the nation towards pretenders who have so pronounced a theological bias as herself. The liberal party, besides in all its various sections, would combine to vote a choice which would stultify the old efforts of all sides. A republic, which in at the other extremity of the pleas for the supply of the necessary, seems equally impossible. Some Paris journals announce that as the programme of the sergeants. It is probable, indeed, that certain of their chiefs may have entertained such a project; and Catalonia has always admired as a neighbour of their country with Portugal is no less official. The two nationalities are now perfectly distinct, whatever they may have been originally. They might agree to waive their respective jealous professions under the pressure of some great danger from without or within; but they do not feel any such pressure at present. It seems almost hopeless to expect moderation in the counsels of Spanish popular leaders. But when the close of Queen Isabella's reign arrived, whether this year or another, it will be happy for their country if they consider the alternative, to supply her place, to be either her son or her sister. In choosing the Duchess de Montpensier Spanish liberals would not be retrograding from the principles on which they fought the war of thirty-five years ago; and, the Duk would bring to public affairs the Orleanist capacity for business. But the setting aside in her favour of Queen Isabella's children would cause Spain with yet another family of pretenders the more to watch, and foster or create domestic difficulties.—The accepting of the Queen's abdication in her son's favour would, on the other hard as fully relieve the nation from a sovereign it cannot respect, but with out splitting it up into new factions to the waste of its force and energies. Spain, untrustworthy as the majority of its statesmen are, might yet furnish one—not so old a man, however, as Espartero, and with more force of character—one with the administrative qualities which Marshal Serrand, whatever other objections there may be to him, would supply—who could rule during the boy's minority without setting either the Narvaez or the Gonzalez Brave. But what is done must be done. The opinion is spreading fast in the Peninsula that Bourbons of any sort are unnecessary. In any case, Spain ought to be left free to choose for itself. We will hope that it will be. The Emperor Napoleon has been so honest and friendly neighbour.—But be it hitherto, with evident care, kept hands if clear of obligations to rescue the Queen from any consequences of her imprudence. Demonstrative friendliness of a personal character like that shown to the Comtes of Girgenti and the commission of French detective police were intended as a mere set off against his determined attitude of political neutrality. In the event of the Queen's deposition he would assuredly not be likely to break that resolution of neutrality in favor of any one of the possible candidates (Bourbons, constituent assemblies or Braganzas) in respect of whom his question would be, not which he had most love for, but which he felt least aversion from. England would be still less inclined to meddle. It would not if it could put a veto on the selection of this or that Bourbon, either in the male line or the female, whether Liberal or collateral. It would not interfere should no Bourbon be chosen. The inauguration even of a republican government would find it neutral much as it might lament the opening up of a new source of anarchy. The desire of this country is that Spain should be tranquil. It may believe that these results are to be attained more certainly in one way than another, but it has above all the conviction, which recollection of the Spanish Legion will strengthen, that they are not to be attained by foreign aid.

The traction-engine which was the summer seat from England to Canada to run on the gravel roads between Guelph, Walkerton, and Kincardine has been sent to Hamilton to the Provincial Exhibition where it will be offered for sale. On Friday the 18th inst. it passed through Clifford on the Elora road, where the writer had a conversation with the person in charge of it. The experiment has not been a success owing to the steep grades and the narrow and thin layer of gravel. The grades are often one in nine; if they were not steeper than one in sixteen it would work well. The difficulty does not arise from a lack of power either in ascending or in descending, but when one end of the boiler is too much elevated it becomes dry and very hot, and when it is lowered the water rushes into the excessively heated part and creates too much steam, which makes it dangerous. It weighs about eight tons, and draws from 24 to 28 tons, including itself. Its regular speed is four miles an hour. Without much difficulty it went in one day from Walkerton to Kincardine, a distance of from 28 to 30 miles, with a heavy load, and back the next day. It is to be regretted that the enterprise has to be abandoned, at least for the present.—Waterloo Chronicle.

To Make Cows Give Milk.

A writer who says his cow gives all the milk that is wanted in a family of eight persons, and from which was 260 pounds of butter in a year, gives the following treatment. He says:—

If you desire to get a large yield of rich milk, give your cow, three times a day, water, slightly warm, slightly salted, in which bran has been stirred, at the rate of 1 quart to 6 gallons of water. You will find if you have not found, by this daily practice that your cow will gain twenty lbs per-cent immediately, under the effect of it, and she will become so attached to the diet as to refuse to drink clear water unless very thirsty, but this more she will drink almost any time, and ask for more. The amount of the drink is no ordinary matter pail full each time, morning, noon and night. Your manual will then do her best at discounting the hottest. Four hundred pound of butter are often obtained from good stock, and instances are mentioned where the yield was even at a higher figure.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1868.

Smith and North Monaghan Agricultural Show.

The above show was held at Bridgenorth on Tuesday. There were not as many present as we expected, owing, we suppose, to the West riding Show being so near.

Among the exhibitors of thorough breds we noticed that John Walton and H. Collins were the chief exhibitors; but there were others who brought some very fine cattle.—Adam Hall and Joseph Scott both exhibited very fine looking thorough-bred bulls, Mr. Scott having just purchased his, a Devonshire, at the Hamilton Show, where we learn he took a prize. Horses seem to be as much thought of in Smith as horned cattle. We noticed several fine heavy teams.—There were two or three spans of nice carriage horses and a number of young animals. Mr. Thomas Tully showed some fine young colts and so did Mr. Garbutt. Sheep, however, caused the great excitement. In this class Henry Collins, Matthew Walton, Adam Hall, Wm. Gill and Emmanuel Mann showed some fine rams and ewes—Mr. Collins, Mr Gill, Mr Walton and Mr. Hall all taking prizes, and no doubt deservedly. The judges in this line had no little difficulty to determine the respective claims. In the interior of the Hall the Show did not equal former years. The ladies were not largely represented except in the butter line, of which there was some as nice looking butter as could be made. We do not think that the ladies of either Smith or Monaghan made as good an exhibition of their needle work, &c., as they ought to have done, especially the young ladies. This being leap year, a splendid lot of quilts, gents shirts, &c., would be no mean advertisement that there are young ladies in those townships as well as young farmers; what was showed, however, was very good and nice. Below is the prize list:—

A MAN SHOT.

On Saturday morning a man named Jas. Farley, a resident of Douro, at a very early hour came to Constable Flavelle and informed him that he (Farley) wished to give himself up to some officer of the law, as he had shot at one Lachlin Nolan, during the a ght, and he was afraid had wounded him fatally. He was then taken before Mr. T. Chamberlain J. P., before whom he stated that between one and two o'clock in the night Nolan had come to Farley's father's house and wished to get in. Farley, who say Nolan had previously threatened to kill him, refused to let him and declared if he did that he would shoot him. Nolan, however, persisted in going in, and just as he entered, Farley, who was close to him, shot him in the side, the gun being loaded with shot. Nolan then fell shouting that he was shot. Farley says that he at first examined the wound a little, but on being advised to go and give himself up, he left. He had crept through swamps and bushes for four of being caught and killed in the excitement. He was remanded till Monday, what it would be seen whether the wound would prove fatal or not, or until the doctor might be heard from. On Monday the father, mother and brother of Farly, the prisoner, were brought before the Mayor under a warrant signed by Patrick Leahy, J. P., as accomplices in the shooting of Nolan. Remanded for a week.

It appears that there has been some bad feeling between the Farlys and Nolans, arising out of a family quarrel about land. Farley's brother is married to a sister of Nolan.

CHANCERY.

The Chancellor of Ontario concluded the half-yearly sittings at Peterborough yester day after disposing of five cases.

Campbell vs. Martyn, was the first case and occupied the first day of the Court.—The bill was filed to restrain the use of excess of water beyond that stipulated for in the lease, to prevent defendant from removing certain valuable machinery, and to obtain compensation for the use of the extra water.

The Court held that the plaintiff, Campbell, was entitled to have defendant restrained from using the excess of water and referred it to the master to estimate the amount of compensation, if any, to which plaintiff Campbell is entitled, and that defendant is entitled to remove the machinery if he choose.

We noticed Mr. Speaker Cockburn present as a witness for the plaintiff. Counsel for plaintiff were Mr. Blake and Mr. Smith, Q. C., and Mr. Fairbairn for defendant.

Stephen vs. Conger, in this matter a decree was made by consent, Mr. Blake and Mr. Smith for plaintiff; and Mr. Cricklemore for defendant.

Barry vs. Barry, was a case to obtain specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a farm in Otonabee. The judgment was reserved. Mr. Smith for Plaintiff; Mr. Blake and Mr. Fairbairn for defence.

Leady vs. Elliott, was a short case, and ended in a decree in favour of Plaintiff.—Mr. Scott for Plaintiff; Mr. J. F. Dennistoun for defendant.

Robinson vs. Larushe, was brought to set aside a conveyance, on the ground that it was obtained improperly. Decree for plaintiff. Mr. Scott for plaintiff; Mr. Dennistoun for defendant.

A WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH.

On Friday night last a woman named Mrs. Murphy, residing in Ashburnham, was so burned by the upsetting of a coal-oil lamp that she died about daylight next morning. An inquest was held by Dr. Harvey, during which it was learned that Mrs. Murphy had had a globe of a lamp set in a hollowed turnip, and that as she was going to bed it was upset on her and on the bed clothes—setting fire to the whole. Her shouts attracted some people who lived in the same building, but they were either too late, or unable to put out the flames. She received such injuries as terminated her existence, in a few hours. Her children who were in bed at the time were saved, but not until some of them were more or less burned also. Had there been no one near to hear her cries for help, the house would have been consumed and the three children that were in it, as they were almost suffocated before got out—there being no light, and the smoke also rendering it difficult to find the bed where they were.

THE SCOTT ACT.—Our town authorities would do well to have an eye to those unfortunate creatures, as they are now gathering into Town from their summer dens. Lately the corners next to Hunter & Nicholls' & Bell's store has formed their glorious, evening rendezvous, at times much annoyance of passers-by that way.

PERSONAL.

Under the caption, "The Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway," the Hamilton Spectator says:—[illegible] the Directors of the Company, and is in favor of the location of the Company's railway in that portion. The personnel of the Board has been considerably altered. Mr. E. H. Rowland succeeds the present Mr. George Gooderham, of the firm of G. & H. Gooderham, and Mr. E. A. Harrison, M.P., succeeds Mr. Abbott Morrison, have been elected Directors. It came to be realized that there was more truth than poetry in one observation about the directing influence in this line of a clique, and a party clique at that. The objection was urged not only in the city but the subject the country. A change was rendered absolutely necessary, and it has been made in a way which reflects credit upon those further opposition on this score. The constitution of the Board is now of a mixed character, no particular political interest predominating in an objectionable manner. Mr. Gordon's substitution for Mr. Rowland at all events places an energetic man at the head of the company, and gives an assurance of vitality and earnest work. Mr. Gordon is, too the leading member of a wealthy firm, and a man of large enterprise, who will show his faith by his works in whatever he may undertake to do. He gives an earnest of the spirit in which he has undertaken the Presidency of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway Company in a letter which we publish to-day. He confidently expresses the hope that the railway from here to Arthur will be constructed and the trains running by the 1st of January, 1870, fifteen months from the present time.

Mr. Gordon is now acknowledged a gentleman of vitality, and earnestness in what he undertakes; a man of large enterprise, and whose faith is always shown by his works. Out of the mouth of his enemies cometh this praise.

The Committee of the Peterboro Protestant Home have to acknowledge the following donations made in September:—Mrs. Edwards, a parcel of boy's clothing and apples; Mr. Brodie, 56 and parcel of clothing; Mr. J. W. Haultain, a parcel of children's clothing; Mrs. Wallis, basket of plums; Mrs. Balmer, calico for the children; the Committee also acknowledges with thanks a donation of $30 from St. Andrew's church.

SHOOTING.—It has been reported here that one of the sons of Jack Cummins shot his brother. They have been in some of the shanties lumbering, and it is said that the shooting took place at one of the shanties. We have not yet heard particulars.

Ottawa has subscribed about $1,126.50 toward the relief of the people in Red River Settlement, who are threatened with severe suffering, the grasshoppers having totally destroyed their crops this year.

The Roman Catholic Quarrel at Chicago.

Bishop Duggan, of Chicago, as our readers are aware, has got into a serious quarrel with some of his clergy, and has suspended some half a dozen of them from their clerical functions. The last phase of the difference is the shutting of St. Paul's Church by the present incumbent, appointed by the bishop, against a meeting of the parishioners called to express sympathy with their late pastor—one of the suspended. Though it was intimated through the newspapers that no meeting could be held, a large crowd assembled, and very strong feeling against the bishop was expressed. Some were for breaking the doors, and were deterred only by being told that this would be burglary, and likely to be followed by very unpleasant results. Upon the whole there seems a great deal of very lively discussion going on, through the newspapers and otherwise, and the doings of the Bishop in selling some cemetery property are canvassed with special vehemence. It seems that Bishop Duggan claims the right of disposing of all church property as he pleases, without giving account to any one from the feet of the tabernacle all drawn in his name. This does not please a great number of the laity, who say that the German Catholic Bishops have so much power, and that they don't see why the Irish should. They call loudly for a change here in reference to a sum as large as $75,000; but we do not fear they will call in vain. Why should they grumble against a system which they have deliberately endorsed, and which they can assume be changed without being applied? Ecclesiastical matters, agreement of money matters is, however, becoming more and more a technical matter, whether by Bishops or Presbyters. The laity like to see how the money goes—especially when they themselves have contributed.—Globe.

Re-arrangement of the Military Divisions of [illegible] Dominion by the Minister of [illegible] Militia—New General Officers.

The undersigned re-publishes the memorials that under the authority of the 12th section of the "Act respecting the Militia and Defence of the Dominion of Canada," Canada is to be divided into 9 military districts, viz.:—one to comprise the Province of Nova Scotia; two in the Province of Quebec, and four in the Province of Ontario; and that they be numbered from west to east, viz., the four districts in the Province of Ontario shall be numbered from 1 to 4 and shall be called and known as military districts Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 respectively. The three districts in the Province of Quebec shall be numbered from Nos. 5 to 7 and shall be called and known as military districts Nos. 5 6 and 7 respectively. The Province of New Brunswick shall be numbered No. 8, and shall be called and known as military district of No. 8; and the Province of Nova Scotia shall be numbered No. 9, and shall be called and known as military district No. 9.

And that under the authority of the 12th section of that Act, the territorial divisions which shall form each of the three military districts of Quebec, Ontario to be follows, as far as Peterborough is concerned viz:—

[illegible]

The Counties of Durham east and west ridings, Victoria north and south ridings, Peterborough east and west ridings, Northumberland east and west ridings, Hastings east and north ridings, Prince Edward, Lennox, Addington, Frontenac and the city of Kingston shall form military district number three.

The Order-in-Council preventing the transport of cattle from the United States through Canada ceased to have effect on the 5th inst. The railway companies will, however, be required to attend to the proper disinfection of cattle cars for a month or so, by which time, it is hoped, all danger will have passed.

NORWAY OATS.—At the Farmers' Club, American Institute, Tuesday, August 25th, a considerable interest was created by the exhibition of several specimens of varieties of Norway oats, grown at various places in Vermont, New York and New Jersey. The heads were so prolific in yield of grain, and apparently so healthy, that there was sufficient reason to accept and welcome it as a new and valuable addition to the grain resources of the country. The oat crop in the United States for a long time has been failing, and farmers either have not cultivated it well or allowed it to run out by neglect. The present variety appears to come in at the right time to be appreciated, and is so well endorsed by cultivators as to merit the attention of the public. Its origin is quite singular. In a package of peas sent out in 1864 by the Department of Agriculture there was found a single oat of an exceptingly large and plump appearance. It was planted in a garden for experiment, and received good treatment. The produce from it the first year was 2,795 grains. The next year the most of these were sown, and their produce amounted to over three bushels; and they have continued to increase in like proportion until the present time, when there are several thousand bushels on hand. Their height is about 5 to 5½ feet. They ripen as soon as the ordinary oat; are much large, more prolific, and heavier than any variety we ever saw. Some cultivators report instances of luxuriant yield, like the following: 253,437 grains from 21 oats; 5 bushels produced from 1 pint sown; from one single oat planted 94 stalks have sprung up and borne fruit. From small patches sown there has been grown at the rate of 159 bushels per acre; while the usual average of produce per acre is about 60 bushels. Making allowance for extra enthusiasm on the part of those who make these reports, it is still noteworthy. Our own belief is that it is adapted better to cultivation in latitudes north of 40 degrees than to those south of it. It succeeds finely in the West.

SPAIN.—Marshall Serrano, accompanied by several generals of the army, entered Madrid on October 4th, in triumph. Great preparations were made for his reception. Streets and buildings, public and private, were superbly decorated, and large civic and military processions escorted the generals through the city. Houses, sidewalks, and public squares, along the route of the procession, were crowded with citizens, who received Serrano and the generals with wild enthusiasm. The procession was followed by a parade and review of the national guard. This was a great patriotic display, and was made the occasion of striking manifestation of war. The troops carried aside by their flags and banners, on which were inscribed, "Down with the Bourbons!" "Sovereignty of the People," "Religious Liberty," and other mottoes of similar character. At the termination of the review Marshall Serrano made a patriotic address to the immense multitude of citizens and soldiers, in the course of which he announced that he had united with Gen. Prim in calling Marshal Espartero, the Duke of Victoria, to the head of the State. The formation a new Cabinet has been completed as follows: Marshal Serrano, President; Castello, Minister of Commerce; Zapata, Minister of the Marine; Aguirre, Minister of Justice; Gen. Prim, Minister of War; Olavaga, Minister of Foreign Affairs; and Madoz, Minister of Finance. Manuel de la Cousina has been arrested.

TAKING THE VEIL AT A NUNNERY WITHIN THE COMMUNION OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—It will be remembered that at the Wesleyan Conference held recently in England, the opinion was expressed that the Church of England is gradually ceasing to be a Protestant Church. If the Rev. Mr. Jackson and his friends are in the habit of reading the Church papers, their convictions on this subject are likely to be strengthened. The account of a church celebration at Brighton, and of another at All Saint's Church, Lambeth, would have seemed in their proper place in the Talbot; but they were not so startling as the description given in the Church News of a young lady taking the veil at Feltham nunnery. The postulant was dressed as a bride, and the father superior cut of her hair, having a towel spread over his knees to receive it. While the nuns sang hymns, 'Farewell, thou world of sorrow,' was being sung by the sisters, her black hair was all cut off, the black long tresses falling on the ground around her. Her dress was changed and and she put on the Benedictine habit. She walked to the altar steps holding her lighted taper, and while she was receiving the Sacrament the choir curtain fell, and neither she nor the other sisters were seen any more. The Feltham nuns, it appears, lead a life of strict seclusion, never going out and only seeing visitors through a grating. They recite the Benedictine office and observe the Benedictine rules. And all this takes place under the superintendence of persons within the communion of the Church of England. The account concludes with the hope that the Pope will make the approaching council at Rome indeed Ecumenical by inviting the Anglican and Eastern bishops to attend.

A movement is on foot to enlarge the Galt Grammar School, so that it shall be able to accommodate 200 scholars. Its present capacity is only 140. It is proposed to ask the Council to issue debentures to the amount of $4,000, bearing seven per cent interest, and payable in ten years, in order to make the necessary enlargement. The Reporter says that parties are coming from all parts of the Province, and it is impossible to accommodate them as at present.

By this means they will extract 140 tons of lead at a cost of two dollars per ton—they declare dressing and everything, and eight dollars freight to Montreal, or they will put it at $12 a ton. It is worth in Montreal $100, leaving a net profit of $40 per ton or $20,000 on the quantity carried out. This amount of lead can be produced in three months. This would make a dividend of twenty dollars on ten dollar shares with two calls paid on them. The quartz of which there is a large quantity worth two cents per lb, is not included in the above calculation. When the drift has been [illegible] is going on, men will be employed sinking the shaft to a further depth of 40 feet, to prepare for another stope which will be carried up towards the surface the same as last. There will also be another shaft, started 200 feet further north, for the joint purp ses of getting more ore and also for ventilation. The stock of this Company now stands first-class, and when there are six more shafts up and by them on this property, each yielding $100,000 similarly, no doubt it will rise in price.

Deplorable Condition of Mexico—Universal Reign of Crime.

(From the Houston, Texas, Times, Sept. 17.)

Our exchanges from Mexico are filled with accounts of robbery, rapine and murder, almost without a parallel in the history of that last and abandoned people. The Brownsville Ranchero is full to overflowing with disgusting records of the outrages by that semi-barbarous race. But the worst feature of all in that American every where in the bloody Republic, appears to be the objective point of Mexican hatred. In plain truth, the condition of Mexico now is far more appalling than at any former period in her history, bloody as that is.—But a few days since we read an account of a band of desperadoes penetrating the heart of the city of Puebla and carrying off one of the wealthiest merchants of that territorial well-governed city. This merchant was held for a ransom, but not receiving the $15,000 demanded the tortured their victim, and finally killed him. Heretofore occurrences of the kind were rare, but now they have become more than fearfully common. Even the walled-in city of Puebla had to yield to the invasion. Around the gates of nearly all the cities of Mexico, are constantly hovering bands of thieves, who allow no trader to pass with out paying by petty loan of a few dollars. Refusal to pay the perpetrator of a new dollar-and-a-half, is met by a searching of pockets and the taking of (when the sum originally demanded. He is then [illegible] searched in the same asking down and possible death of the traveler. But the most notable feature of the state of affairs is, that the Mexican Government instead of [illegible] the [illegible] of peace and quiet to the country, [illegible] to [illegible] which, to say the least, was a Government while it lasted.

Occasional croppings out of the idea of confederating the British Empire are to be met with in the most opposite directions, and in various papers. "Colonial representation in the Imperial Parliament" was held and for the present discredited project. Mr. Howe's pamphlet eighteen months ago advocating a sort of Federal Parliament for the Empire and the Colonies excited but momentary attention, while the suggestion of a Canadian contemporary that the secession of Confederation in British North America might, perhaps, suggest the manner by the Parent State would be able to overcome the "Irish difficulty" did not even challenge criticism. But the idea of some writer and yet closer union of the Empire than that at present existing though it sleepeth is not dead. Now and again it finds expression, and the latest manifestation we have seen is the following waif at present going the rounds of the press:

"The Duke of Manchester, in a letter to a London newspaper, says: I should like to see the colonies obtain a share in the government of the empire, by means of a council composed of representatives of the United Kingdom and of the colonies in due proportion, and thus some I should be consulted on all questions which affect the colonies and the United Kingdom, or more than one colony."

Considerable doubt existed even among Republicans, up to a late date, about the ability of Gen. Butler to secure a seat in Congress in his own district. This has been removed, for on Monday last he was nominated for re-election to Congress for the Fifth District of Massachusetts by a vote in convention of 175 to 6 for all his opponents.

BOGUS COIN.—It is believed that a large amount of bogus silver was issued in the city during the Exhibition week, as spurious pieces, of the denomination of half-dollars, are by no means scarce. Several parties in the city were victimized by a party of three suspicious looking fellows, who were doubtless engaged in getting off the spelter.—Hamilton Times.

HEAD AND EARS IN DEBT.—A shop went to a pork shop to buy pork on credit. First he bargained for a lot of pig's ears; next, the shopman seeming willing to trust, he bought a pig's head; then, growing bold, he said, "I believe I will take that ham." "No you won't," replied the shopman; "you are head and ears in debt now."

IMPORTATION OF TOBACCO BEES STOCK.—The Whitby Chronicle says Mr. John Miller, of Pickering, the well-known stock breeder, has been lately making some valuable additions to his already large and choice stock. During his recent visit to England he made purchases at some very select lots of Cotswolds, Lincolns, and Leicesters, from the Duke of Means, Lane, Garne, Towlet, and Coit, of Gloucestershire. The latter consists of 34—14 rams and 20 ewes. He also purchased a Booth three year old Durham heifer, of the far famed herd of Mr Torr, of Aylesby, in Lincolnshire, at an expense of $1,000.

The telegraphic despatches give an account of a terrible disaster which took place Tuesday morning on Lake Ontario, resulting the loss by fire of the propeller Far ever [illegible] and three of the crew were saved.

DO IT AT ONCE.

"It is among the most strange and debased traits in the character and conduct of the horse that he positively refuses to be cured of any disease or lameness, however slight, by any remedy, however simple, unless it be administered in the most inconvenient manner, and at the most inopportune time. Hence it is that so many worthless nostrums are palmed off upon the public, and thousands of horses are annually killed by the use of them. Now, I have a remedy for all the diseases of the horse, which I will warrant to cure in every instance, if given according to the directions, and which is so pleasant to take that the animal will actually lick it off the manger, and so cheap that it will not cost more than a dollar to cure the worst case in the world. I call my remedy 'Dr. Tobey's Celebrated Horse Powders,' and I will warrant them to cure the worst case of Heaves, Distemper, Inflammation of the Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Pleurisy, Fever, Mumps, Worms, Yellow Water, Hide Bound, Colic, Founder, Locked Jaw, Pink Eye, Thrush, Scratches, Grease, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Loss of Appetite, Surfeits, Hots, Chills, Blind Staggers, Rheumatism, Lameness, Weak Back, Sprains, Swellings, Diseases of the Skin, Blood, Stomach, Bowels, Urinary Organs, Evil Habits, Shedding Hair, Rough Coat, Thick Wind, Pole Evil, Fistula, Poll Evil, Ringbone, Spavin, Diseases of the Feet, Hoof Ail, Hoof Bound, Hoof Rot, Hoof Crack, Hoof Evil, Hoof Fever, Hoof Disease, Hoof Swelling, Hoof Inflammation, Hoof Lameness, Hoof Sprain, Hoof Weakness, Hoof Wound, Hoof Injury, Hoof Pain, Hoof Ache, Hoof Trouble, Hoof Difficulty, Hoof Affection, Hoof Complaint, Hoof Ailment, Hoof Malady, Hoof Infirmity, Hoof Weakness, Hoof Debility, Hoof Feebleness, Hoof Languor, Hoof Lassitude, Hoof Prostration, Hoof Exhaustion, Hoof Collapse, Hoof Death, and all other diseases of the horse, cow, sheep, dog, cat, pig, chicken, duck, goose, turkey, and every other animal that walks, runs, flies, swims, crawls, creeps, or lives in the water, earth, air, or fire,

The Devil and the Lawyer.

The devil came up to the earth one day,
And into the Court House he wended his way,
Not as an attorney, with a very grave face,
Was proceeding to argue the points in the case.

Now a lawyer his majesty never had seen,
For to his dominions none ever had been,
And he felt very anxious the reason to know
Why none had been sent to the region below.

Then the field of his agents—his majesty thought,
Had none of the lawyers had ever been caught.
And for his own pleasure he felt a desire
To come to the earth and the reason inquire.

Well, the lawyer who rose with a visage so grave,
Made out his opponent a consummate knave,
And the Devil was greatly amused
To hear the attorney so sadly abused.

But as soon as the speaker had come to a close
The counsel opposing him fiercely arose,
And heaped such abuse on the head of the first
That made him a villain of all men the worst.

Then they quarrelled, contended and argued so long,
That hard to determine which of them was wrong.
And concluding he'd heard enough of the fuss,
Old Nick turned away and sollilo'ed to us:

"If they're puzzled the court with their villainous cavil,
And I'm free to confess it, they'd puzzle the Devil,
For arguments are right to let lawyers alone,
If I had them they'd swindle me out of my throne."

"THAT'S VERY ODD."

A gentleman was recounting his travels one evening after dinner to a friend, and commenced in the way:—

'When I was traveling in Russia, I was attacked, in crossing a forest, by twelve wolves; and finding my post-chaise window I fired my revolver, and killed the first wolf. And strange to say, his companions stopped and devoured him, and then came on to the fight. I shot another, and my postillion killed a third, both of which were devoured and so we went on until only one wolf remained; and I killed him as we were entering the town, and I observed that he was immensely fat. He, of course, had devoured all his companions.'

'Dear me,' said the friend, 'that's very odd.'

'Very odd,' said the traveler; 'but not nearly so odd as that which happened on the following day. I was out shooting antelopes, and fired at one as he stood on the top of a crag, and odd to say, the ball passed through his neck, and killed another which was standing on a crag a quarter of a mile off.'

'That's very odd,' said the friend.

'Yes, but the odd part of the story is to come. The report of my rifle so alarmed an old he-bear which happened to be up in a tree, that he fell to the ground, broke his neck and died on the spot.'

'Well,' said the friend, 'upon my soul, that's very odd.'

'Yes, odd,' said the traveler; but not so odd as the sequel to my story. A thunderstorm came on, and I sought refuge in a hollow tree, and, to my horror, I descended into a nest of young bears, where I had not been very long when I heard a strange tapping—the unmistakable signs of the return of the she-bear. She ascended the tree, and was descending the hollow. With the rapidity of lightening I seized her by the tail, and plunged my hunting-knife into her haunches; upon which she started upwards, dragging me with her, and as she went down on one side of the tree, I escaped by the other.'

'Now, really, that's very odd,' said the friend, 'as it's the first time in my life I ever heard of a bear with a tail.'

'Yes,' replied the traveler; 'and it was the only time I ever met with one, and that's very odd.'

A marriage in high life took place in Montreal last summer, after which the happy pair sailed for Europe. While enjoying the honey-moon in Italy, the bride took a fancy to a young Italian, who was acting as guide, and eloped with him. The deserted husband at once left for home. The Italian, finding the lady had not much money, gave her the slip, and she also left for Montreal where she arrived a short time after her husband. A divorce is to be the result.

MATRIMONIAL PASTE.—"Really my dear," said poor Mr. Jones to his better half, "you have sadly disappointed me. I once considered you a jewel of a woman, but you've turned out only a bit of matrimonial paste." "Then my love" was the reply, "console yourself with the idea that paste is very adhesive, and will stick to you as long as you live."

BLOWING UP.—A little girl on hearing her mother say that she intended to go to a ball and have her dress trimmed with "bugles," innocently enquired if the bugles would blow up while she danced. "Oh no," said the mother, "your father will do that when he discovers I have brought them."

A BRIDE'S REFLECTIONS.—A handsome young bride was observed to be in deep reflection on her wedding day. One of her bridesmaids asked her the subject of her meditations. "I was thinking which of my old beaux I should marry, if I should become a widow."

SUGGESTIVE.—At a fashionable wedding the other day, the carriage of the happy pair which was on its way to the railway station, was delayed by the narrow street being blocked up by loads of cradles, and baby wagons, to the great amusement of the spectators.

A rowdy, intending to be very witty, thus accosted a lady in the street: "Madam, can you inform me where I can see the elephant?" "No; but if I had a looking-glass, I'd show you a very large Donkey." The rowdy slid.

Prentice says: "Three years ago a man in Mississippi cheated us out of twenty dollars, and now his son cheats us out of about the same sum. The young man's propensity to cheat is probably the only thing that ever he came honestly by."

"You, say, Mrs. Jones, that the prisoner stabbed deceased. Was it in the throat or in the abdomen?" "No, sir, it was in the street—I need it with my own blessed hayes."—"That'll do. Call the next witness."

THE SOFTEST SEAT.—A man, describing a church in Scotland, writes to a friend: "No velvet cushions in our pews. We don't go in for style. The fattest person has the softest seat."

There is a man in Vermont who feels his geese on ice filing, and gathers steel pens from their wings.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate that Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and mechanically fact that one great cause of disease among children is Worms alone, it must at once be evident to everybody, if properly called up to the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from untimely graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which we cannot by Worms: Deranged appetite, eyes, acute distress, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, sunken eyes, fainting, vomiting, coughs, itching of the nose, &c. With little children, Worms, if not relieved, frightful diseases, and a gradual wasting away will follow. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are valuable and safe to administer to the child: drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

Poetry.

"FOUND DEAD IN THE STREET."

The labor is over and done;
The sun is gone down in the west;
The birds are asleep every one,
And the world has gone to its rest—
Sleepers on beds of down.
Then is across of silk and gold,
Soft, as on roses new-blown,
Flops the great monarch of cold!
And one little sleeper all under the sky.
Out in the night and cold!
Alone in the wide, wide world,
Christless, motherless he;
Begging or stealing to live, and whirled
Like a waif on an angry sea.

The daisy looks up from the grass,
Fresh from the fingers of Night,
To welcome the birds as they pass,
And drink in fresh rivers of light.
Sleepers on mother's breast,
Wake to summer and mirth;
But one little sleeper has gone to his rest,
Never to waken on earth—
Dead! found dead in the street,
All forsaken and bare;
Damp from head to the feet,
With the dews of the sweet May morn!

Dead—for the want of a crust!
Dead—in the cold night air
Dead—and under the dust,
Without even a word of prayer:
In the heart of the wealthiest city
In this most Christian land,
Without even a word of pity
Without even a word of pity,
Or the touch of a kindly hand!

Selections.

UNCLE OBED'S VISIT.

It would have required no very powerful stretch of the imagination for Mr. Amber's guests to have fancied of some tropical isle on that festal night. The stately palm-trees were wreathed with deeply tinted blossoms, the air was frightened with the perfume of heliotrope and tube roses, and the chandeliers that hung from the frescoed ceiling, like coronals of quivering fire, threw a noonday brilliance over the bustling crowd.

At the further end of the superb drawing room stood Mrs. Amber herself—a stately matron in sapphire velvet, illuminated by the pale glimmer of pearls. No one would ever have imagined from the unruffled self-possession of her manner, that this night was the crisis of her false existence—the turning point of her life.

Through all the hum and murmur of the aristocratic assemblage—through all the crash of arriving carriages, and stormy melody of the band beyond, Mrs. Amber's quick ear caught one low, hesitating step on the threshold. It was her husband.—She beckoned to him with her jewelled fan and whispered in scarcely audible accents:

'Well.'

'Just as I expected. We are ruined, can't keep above water a week. Norris has failed and we shall follow suit!'

'A week!' murmured Mrs. Amber, thought wildly—a week! One can accomplish a good deal in a week. Have you observed how attentive young Gould is to Cecily?' she added musingly.

'He won't be after ——'

'Hush!' Mrs Amber exclaimed, with a quick glance around, as if apprehensive that the very walls would bear the whispered colloquy. 'If she wins a rich husband before the world learns of your distress, we shall be tolerably safe. For your own sake keep a cheerful face; mingle with your guests—throw off that perturbed frown. I tell you all will yet be bright,'

Mr. Amber shrugged his shoulders and whistled half a bar of some pop lar strain, and then turned away to obey his wife's behests to the best of his ability, while Mrs. Amber, her smoothe ow all wreathed in dulcet smiles, resumed the task of receiving her gay friends.

Suddenly there was a sort of thrill and flutter through the apartment—he crowd opened as if to make way for somebody and Mrs. Amber came forward, expecting to meet some distinguished arrival.

'Good evening, Tildy. I tabulated you'd all be gone to bed at this time o' night, but I see you don't keep New Hampshire hours! Hain't for-otten me, have you? Why, I'm your Uncle Obed Jenkins.'

Mrs. Amber turned pale through all her artificial bloom, at the unexpected addition to her company that stood before her, his honest features beaming with genuine delight. It was a ruddy faced old man, in a suit of hot or nut cloth, carrying in one hand a neatly-tied handkerchief, containing his wardrobe, and in the other hand a crooked walking stick, full of knots and gnarls—such a stick as grows in dense swamps where the young saplings have to twist their little arms in every possible direction to get a bit of sunshine, and grow up in the most awkward of shapes.

'I declare,' resumed Uncle Obed, 'you're fine as a fiddle, Tildy—and where is them little girls you set up summer before last, to get red cheeks at their uncle's? Grown up to young ladies—well, of it ain't beaten.'

And Uncle Obed extended a bony hand to Miss Cecily, who drew back, and put up a gold-mounted pince-glace with an air of well bred astonishment.

'I never heard that anything ailed Cecily's eyesight, Tildy,' said Uncle Obed in extreme perplexity. 'And that young fellow in the regimental is her beau, I suppose? Well, young folks will be young folks, and me old men hadn't ought to interfere. That's what I always said when you and Jem Amber used to talk in the old side hall orchard after you had come the whitegy.'

This startling allusion primared the already crestfallen ranks of Mrs. Amber's aristocracy drew her gloved hand from the man's cordial grasp, with an energy which puzzled him, and spoke with compressed lips.

'I am very sorry, sir, that you were got erroneously made aware you purposed honoring us with a visit. In that case we would have prepared ourselves for the pleasure. I regret to say, it will be unconvenient to receive you.'

'What!' ejaculated the astonished old man, who was really uncertain whether or neither had heard aright the words of his lady niece—the girl whom he had ben't up and agreed for when others rejected the charms of the grandeur orp an.

'This is a big house, Tildy,' said the old man, in a slightly tremulous accent. 'and I should be' thought there was a corner in it big enough for Uncle Obed to wasn't escalating to stay long, not ever a one bit of forth as I am I'll go home to-morrow on the very first train that leaves if I'm in the way.'

Mrs. Amber made no answer, but tapped lightly on her gymnastic bracelet one slender finger, and Uncle Obed turned away with a moisture in his eyes that made curious rings of mist around the glaring jets of flame in the chandelier.

Uncle Obed was wishing himself well out of the heartless scene, when suddenly a pair of plump little arms were thrown around his neck, and a cheek of ember and pinker than a damask rose, was pressed to his brown face. It was Mrs. Amber's youngest daughter, his own pet niece, the incorrigible romp, who had climbed cherry trees and stole birds' nests innumerable in the meadows of the old homestead two or three years ago. And there she was, a young lady in pink silk and cameo bracelets!

'Dear Uncle Obed, I have only just heard of your arrival; I am glad to see you if no one else is.'

And another shower of kisses succeeded greatly to the disconsolate and envy of the young man who had escorted Miss Amber to the spot, and stood surveying the pretty little tableau.

'Go about your business,' she exclaimed gaily; I've got so much to say to Uncle Obed,'

And Mr Harry Latimer obeyed, but rather ungraciously.

'Just the same little Fanny as ever,' exclaimed the old man, parting her curls with delighted fondness. 'You haven't changed, though Tildy has.'

'No; and never will change for you, Uncle Obed' said the girl. 'I have'n forgotten how kind you were to me up at the old homestead; how you shielded my transgressions, concealed my faults, and always had a smile for naughty little Fanny.'

And she chatted on, entirely unheeding her mother's frowns of displeasure. Fanny had always been the most unmanageable of Mrs. Amber's daughters and the worthy matron secretly resolved to lecture young lady at her leisure.

Uncle Obed was by no means deficient in observation, and even while he related the chances and changes which three years had wrought in the vicinity of the old home stead, he perceived the rosy blood mount to Beatrice's cheek every time Mr. Latimer passed.

'Now, little girl,' said he, 'it's my turn to ask questions. Who is that young fellow there by the window.'

Fanny looked up and then down, played with the middle button on Uncle Obed's and answered very softly:

'Mr. Latimer.'

'Hemph! I s'pose that isn't all you can tell me about him?'

There was a quiver of hesitation, and then Fanny hid her cheek on the old man's shoulder, and told Uncle Obed all.

'Then why on earth didn't you marry him?' ejaculated the old gentleman, as the close of the little life romance.

'He's only a poor lawyer,' sighed Fanny, 'and papa will never consent. But one thing I am resolved. I will not marry any one else, least of all that odious Colonel Woodall not if he were worth twenty times twenty thousand dollars!'

The stamp of her fairy foot gave emphasis to the determined words as she spoke. Fanny was very much in earnest, and if Colonel Woodall had happened to be present, he would have concluded that his chance, to say the least of it, was rather small.

'Twenty thousand dollars, eh?' slowly repeated Uncle Obed. 'Well Fanny, it's a hard world to live in—a hard, griping, gri ding world. I never thought so before but somehow to-night has borne it upon me.'

When Uncle Obed went away next day he was comparatively cheerful. The fond words and loving smiles of little Fanny had fallen like drops of balm upon the sore part of his heart.

There it was, nestling in the hill side, that gray old farm house, with the giant sycamores tossing their silvery branches above it, and the lilac bushes nodding before the windows. Uncle Obed thought it never looked so pleasant, in the lovely gold of sunset, with the purple woods rising against the bright fare-well horizon.

But he did not stop in the cosy room, where the eight day clock ticked away so peacefully as if its master had not been absent two whole days—a thing which hadn't happened before in half a century; he went straight up stairs, to a tiny nook under the eaves, who e he kept an old sort of a trunk curiously scented with camphor, and bound together with strong clasps and rivets of brass. From this receptacle he took a bit of paper, and held it so that the light fell on its contents.

'Twenty thousand,' he muttered. 'Well, I'm no old man, and that gal is just the light of my eyes. It shall buy her happiness, the blue-eyed girl, instead of lying unheeded in the garret chamber! she deserves it all!'

Uncle Obed pocketed the document, took his precious trunk, and went down stairs wiping the glasses of his spectacles.

* * * * * *

The great financial crash had come, and the house of Amber & Co. was among the first on the list. It was true that Mrs. Amber had been expecting the failure, but the blow fell none the less heavy for the anticipation. Somehow her pluck had all deserted her. Young Gould had in some inconceivable manner discovered the true state of the Amber exchequer, and simply concluded that it was a trifle to waste his personal charms and elegant stock of small talk on an ineligible fair one as Miss Cecilia. Col. Woodall had also shown unequivocal signs of withdrawing his suit—not at all to Mrs. Fanny's displeasure. In short everything seemed to be going wrong and the only satisfied member of the confederation were Harry Latimer and Miss Fanny.

It was a gloomy morning of rain and tempest, and Mrs. Amber sat in a sort of slovenly deshabille, in a narrow room of one of the third rate hotels. Her own stately home had fallen a prey to greedy creditors some time since. Mr. Amber, at an opposite table, was slowly opening and glancing over his letters.

'Hallo!' he suddenly exclaimed, dropping one and catching it up again.

'What's the matter, papa?' asked Fanny.

'How you do agitate one's nerves!' said Mrs. Amber.

'Hang your nerves! here's something to set them in a flutter—a letter from a New England lawyer, announcing that Uncle Obed Jenkins the uncle Fanny Amber a present of twenty thousand dollars, to become her property on the day that she marries Harry Latimer,'

'Twenty thousand dollars!' shrieked Mrs. Amber and Cecilia in chorus, 'and nothing for us!'

'Twenty thousand dollars,' murmured Fanny, with a crimson spot on her cheek. O, how happy we shall be! Dear, kind old Uncle Obed!'

'You're a nice manager,' snarled Mr. Amber, turning sharply to his wife. 'It was for this, was it, that you treated Mr. Jenkins so rudely on the evening of your last party?'

'I didn't know—I didn't suppose—' sobbed Mrs. Amber. 'He never told me he had my money.'

'Of course not. It's enough to make a man crazy to have such an idiot as you for a wife. Twenty thousand dollars would have been a overything to me just now, when there is such a scarcity of ready money in the market. And what's worse, the sum is to be tied up, that nobody but Fanny can touch a cent of it.'

Mr. Amber strode out of the room, giving the door a very energetic slam, and Mrs. Amber went gracefully into hysterics, while Fanny sat looking at the letter, which had been a messen er of so kind a happiness to her, with scarlet lips half apart, and a light of deep gratitude in her eyes.

'What will he say?' she pondered.—'Will he not think it a bad seed dream? No more weary waiting—no more procrastination. O, how can I ever thank Uncle Obed sufficiently.'

But Uncle Obed was already thanked.

When, upon Fanny's wedding day the deed which constituted her a small heiress was delivered into her hands, it was enclosed in a narrow strip of blue paper, which the old man used to his correspondence.—Upon this was written one single line, and the tears suffused the fair young bride's eyes as she read the words: 'In memory of Uncle Obed's visit.'

THE PURSE OF GOLD.

A TRUE STORY.

Sarah Goodwin was the name of a poor seamstress residing in a large city. She was not wholly friendless; but the one whom she knew, and who would have aided her in her struggles, were very poor and could not. So she, a widow with four boys from the ages of four to nine years, struggled through winter's cold and summer's heat, providing her little family with bread, and that was all. Her boys were good children, always in their homes after nightfall, and giving their mother every half-penny of their little earnings, as often as they found work to do. At last he mother fell sick and through a week she had no other attendance save the occasional help of a neighbor and the constant aid of her poor little boys. It was touching to behold their kind ways and to hear their gentle words. Everybody said that they would be blessed, in coming years for their thoughtful love.

Morning and night they read together the Bible as there they found a Saviour—even him who had loved them, and given himself to them. The widow was a humble believer, and rejoiced in hope that her sins were forgiven her through the merits of Jesus, whom she truly loved.

The widow recovered; but it was now the middle of a bitter winter, and their little stock of fuel was nearly gone. As soon as her strength permitted, she walked through the cold of a cheerless day to the shop of her employer, and told his manager her sad story. But he said it was hard times; her sickness had made room for others as badly off as herself; and they had not one stitch of work to give her. With a sunken heart, but praying, to keep her courage up, the poor woman toiled on from shop to shop until it became late; and, what with tears and the darkness, she could hardly see her way home.

'If Mr. Hart had himself been there,' she said to herself, bending to the strong wind, and drawing her scanty shawl closer about her form, 'I know he would have given me work.'

As she whispered this through her chattering teeth, a tall gentleman passed by her, and as he did so, something fell to the ground and lay upon the crusted snow.—Sarah paused; she had heard the noise made by the little packet, and a strange feeling led her to search for it. Oh, joy! it was a purse, heavy and filled to the brim; yellow gold shining by the gold with it, as she carried it towards a lighted window.

'My poor boys, they shall want food no more!' she cried; 'this is gold! I think God must have put it in my way, for He saw I was in despair.'

Suddenly, like a flash of lightening, the thought occurred to Sarah, that not one half-penny of the treasure was honestly hers. But a moment she lingered, guessing the misery with her numbed fingers, the sorrowful tears shining down her thin cheeks; then, starting forward to find the owner of the purse, she walked hurriedly up the street, fearful that the temptation, should she arrive at her poor room and see her hungry children, might prove too strong for her honesty.

Opposite a great hotel, as she stood thinking which way to take, she saw the stranger enter. She knew him by the long tear which curled to his shoulders; and, timidly crossing the street, she made her way into the hall and there, bewildered by the light, he knew not what to say, till Sarah asked by a servant what she wanted. Of course, she could not do more than describe the stranger by his tall stature and flowing hair. But he had already gone out again; she must call on the morrow, they said, and ask for Ashcraft.

The next morning, having eaten nothing,—for she could not touch a farthing of the money,—she was admitted into the room where sat the stranger. He arose as she entered, and gazed with a curious air till she presented the purse. Then he started with pleased surprise, laid down his paper, took the gold and carefully counted it over.

'It is all safe,' he said, 'you have not taken—'

'Not one piece, sir,' she cried eagerly, trembling as she spoke.

'You seem poor,' remarked the stranger

'I am poor,' she replied.

'Got a family, I suppose?'

'Four little boys, sir; I am a widow.'

'Humph! so I suppose; that's the old story.'

'Ask Mr. Hart, the tailor,' cried the widow, stepping forward a little; 'he knows me well; he knows that though I am poor I am honest.'

A bright red spot burned on her cheeks as she spoke, and she forced back the tears.

'Now confess,' said the stranger, rising and walking to and fro before the fire, 'tell me, did you not expect a large reward for this?'

'I did think, perhaps—' and she turned with quivering lips to the door

'Stop, stop!' cried the stranger; 'you know you would never have returned the purse had you not expected to be well paid for it.'

'Sir!' said the widow, her voice rising beyond its usual tone, and her thin form erect.

The stranger paused, holding the purse in his hand; then drawing forth a small coin, offered it to her.

For a moment she drew back; but then remembering that her poor boys were hungry at home, and in bed because there was no fire, she burst into tears as she took it saying, 'This will buy bread for my poor children,' and hurrying away, she buried the bitterness of that morning in her own heart.

It was four o'clock on the same day.—Sarah Goodwin sat by a scanty fire, busy in sewing patches on the very poor clothes of her four boys.

'Run to the door, Jimmy,' she said to the eldest, as a loud knock was heard.

'Oh, mother!' the boy cried returning, 'a big bundle for us! What is it? What can it be?'

'Work for me, perhaps,' said the widow, untying the large package, when suddenly there come to light four suits of grey clothes, with four neat, black, shining caps, each exactly fitting the heads of her boys. Almost overcome with wonder, the widow fell on her knees, her eyes fixed on the words. 'A present for the fatherless;' while the boys, laying hold of their suits of clothes, jumped about the floor shouting with glee.

'What's in the pocket, here! what's in the pocket!' cried Jemmy, thrusting his hand into that place, when, lo! out came the very purse the widow had returned that morning, with five pieces of gold still in it!

A scene of joyous confusion followed, and the voice of prayer ascended from Sarah Goodwin's full heart. Again and again she looked at the glittering treasure. It seemed a fortune to her. How her heart ran over with gratitude to God and the stranger!

Sleep could not rest, till, throwing on her bonnet, with cheeks glowing now with hope and happiness, she ran back to the hotel to pour forth her thanks.

A carriage stood at the door laden with trunks behind. The driver mounted the seat as she had reached the steps, and, turning her head, there within sat the stranger. She had not time to speak; but he nodded his head as he saw her with clasped hands standing there, and a prayer on her lips. Sarah never saw the stranger again. She took a little shop and stocked it well, and put her boys to school. To-day she is the owner of a respectable shop. Of her four boys, two are ministers, one is a doctor, and the other a thriving tradesman.

Nobody knows where the man with the flowing hair has gone; but if he is living and should ever hear of Sarah Goodwin, he will have the joy of knowing the noble results of this generous deed towards the wearing woman and her four boys.—Exchange.

A BEAUTIFUL FIGURE.

Life is like a fountain fed by a thousand streams that perish if one be dried. It is a silver cord twisted with a thousand strings that part asunder if one be broken. Thoughtless mortals are surrounded by innumerable dangers, which make it much more strange that they escape so long than that they almost all perish suddenly at last. We are encompassed with accidents every day, to crush the decaying tenements we inhabit. The seeds of disease are planted in our constitution by nature. The earth and atmosphere, whence we draw the breath of of life, are impregnated death; health is made to operate its own destruction. The food that nourishes contains the elements of decay; the soul that animates it by vivifying first tends to tear it out by its own action; death lurks in ambush along the paths. Notwithstanding this truth is as palpably confirmed by the daily example before our eyes, how little do we lay it to heart! We see our friends and neighbors die, but how seldom does it occur to our thoughts that our hold by age is the next warning to the world!—Greenwood.

THE MISER'S PURSE.

We find in an Eighth paper the following lines from a poem by Adèle Isaacs Mordecai. It appears in the volume which is soon to be issued in England. The poem is entitled "Drops that Bar at Door," and it contains traces of professional ability and a real passionate nature:—

O Angels! waft ye gently across it!
Drive from my door!
How long must I plead and cry in vain!
Lift back the iron bars and load me
Is there not a land of peace beyond my door!
Oh, lead me to it—give me rest—release me from this unequal strife.
Heaven attest that I fought bravely when the heavy blows fell fast.
Was it my sin that strength failed?
Was it my sin that the battle was in vain?
Was it my sin that I lost the prize? I do not sorrow for all the bitter pain and blood it cost me.
Why do ye stand sobbing in the sunshine?
There is no sunlight in this dark cell
I am starving for light.
O Angels! sweep the drift away—unbar my door!
Life is a lie, and Love a cheat.
There is a graveyard in my poor heart—dark heaved up graves, from which no flowers spring.
The walls are so high that the trembling wings of birds do break ere they reach the summit, and they fall, wounded, and die in my bosom.
I wander mid the gray old tombs and talk with the ghost of my buried hopes.
They tell me of my Eros, and how the flattered around him, bearing sweet messages of my love, until one day, with a strong arm, they struck them dead at his feet.
Since then these poor lonely ghosts haunted me night and day, for was I who decked them in my crimson heart tides, and sent them forth in chariots of fire.
Every breath of wind bears me their shrieks and groans.
I hasten to their graves, and tear back folds and folds of their shrouds, and try pour into their cold, nerveless veins the quickening tide of life once more.
Too late—too late!
Despair hath thrown back death, and clasps me in his black arms.
And the lamp! See, the lamp is dying out!
O Angels! sweep the drifts from my door! lift the bars.

'IT'S ONLY A LITTLE WHILE, SIR.'

'Well, Molly,' said the judge, going up the old apple woman's stand, 'don't you get tired sitting here these cold, dismal days.'

'It's only a little while,' said she,

'And the hot, dusty days?' said he

'It's only a little while, sir,' answered Molly.

'And the rainy drizzly days?' said the judge.

'It's only a little while,' answered Molly.

'And your sick, rheumatic days, Molly?' said the judge.

'It's only a little while, sir,' said she.

'And what then, Molly?' said the judge.

'I shall enter into that rest which remains for the people of God,' answered the old woman, decently; 'and the troublesomeness of the way there don't pester or fret me. It's only a little while, sir.'

'All is well that ends well, I dare say,' said the judge; but what makes you so sure, Molly?'

'How can I help being sure, sir,' says she, 'since Christ is the way, and I am His? He is mine, and I am His. Now I only feel along the way. I shall see Him as He is, in a little while, sir.'

'Ah, Molly, you're got more than I law ever taught me,' said the judge.

'Yes, sir, because I went to the gospel.'

'Well, Molly, I must look into these things,' said the judge, taking an open and walking off.

'There's only a little while, sir,' said she.

FENCES.—The materials and labor required to build and keep fences in repair are among the heavy items of farm expense. The cost of the land on which they stand is another item on which J. Harris, Rochester, discourses as follows in the American Agriculturist: How much land does an old-fashioned fence occupy? I have always thought it took up a great deal of land, but never had the curiosity to measure. But this summer we have been building a stone wall along the whole west side of the farm, and after it was completed and the old fence removed, I was surprised at the quantity of land we had gained.—The ground, of course, might have been ploughed closer to the fence, but taking it as it actually was, the old rail fence with stones, weeds, rubbish, etc., occupied a strip of land one rod wide. A fence thirty one rods wide contains about one acre. If surrounded by such a fence, would occupy a little over three-quarters of an acre of land. Not only is the room of the land lost, but it is, in the majority of cases, a nursery of weeds and in ploughing much time is lost in turning, and the headlands and corners are seldom properly cultivated.

WHOLESOMENESS OF APPLES.—Its mellow apples are digested in an hour and a half, while boiled cabbage requires five hours. The most healthy dessert that can be placed upon the table is a baked apple. If eaten frequently at breakfast, with coarse bread and butter, without meat or flesh any kind, it has an admirable effect on the general system, often removing constipation, correcting acidities, and cooling off fever conditions more effectually than the most approved medicines. Liebig says, they prevent debility, strengthen digestion, correct the putrefactive tendencies of nitrogenous food, avert scurvy, and strengthen the power of productive labor.—Ohio Farmer.

Prosecution of Belgian Protestants.

An extraordinary trial of seven sufferers for causing the death of two fellow workmen has just taken place at Antwerp. A band of these men, headed by one Nessels, appear for a long time to have exercised a most atrocious tyranny over some of their companions. The motives for their cruelty were chiefly religious, the victims being protestants and their tormentors Catholics. Their punishment reflected being a sort of reflection; that is to say a cross was made by placing two planks together in the form of an X, to which the sufferers were bound, bound with cords at their hands and feet until they should do homage to the virgin. One of the men who had died, named Steenbergen, had also been burnt with a hot iron and then plunged in water. This treatment brought on a violent fever which terminated in death. Two ringleaders Nessels, inspired such terror among their fellow workmen that when in court before the magistrate the witnesses trembled and refused to speak, and he had to be placed in a position where he could not see them. Considerable evidence was given with great reluctance and several of the witnesses had to be imprisoned for contempt of court. Even a milder punishment, the father of the second man executed died from the injuries received, only disclosed the names of the men who had exercised the cruelty on his son, on the court promising him protection. It he were denounced. The accused were now sentenced to different terms of imprisonment,—Nessels to six years; one to four years; one to eighteen months; two to one year; and two to nine months; with fines in addition varying from 20f. to 200f.—Gazette.

CAUTION TO THE CRAFT.—The Masonic Times has the following in relation to a fast young man who has been fleecing the brethern of late, and as the enterprising gent with his good looking partner might take a fancy to visit this locality, we deem it but right to transfer his photograph to our columns: "A young man named Charles E Robinson is going about the country deceiving the craft. He was a passenger in Pike Lodge, at Hone, in Allegany county, New York, and his father was a fine man, is chashier of the National Bank at Angelica. The young rascal's principal game is selling bogus drafts on his father's bank, in which business he is aided by a good-looking female of bad reputute, who travels with him as his wife. He is a born heard of in the West, in New York city, and lately had the audacity to visit the Grand Secretary of Massachusetts. He has been expelled from the Lodge for his crime. He is about 26 or 27 years of age, has black curly hair, is about 5 feet 9 inches high, is well educated, of pleasing address, and a skilful book-keeper. He goes by the title of captain. He is a dangerous impostor, and has already taken thousands of dollars out of the brethern. Look out for him. We hope our exchanges will give the exposure of him the benefit of their circulation."

HYDROPATHY AT THE COURT OF BERLIN.—A pleasant little story is having the run of the press abroad, which illustrates the simplicity of the manners of the Court of Prussia, and which is not without a moral for the juvenile readers of the Gazette. It appears that cleanliness is believed in as a duty by the family of the heir apparent to the throne. Each morning the little princess and princesses take a cold bath. Prince Henry, who is six years old, recently took it into his naughty little head that he would not indulge in the usage. He applied to his father, who stated that if he refused to take a bath he would go without one. His brother and sister, however, continued to be washed with great regularity, and the first morning the little rebel objected, he descended in the court yard for a run before breakfast. Much to his surprise the servants and soldiers took no notice of him. The other juveniles of the royal family were admitted, but Prince Henry was unnoticed. He went to his father and complained of the want of respect. "I am just as much prince as they are." "So you are, my boy," replied his father, "but you know they cannot pay honors to a dirty little prince, can they?" Prince Henry has resumed his plunge bath.

FRANCIS HINCKS.—An English correspondent of the London Advertiser writes:—"Your old Canadian friend who figured for a while so marvellously as the Prime Minister in Canada, has been getting himself into hot water—an ablution of which his history proves him to be very fond—with the agents of the London Missionery Society in Demerara. It appears that in his despatches to the Secretary of states for the colonies he has charged the London missionaries with fomenting agitation and exciting the passions of the negroes. Mr. Wallbridge, an agent of the London Missionary Society, has respectfully requested an explanation from his excellency.—This has been declined. The whole matter, therefore, has been referred to the Duke of Buckingham, with a demand that the Governor should either prove or retract his words. We wonder whether Mr. Hincks' well known adroitness will enable him to get out of this matter satisfactorily.

WHELAN.—The Ottawa News says it may be interesting to our readers to know that the prisoner Whelan is much less demonstrative in his habits since the conclusion of his trial. He no longer dances and sings as was his custom during the first few weeks of his confinement. Of course he is still self-confident, still keeps his own counsel, and exhibits no want of control. It was reported in town of late he was restricted he would bring others into trouble, but if he has any purpose of that kind [if he has say power to do so, perhaps we ought to say] he has as yet shown no inkling of it. Quiet and self possessed he awaits the rapidly approaching hours which must launch him into eternity.

The cathedral built by Bishop Wilson in Calcutta has come entirely under the influence of the Ritualists. Of late there has been witnessed the surpliced priest listening now to the confessions of his brot her priest now to that of native Christian penitents kneeling or lying at his feet, followed by absolution as grossly in the service for the sick. Were English "proud" only concerned, we might pass the matter by with a smile. But the natives have become the infected; and one of the preachers, Pandit Nehemiah, has become the apostle of a new party in sect, and has published his "Tract No. 1." Bishop Milman by his indecision, in wrongdoening the bonds of Afflictedmarians, striving to satisfy both parties by his contradictory letters.

A Fenian was lately arrested in Sheffield, who directed the police to a spot where two fire arms and 1,000 rounds of ammunition were found. He is said to have gone to Sheffield, to purchase the fate of Sir John Brown.

RED RIVER DISTRESS.

We have been waiting for some time to see some action taken by our citizens in reference to the state of Red River colonists. It is well known that they are already in a state of positive want. The grasshoppers so completely destroyed the crops this season that almost nothing is left for the settlers. They are also without means, and what makes it still worse, far from the market. The nearest place where provisions can be secured is 500 miles distant, and in that country, where there are no roads, even for ordinary teams, no railroads, and very little general traffic, the possibility of getting in provisions during the winter is very doubtful. Already several of the towns and cities have taken the initiative in raising funds for the relief of those who, without this, must perish with hunger. What is being done in Peterboro? is the question that has been put to us several times on the streets. We can merely reiterate the query: What is being done to get our mite for this noble and absolutely necessary purpose? and we may answer, nothing yet. We think that some of our citizens should get up a petition to the Mayor to call a public meeting to see what Peterboro is willing to do. The people of the Red River Settlement are of our tone and our flesh; they are within a few miles of us; under the same government, looking forward towards becoming a part and parcel of the Dominion of Canada, and on all these accounts have a claim on our charity and benevolence; but they have a stronger claim, they are fellowbeings in want, starving, without means to purchase, and even with means, without the possibility of doing so, except before winter sets in. These things should stir us up. We trust that no time will be lost in calling a meeting and get the ball a rolling. We have no doubt but Peterboro will afford a tangible token of sympathy with those that are in want. Who will take the first step? If no one does so, the Council should. If they will not, we believe the Mayor would be justified in calling a meeting without a petition. A sufficient answer to cavilers would be: "Our brethren are in danger of starving."

Revolution in Spain.

This bloodless revolution, so far, progresses to the wish of the most liberal and enlightened. The Queen has been compelled to take refuge in France, but there is not the slightest hopes of her return to her kingdom. All classes of her subjects are sick of Bourbon rule and priestly tyranny and the junta formed to manage public affairs until some constitutional form of government be established, are acting with becoming moderation and wisdom. A programme has been issued guaranteeing many reforms. Among them are administrative decentralization, universal suffrage, religious liberty, freedom of the press, and right of public assemblage, radical changes in the system of education, right of trial by jury, and equality of all men before the Crown. Judges of Courts are to be appointed for life. The provinces acknowledge the authority of the central junta, and a general election or vote of the people is to be taken to choose representatives to decide what form of government shall be established. The Duke of the nation says he has a monarchial form of government, being the best suited to his people, but there are growing feelings towards a Republic. The friends of progress everywhere will hail with delight any form of government, monarchial or republican, that will establish liberty, education, religious tolerance, and the right of free speech in a country that has for centuries been the centre of intolerance, and the chief seat of the inquisition.

LORD CECIL.

This nobleman whom the horse guards would not permit to preach the word of life to his fellow soldiers is now in the neighborhood of Ottawa, preaching to all classes of his fellow subjects, and with marked success. Thousands flock to hear the Word declared in simplicity and sincerity, and already those that have been awakened by the spirit accompanying the labours of Lord Cecil and Mr. Dunlop can be numbered by the hundred. Lord Cecil is preaching in the theatre at Ottawa and to such crowds that many are forced to go away for want of room. A writer in the Ottawa Citizen says of his preaching:—

"The discourse though apparently spontaneous, was a most vigorous and eloquent effort, and we are sure the vast audience must have been profoundly moved by the lesson it was intended to teach. The whole available time having been taken up with these addresses, inclusive of the opening and closing hymns and prayers, there was no after meeting for special purposes, as on former occasions. Lord Cecil announced another service in the same place for next Sunday."

OUR MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

We call the attention of our young men to the fact that the Institute's Reading Room is open every day and every night. Apprentices under 18 may have the benefit of the Reading Room and Library with instruction in writing, book-keeping, arithmetic and mechanical drawing, by paying a membership fee for six months of $1.00, and 25 cents extra per month for class-instruction. Adults pay the entrance fee and 25 cents per month for class-instruction. Young men, don't let the long winter evenings be spent in idleness; make all you can of the golden opportunity.

We understand that the Institute is going to have a grand opening in about two weeks, when objects of art and beauty are to be collected to give interest to the occasion.—During the winter a course of lectures will be given. We bespeak the hearty support of the citizens for this Institute, which cannot, if well supported, but do much good.

A ROBBERY.—Joseph Swan, a man who has been in the neighborhood of Emiismore for some days was drunk, he before the Mayor on Monday, charged with robbing a Mrs. Graham, of Emiismore, during the absence of Mr. Graham. Swan, it appears, painted himself and entered the house, and getting a revolver threatened to shoot her if she did not tell him where the money was. He got $87. In going through the house he heard that he to some way got out with some glass, and this led to his apprehension. Mrs Graham swore to his identity, and according ly he is now in jail awaiting his trial. He inflicted some severe wounds on Mrs. Graham's face with a stick before he got the money. He may be allowed time to reflect on his foolish career.

Sale of the Sheridan Farm.

We would call attention to the sale of the above farm on THURSDAY next, 22nd instant. Parties desirous of obtaining Park Lots would do well to attend the sale, as it is a rare opportunity of getting property so conveniently situated, and one not likely to occur again for some time. Sale at eleven o'clock, a. m.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY.—At the matriculation examination of the University, Thos. Smellie, son of Rev. G. Smellie, Ferguson, and Abraham Groves, son of Mr. A. Groves, Garafraxa, both pupils of Mr. Minor, in the Fergus Grammar School, passed creditably, the former in the Arts department, and the latter in the Medical department. We also learn that John Black, Dugald Stewart, John Goldie and John Wilkie, from the Guelph Grammar School, passed the matriculation examination very creditably each standing very high in the department in which they were examined. There were no less than 55 pupils sent up for examination, 32 of whom were "plucked." The Guelph pupils ranked next those from the Upper Canada College.

The above we copy from the Leader of yesterday. It will be pleasing to the friends of Mr. J. M. Dunn, formerly principal of the Peterboro Grammar School, and at present principal of the Guelph Grammar School, to thus learn that his success as well as an educator.

We have not been able to get a complete list of the prizes at the late show. One of the papers has been promised. We hope to be able to give it next week.

West Riding Agricultural Show.

The Show last week equalled, if it did not surpass, that of last year. Still we cannot say that it fully came up to the expectations of its promoters. The number of entries was not as large as it should have been, yet we feel safe in say that the Show in the West Riding of Peterborough was not inferior to that of any other Riding of the united counties of territory in Ontario, for we must bear in mind that the Riding is an Agricultural point of view, consists of but two townships—South and Monaghan—for both North and South Monaghan equal only one township.

The committee of management, or directors, left nothing undone to ensure success and satisfaction. In former Years all they was that the articles exhibited could not be easily kept, and that there was not sufficient room for showing them. This year the directors had assemblance of room in the new drill shed, and the stands were very well arranged indeed, and Mrs. Gilmour, Mr. Carnegie and others were laborious in their efforts to protect those articles that were exhibited, and we feel satisfied that owing to the satisfactory arrangement of this show there will be renewed confidence to ensure a greater display next year.

The Ladies' Department attracted considerable attention on Thursday evening. The Directors had lit up the Shed in a brilliant manner. This judging about 300 or 400 persons to visit it, and we doubt not but that they were well repaid. Miss Taylor took the first place in patch work quilts, Miss Bailey in worsted, Miss Edmonds in raised work, Mrs. William Watson in braided work, Miss Bates in weaving, Miss Beyers and Miss Hewitt in muslin work, Mrs. Kempe and Miss H. Walton for wax work flowers, Mrs Helm showed some very nice hair work, but we must refer our readers to the prize list for the complete list of successful competitors. Mr. Hill did much towards fitting up the Shed in the way of paintings and ornaments, and a baby elephant, by Mrs. Hill, was much admired.

CARRIAGES, &C.

Messrs. McWilliams, Doherty and Minaker & Hodgins showed very nice and some very serviceable rigs. Mr. Doherty got the first prize for a covered carriage, Mr. McWilliams for an open carriage, Messrs. Minaker & Hodgins for a single buggy and cutter, (there was no competition in cutters) and Mr. Doherty for a farmer's waggon. Mr. McWilliams exhibited a very fine looking waggon just from the hands of the makers, without paint or putty, which could not fail to attract attention. Mr. Helm had the ploughs all his own way. Mr. Yelland and Messrs. Minaker & Hodgins showed each a harrow differing only in style of finish. Mr. J. H. Walton exhibited a newly patented hay fork to be worked by horses, which appeared to be capable of saving labor to no small extent. There were several other articles exhibited; still our mechanics did not show as much enterprise or competition as their own welfare demands, for there can be no cheaper way of advertising any useful or new invention, as not less than 500 to 600 people visited the Show, and no doubt were keen to observe anything attractive.

The show of horses, cattle, sheep and pigs attracted by far the greatest crowd of admirers.

DAIRY AND FARM PRODUCE.

In this line Messrs. Aaron Mann, Isaac Garbutt and Wm. Graham received the prizes for firkin butter, and strange to say these are just the reverse of the opinion of the judges at the Smith Show, as there the shed Graham, Man and Garbutt. In table butter Messrs. Angus Davidson, Thomas Tully and Mrs. C. Taylor carried off the prizes; and in cheese, Messrs. Walton, Mann and Garbut, the reverse of the decision in Smith. The articles, we suppose, were so nearly equal that the judges could scarcely do better than vary the order of awards.—George Paul showed some fall wheat that it is believed would have taken the first prize at Hamilton; H. Collins, spring wheat and barley; E Mann, white oats, and John Robinson, black oats; but all the wheat, oats, peas and barley were of an excellent quality. J. Edwards, Esq., showed some first prize honey in the comb. Roots were not largely represented.

HORSES.

This was the great excitement, showing what delight mankind in general take in thoroughbreds and useful animal. Messrs. Fowler, Smith, Rutherford, South Monaghan, and Martin, Peterboro, carried off the prizes in draught horses. Messrs. Morrow, R. White and Geo. Campbell, in carriage horses, and in buggy horses, Messrs. Fowler, Wallis and Robert Walton. On horse flesh there is quite a diversity of opinion, and we would not be surprised to hear of a diversity of opinion on the awards of the Judges, as every man generally believes his own animal the best.

CATTLE.

John Walton, Rev. Mr. Roger, Mr. Wallis and Mr. Tully showed some fine animals. Mr. Walton and Mr. Collins carried off the prizes in thoroughbreds as usual. Messrs. Wallis, Rev. Mr. Roger, Joseph Walton and H. Collins, in grades.

SHEEP.

Mr. Collins, North Monaghan, and Mr. Stevenson, South Monaghan, and Adam Hall, South, Matthew Walton and Joseph Walton, North Monaghan, showed some very fine sheep.

The Perrine family was not largely represented, but what were there was very good.

In the Poultry line, A. W. Kempe, A. Stothart and Robert Patterson showed some very nice Cochins, Brahmas and Silver Spangled Polish fowl.

Below is the prize list in full.

HORSES.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, 12th October, 1868.

The Town Council met; the Mayor presiding.

A communication from Thomas White, Esq., representing that Alex. Elmhorn had been confined for six weeks, owing to his having received injuries in a well, and was unable to pay his taxes, which, with two other appeals for the remission of taxes, were laid over.

On motion of Mr. Clanton, the Council went into Committee of the whole on the second reading of By law to repeal By-law No. 211, and for amending By law No. 133. Mr. Chamberlain in the chair. The By law was read a second and third time and passed.

Thos. Mahony was allowed to get a shop license at half price for the remainder of the year.

The Street Inspector was instructed to enforce the provisions of the amended sections of By law No. 153, and the amended clause was ordered to be published.

Messrs. Toole, Helm and Stevenson were appointed to wait upon the Association Council to ascertain what they would contribute towards the purchase of a new Fire Engine.

The Street Inspector was instructed to repair the side walk leading to the House.

The Report of the Street and Bridge Committee, brought in 4 weeks ago, was on motion of Mr. Toole, brought up and considered. After a good deal of discussion and hard talk, Mr. Toole moved that the Report be received and adopted. Mr. Stevenson moved in amendment, that it be referred to the Street Inspector to see to the expense of the house recommended before adopting it. The amendment was lost on the following division:—

YEAS—Messrs. Stevenson, Wrighton and Kennedy.

NAYS—Messrs. Toole, J. Dixon, Helm, S. Dickson, English, Clanton, Chamberlen and Burnham.

The Report was adopted on the same division.

Frederick Winch was heard relative to his selling fire-wood elsewhere than in the Market and asking to have the Market By-law so altered as to enable him to do so.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

NORTH MONAGHAN.—We have been requested to state that Mr. Collins, collector for North Monaghan, will, for the convenience of ratepayers, be at Stratton & Armstrong's book store every Saturday, from one to three o'clock, to receive taxes and give receipts for the same.

HOUSE BURNED.—We regret to learn that the dwelling of Mr. W. Knox, Otonabee, was consumed by fire on Friday morning last. There was no insurance. Farmers as well as others should protect themselves against this devouring element; a small trifle yearly would do it.

LITERARY CLUB.—A meeting of the Directors of the Peterboro Literary Club will be held at the Club Rooms, over the Royal Canadian Bank, on Friday evening, the 16th instant, at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

Some one has run, or are to a few empty crates left to Mr. Paul's grocery, about 9 o'clock on Monday morning. Mr. Paul offers $10 reward for their conviction.

MURDER IN THE TOWNSHIP OF MINTO.—John Scroggie was killed by John Mangan on Wednesday night last by a knife, the two men had been drinking together during the day, and in the evening drank some whiskey. On their return home to Mangan's they quarrelled about some remarks Scroggie made to Mangan's wife. After this Scroggie went to the top of one Campbell, a connection of Mangan's. Turner he was followed by Mangan armed with a gun to which was attached a bayonet. The persons in the house succeeded to prevent Mangan by but he overcame them and stabbed Scroggie with such force that the knife broke off at the hilt. Mangan immediately fled. Mangan was a well-to-do farmer in the township of Minto, and Scroggie was a labourer and had been working for Mangan.—Leader.

Above we published the attack on Sunday night, Mr. Collins' house and barn in Monaghan were destroyed by fire. Loss about $10,000. The origin of the fire is unknown.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.—Intelligence was received yesterday of the commission of a desperate assault at Hull, by one Francis Casselman on another. The culprit, named Morrison, keeps a boarding-house, and is generally regarded as a quiet and inoffensive man. Pierre Lalonde bears the reputation of being a rather desperate character. The two became involved in a dispute about some drink owed. Both words were exchanged, and Lalonde struck Morrison with the back of the head just above the ear. The result at first was not thought serious, but Morrison was so severely injured that he could not live. Two nurses were in attendance, but Morrison died in the night. Information was laid before the Deputy Sheriff of Ottawa County, who proceeded to arrest the culprit. Lalonde's residence being well known, and a determined resistance expected, the Deputy Sheriff took several assistants with him. The precaution was not unnecessary. Arriving at his dwelling in the Wright House Gardens, about two o'clock in the morning, men were stationed on either side of the house to prevent escape. He was taken after a struggle, during the course of which he twice fired with a gun pistol upon the officers of the law, and is now lodged in Aylmer jail to await examination by the proper authorities.

A SON KILLED BY HIS FATHER.—The Sherbrooke Gazette says that on the 1st inst., James McDonald, senr., and his son James came to Sherbrooke with the view of paying the balance due upon seventy acres of land to the Crown Land Agent.—The father had promised to divide to his son 35 acres of the land, but when at the Magistrates office, they could not agree to the terms and no deed was given. They left Sherbrooke together in the afternoon, stopped at Lyon's Gate and took some liquor, but drank there but little together, until dark further north on the East part of Lingwick. Next morning two boys of the son, James McDonald, jr., are found by the side of the road dead, and both evidently been dead for hours, being quite cold and stiff. The Coroner of the District was notified and on the inquest held, it came out the old man was in the habit of getting drunk, and when in liquor was very cross and abusive to those he met with, and had evidently been so for hours, being quite cold and stiff. The Coroner of the District was notified and on the inquest held, it came out the old man was in the habit of getting drunk, and when in liquor was very cross and abusive to those he met with, and had frequently abused his wife, and that his son James who lived with them, frequently interfered to prevent and in anger from being injured. The father is now in jail awaiting his trial.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—The Leader gives the facts of a fearful accident that occurred in the village of Grenadiana on Friday last, when twenty-two men were thrown from the top of a three story building into the cellar, one instantaneously killed, another mortally hurt and ten or twelve dangerously so. A large wooden factory was in course of erection, and when the walls were up a large gathering of the neighbors to a house raising to raise the upper portion of the wood work, and after navy to worked with the greatest enthusiasm for an early opening the ascent [illegible] the platform fell, they were all to the number of twenty two, dashed from the highest story through the joists which had been laid for three floors, and landed in a heap in the cellar.

MURDER TRIAL.—At the Fall Assizes in Brockville on Saturday last, Oliver Lamoreux, a lumbering man, was put on his trial for the murder of John Maund, at one We were told here, on the 15th of May last. The prisoner and deceased were drinking at the hotel, and the latter got into an altercation with a third person. The prisoner and others interfered to separate them, when Maund struck him in the face. Then both closed again to show cause, and the prisoner plunged a knife into Maund's abdomen, which led to his death 19 days after. It was shown that both men had been fast friends, but on this occasion were so drunk as scarcely to control their actions. The jury returned a verdict of "manslaughter" against Lamoreux.

MURDER AT THREE RIVERS.—A murder was committed on Thursday night, some eleven miles from Three Rivers, in a drunken row. Two married men's name as Gradin, a lumberer employed by George Baptiste & Son, under a man named Lachance as foreman. They were on their way up to the shanties for the winter, and stopped at the "Grand" for refreshment, commencing it in all. They drank very hard. The quarrel blew out the candle and started Gradin. The Coroner's Jury return'd a verdict of wilful murder against the murderer one Amede Boussard, of Les Grecues.

CONVERSION.—The members of the Episcopal Church at Thorold have been greatly exercised of late by the conversion of the last chief a young man named Pudding who has been studying for the Episcopal Ministry for some time, has rejected the Creed and became a member of the Roman Catholic Church. This young man, it is said, would never have changed his creed if it had not been that he has married under a decree, passed by the Church practitioners.—Cath. Citizen's Journal.

No bill was found by the jury in a prosecution v. R. A. Kemp of the Central Canadian, for libel. It seems that a fire took place some time ago in Kemp's office, and, assuming from remarks of Mr Meadmore's (the fire chief) paper the Monitor, on the fire, Kelly says "that the fire was the work of an incendiary is reported and, and was would be more beneficial to the department of a rival printing office than John Mudford." The man that prevaricates will not get the man that lies will clear; and Public decisions record the same.

MR. DEVLIN SUES MR. MOFFAT.—Mr. B. Devlin, of Montreal, has instituted a suit at law against Mr. Moylan, the proprietor of the Freeman, in which he claims the sum of $10,000. The grounds of the suit is as follows: Some months ago Mr. Devlin, one of the proprietors of the Freeman, in which he claims the sum of $10,000. The grounds of the suit is as foll

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are true, undeniable and incomparable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as colds, the various pain Diseases, Humors and all diseases arising from impurity of Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALED. Where is there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Stevens, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter O. V. Miller, Kenastown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Canborough, Ontario, Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches 2 years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned that we space.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine Agents for Peterborough—Messrs Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

OF

CONSUMPTION!

IN CANADA

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,

Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to myself as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I complied a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, a severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these and the as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different remedies, but all without any good effect. Squire Peterson, of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottles at once, with the Pills; so soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this compliment, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, cold sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing to use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and them have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of the truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER O. V. MILLER,
Kenastown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman Peter O. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him to be of the very highest respectability and a very candid and creditable person, and am satisfied that I can fairly vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

Rev. W. T. S. HARPER,
Rector of Bath, Ont.

"Just so!"—Exactly so!—Solon Shingle says they were there "if he did," "if he didn't," "if he knew," in the meantime, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in static oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"I owe much to you, for I believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

S. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y.

"I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. O. A. HILLWOOD New York City.

"I had lost all appetite—was weak and emaciated I could hardly walk—had a perfect dread of society. The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo.

"The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys a Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 384 Broadway, N. Y.

Mrs. C. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Mission for Soldiers' Children, says: "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received one hundred terms of such certificates, but no testimonial is so effective as what people believe any of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The originality and high character of these goods will be protected money every and all circumstances. They have already obtained made for many in village, parish and hamlet among girdling nations. Base imitators try to come as near to name and style as they can, and because their article cannot be sold as low as a poor article they find some as poor from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. Use our private stamp over the cork.

Parents' Duty.

Up in the early morning,
Just as the sun is red,
Breaking the back of the night
Turning the sea to gold,
Sweeping the floor of the kitchen,
Making the beds up warm,
Washing the breakfast dishes,
Dusting the parlor clothes.

Brushing the cruinbs from the table,
Handing the salt at the lunch,
Opening the window for dinner,
Bringing the fuel for fires,
Shutting the doors after people,
Sewing on the button holes,
Putting the rooms to rights,
Where the children's been.

Reaching the "things" for Sunday,
Churning the milk for cream,
Rising the path to the kitchen;
Down by the running stream,
Feeding the pigs and the chickens,
Making the garments plain,
Mending the little torn jackets,
Darning the little socks and sleeves,
Putting away the flax.

Grace in every motion,
Music in every tone,
Beauty in form and feature;
Thanks all right comes to some—
Charles that rival spring roses,
Teeth as white as pearls;
One of these country maids is worth
A score of city girls.

ANCIENT SPANISH PROVERBS.

(Translated from Philological sources.)

Between the thief and the shepherd the lamb has cause to grief. One thing acquired with pain is better than a hundred with ease. Whoever is beautiful is a rose unto; but how much more so is a fool. More than the calf wishes to drink, the cow wishes to give it suck. An ox forbidden to die. The world is like the wheel of the well, with its two buckets; the full one is ever emptied, and the empty one is ever filled. A quarrel is like a spirit of water issuing from a cleft; wider and wider gets the cleft, more and more powerful the squirt. He who has learnt much does not preach, as like a myrtle in the desert. There is three-fold death in the slanderer's tongue: it kills him who slanders, him who is slandered, and him who receives the slander. Some people's judgment is that of a blind man at the window. Many an arrow-smith is shot by his own arrows. Greater is he who saves good deeds than he who does them. Great is peace: it is to the land what heaven is to the dough. Women spins her little web, while one talks. Throw no stones into the well whence you have drunk. A small allowance at home is better than a large one abroad. He is a book-case, not a scholar. A hundred shillings invested in trade will give a man meat and wine; an acres it will give him cabbage and salt. When the ass already touches the reed, still hope in God's saving grace. Flight is the beginning of defeat. Hang the smartest grape round a pig's neck, it will still go and wallow in its native mire. You must not drink out of one cup, and look at another. He who cannot moderate his grief, will soon have a new grief to weep over. Where Satan cannot go himself, he sends wine as his messenger. Whoever has been bitten by a serpent is afraid of a rope. When the locust has his day, mad is him a bow. Would you carry economy to Egypt? Pharaoh said to Moses: The way runs when to go, thither his feet will carry him. Seven years lasted the plagues, but no one died before his time. First understand, then argue. You must not refute a lion after death. Much have I learned from my masters, more from my colleagues, most from my disciples. In a quarrel it is always the well-born who will first give way. Do not stand in a place of danger, trusting in miracles. Iron sharpens iron; scholar the scholar. Eat quickly and drink quickly; this world is but a brief wedding feast. The older the wise man gets, the wiser he grows: the fool, when he ages, becomes but an old fool. He who studies for a good purpose, to him his study becomes a blessing; to him who does not, it grows into a poison. Do not dwell too long upon your friends praises; you will end by saying things against him. Three cry out but get no pity; he who leads out his enemy without witnesses, the law-packed lawhead, and he who cannot get on in one place, and does not try another. One goose generally follows another. The load is laid upon the camel according to its strength. A pig is the richest animal; everything is a piece of goods to him. Whoever does too much does too little. The greater a man, the greater his passions. He who proves the hour, the hour will prove him. A learned man whose deeds are evil is like a man who has a door but no house. He who prays for his neighbor, will be heard first himself. He who marries his daughter to an educated man, throws her before a wild beast. He who throws out suspicions, should at once be suspected his self. A foot always rushes to the fore. Do not cry out before the calamity really happens. The hatred the educated bear toward the learned is even greater than that of the heathens against Israel. The righteous is greater after his death than during his life. Passion is at first like a thin thread, by and by it becomes like a cable.

The want of space will not permit us to give more. Those who wish for further information must consult the able paper on "Proverbs Ancient and Modern," in the July No. of "Quarterly Review."

INFLUENCE OF HAPPY CHILDHOOD.—The scenery of early happiness is a treasure-house of sweet comforts and consolations. Its pure, simple, earnest joys become wells to draw from whenever we sit down in thirst and weariness by the highway of life. Of this one good the world can never defraud us. The sunshine in those days reaches across our little stretch of life, and mingles its rays with those that beam from the heaven of our hope. The actual present of the adult life, and the materials which enter into it, are made up, more than we generally suppose, of remembrance. We ruminate like the kine. We lay up in the receptacles of memory abundance of undigested material, that we recall and appreciate to our refreshment and nourishment; and this process of reminiscence—of living over again—grows upon us as we grow into years, till at last it becomes our all. Exhausted power has no resource but to dwell upon its old play and its old achievements. How sad he is who can never go back to his childhood without a shudder! Who can never recall a period when his life was filled with sweet and simple satisfaction!

GOOD BREEDING.—I believe this matter of good manners and good breeding to be chiefly in the hands of mothers. It is no easy to teach a child to say "Thank you for the bread," or "Give me some bread?" as easy to accustom a family of children to bid their parents good morning upon ordinary, as grants upon extraordinary, occasions. Let there be no "company manners." Convince children by example, as less than precept, that the best they have to offer in matter and manners should be laid before them; they fare such frequently. A fine habit at tea to enter the parlor and courtesy to mother's friend, will do as well as self possession at supper. For this alone all, in case of a rude but politeness long practiced will insensibly put on politeness and ease. [illegible] It may be well for us [illegible] for the refined habits of politeness to grow [illegible] —some which I fear would never have graced us, the illiterate offspring of a long line of ancient gentry. "Little things," and "trifle [illegible]" "proper sayings" in these days. "Manners in minds, fiddle for no," was the Latin proverb, and it has often occurred to the writer that the, of the present generation, are more in danger of forgetting the existence of manner than the strength is dead.—Springfield Republican.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Genuine Mink. The former is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers in Montreal and Quebec [illegible] to palm off [illegible] Mink for Genuine Mink. The Canadian coats are three times double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the latter or article for which they will no doubt have to pay full price. Take care, therefore, for I have had dealers in this province to [illegible] to Montreal, which I can certify were splendid and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any information suitable their furs will please to call before the end of October.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for Children of all ages. In [illegible] of all [illegible] they are the most effectual [illegible] from Worms above, it cannot be too strongly recommended up to the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children by no doubt, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the most common symptoms and disease which are indications of worms: Deranged digestion, an offensive breath, [illegible] irregular appetite, frequently picking the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, disturbed sleep, with frequent startings, and protracted convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, general stupor, faintness, unpleasing coughs, inflammation, hysterics, fearful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe. If administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other nauseous medicines.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

DR. MOLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything at the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It will save the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the constitutional humor that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by distension on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the air-cells vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, loathing the offal, and giving to the coat a sleek and glossy appearance.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary persons, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based upon sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from a derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their private and highly approved of them, some of which are the following:

Poetry.

A Sketch which comes up to, but goes not beyond, the reality.

"Say, Dossie, may I or I have rum,
To quench this burning thirst within?
Sissy, on this second bed I lie,
And cannot get one drop of gin;
I ask not health, not even life—
Life! what a curse it's been to me!
Of neither think for greatest hell,
Then drink again for misery.

"But, Dossie, may I not have rum?
One drop alone I'll crave.
Since this one I crave—I ask no more—
Then I'll defy you o'er the grave.
Then will hear fear, I'll fold my arms,
And bid the monster stride his dark,
To hasten me from this world of woe,
And claim his own—this ruined heart.

"A thousand curses on his head
Who gave me first the poisoned bowl,
He taught me first this name to drink—
Drink death and ruin to my soul.
My soul! oh, cruel, horrid thought!
Full well I know my certain fate,
With what loathsome horror shrinks
The spirit from that awful state!

"Last—last—I know for ever last!
To me no ray of hope can come;
My fate is sealed, my doom is fixed,
But give me rum—I will have rum.
Ha, Doctor, don't you see me there?
In that dark corner how he sits;
How how he spurns his fiery tongue,
And at me burning brimstone spits.

"Go, chase him out. Look! here he comes;
Now on my bed he wants to stay;
He shoot the thunderbolt of God at me!
Go way I say! go way! go way!
Quick drain me fast, and fix me down;
There now—he clasps me in his arms;
Down—down the window—close is light;
Say, don't you hear my wild alarms?

"Say, don't you see this demon fierce?
Does no one hear? will no one come?
Oh save me—save me—I will give—
But rum! I must have will have rum.
Ah! now he's gone; once more I'm free;
He—the hunting knave and liar—
Is said that he would take life off
Down to—But there! my bed's on fire!

"Fire! water! help! come! haste—I'll die;
Come, take me from this burning bed;
The smoke—I'm choking—cannot cry;
There now—it's catching at my head!
But see! again this demon's come;
Look! there he goes through yonder crack;
Mark how his burning eye-balls flash!
How fierce he grins! what brought him back?

"There stands his burning coach of fire,
He smiles and beckons me to come.
What are those words he's written there?
'It is hell, no pray—must for rum!'
One loud, one piercing shriek was heard;
One yell rang out upon the air;
One sound, and one alone, came forth—
The victim's cry of wild despair.

Report on the Galway Mining Location, County of Peterborough, Ont.

Having been instructed by the Directors of the Galway Mining Company of Peterborough to examine the mineral property of the Company, and to furnish them with an impartial Report upon the same, I visited the ground on the 22nd ult., in company with two of the Directors, Messrs. Rogers and Stephenson, whose knowledge of the locality was of much service. I avail myself of this opportunity to offer my thanks to these gentlemen for their kind assistance, and beg, at the same time, to record my conviction that the greatest reliance may be placed in Mr. Stephenson's judgment and suggestions, as regards the development of the property generally.

The Galway Mining Location comprises the west half of lot 20 in concession A of the township of Galway, county of Peterborough. It contains about 50 acres, and is held by the Company in fee simple. The Bobcaygeon Road forms the boundary of one side of the property. By this road, to the village of Bobcaygeon, on Sturgeon Lake, the distance is between 11 and 12 miles. From Bobcaygeon, freight can be shipped to London (122 miles), and from thence carried by rail to Port Hope on Lake Ontario, a station of the Grand Trunk Railway. Another outlet is by way of Mud Lake to a point 15 miles from Bobcaygeon, to which a line of railway will shortly be carried from Peterboro. The products of the Galway mine can thus be taken to the front almost entirely by water and rail; the only transit required, being over the portion of road (11 miles) between the mine and Bobcaygeon village. This road is in good order, and is of easy grade. As regards accessibility, therefore, the property is very favorably situated—more so, indeed, although lying in a comparatively remote township, than many mineral locations situated somewhat nearer to the front.

The country rock of the location consists essentially of mica slate interstratified with hornblendic gneiss and crystalline limestone, the whole belonging to the Laurentian or Grenville Series. The strike of these rocks is N. 20° to 25° E., corresponding with the general direction of the ridges and narrow valleys of the district, the valleys lying chiefly along the course of the limestone bands. Several well-defined mineral veins occur upon the Company's property. Two of these, running parallel with each other at about 100 feet apart, have been traced entirely across the location. They cut the strata almost at right angles, their course being N. 60° to 65° W., with a very slight undulation (as plans inaccurately). toward the N. E. Another vein, of similar mineral character, appears to run N. 60° E., but at present it is entirely undefined. This is known as the "Crossvein." Well-marked indications of others also observable on the property. These veins are very narrow at the surface, but they widen considerably at a depth of a few fathoms, and are then apparently to increase in width at greater depths. They carry galena, in a compact state of blende, in a gangue of pulverulent of baryta (the result of the decomposed mineral) and crystallized carbonate of lime (calcite).

On the more northerly of the two parallel veins rising N. 60° to 65° W., a shaft (10 feet × 6 feet) has been sunk to a depth of about 60 feet, and is still being carried down. At mid but about thirty feet in a lower ground (dug towards the north-east, and some distance along the course of the vein) but being too near the surface to be of much value, it has been thrown aside.—At a depth of 50 feet from the surface this vein shows a width of 3 feet 6 inches, and consists of sulphate of baryta mixed with slightly argentiferous galena and a considerable amount of galena. It may not be amiss to state, that the latter are contents, when pure, 86.6 per cent. of metallic lead, and 13.4 per cent. of sulphur—a portion of the lead being very generally replaced, however, by a small amount of silver. Here and there, a few specks of black and yellow blende, with traces of copper pyrites, appear on the east upper of this vein, and the faces of iron pyrites are seen in places. The galena spar is, in part, perfectly transparent and colorless. Large cleavable masses, available for optical purposes, and pieces of some value, have been taken out of pockets in carrying down the shaft.—From these pockets also some heavy masses of galena, partly in fine crystals, have been obtained. The sulphate of baryta, if largely worked, might likewise be made a source of profit, but oh mical treatment would be required to effect its purification from intermixed matters.

To arrive at an exact estimate of the amount of lead carried by the vein in question, (which, for the sake of clearness, I will call the Galway lode, designating the parallel vein in its vicinity as the Peterborough lode) several tons of ore would have to be carefully sampled and examined; but, at a depth of from 50 to 60 feet from the surface, the vein, at the lowest estimate, certainly holds a fourth part (by weight) of galena. In the connexion it must be remembered that galena is about twice as heavy, bulk for bulk, as the mixture of gangue and spar of which the vein-stone consists. If it be assumed (in order to keep within safe limits) that the lode would become no richer in descending, and would carry only the above amount of galena, each square fathom would contain 126 cubic feet of vein-stuff (of average specific gravity equal to 5.0) and would weigh, in round numbers, about 20 Canadian tons. On this assumption, 10 tons of vein-stuff would yield 5 tons of galena, or, one allowance being made for loss in the mechanical and furnace treatment of the ore, about 3½ tons of metallic lead. The actual yield would probably be nearer 4 tons, especially after the mill and furnaces had been brought into full working order; but I wish, in this estimate, rather to understate, than overrate, the assumed profits of the mine.

Taking these data, the debit and credit account (exclusive of a small deduction for interest on capital, management, commission, and wear and tear of machinery) may be stated as follows:—

DEBIT ACCOUNT.

Mining 20 tons ore, at $2 50	$50
Hauling to mill, at 50 cents.	10
Crushing and dressing, at 50 cents.	10
Smelting dressed ore, say 3½ to 4 tons, at $3	12
Freight on 3½ tons lead to front	20
	$102

CREDIT ACCOUNT.

3½ tons pig lead, at 4½ cents per lb.... $337 75

Leaving, in round numbers, a profit of $60 per ton of reduced lead; but, as a higher percentage of galena will probably be found in the lode, a larger profit may be fairly anticipated.

The estimated cost of mining or winning the ore ($2 50 per ton) may appear, at first sight, too low; but $2, I believe, would be nearer the true cost. This may be verified, to some extent, by the actual cost of the work done in sinking the shaft. The cost, per foot of depth, has been, understood about $17. The mean specific gravity of the rock-matter and ore removed from the shaft may be taken at about 4.0. It would be somewhat less than this for the first few fathoms, but more at lower depths. As the shaft means as about 10 feet by 6 feet, each vertical foot of stuff removed would equal 60 cubic feet, the weight of which would be about 7½ tons. This amount, at $17, equals $2.26 per ton. It must be remembered, on the contrary, that the greater portion of the matter, removed from the shaft consisted of very hard rock whereas the extraction of the vein-matter will be much more easily effected and will be carried on by excavating and stoping, in place of sinking. The above estimate will thus allow for the cost of underground mining, where this may be required in the drifts.

A considerable amount of pay-ore has been taken out of the present shaft. A large portion has been carried off piecemeal by persons visiting the mine. Specimens of 8 or 10 lbs., weight may be seen all over the vicinity, and probably a ton weight, if not more, has found its way in this manner to Peterborough alone. The ore that has escaped these depredations, in partly stored as a look-up shed near the mouth of the shaft, and partly piled in heaps upon the ground. It has been roughly hand-dressed, and in part wanned on a temporary hand-fed by water from the shaft. Much of it, consequently, contains over 70 per cent. of galena: and if the whole were smelted on the spot, it ought to produce at least one hundred or a thousand dollars worth of metal.

I have made several essays of this galena, taken from different parts of the shaft in order to determine the amount of silver present in the lead. The average amount is equal to a little over 2 oz. Troy to the ton, or to about 1 oz. 17 dwts. per ton of galena. This amount is sufficient to defray the cost of the extraction, but the ore may prove richer at lower depths, or in other parts of the vein. I have also found a small amount of gold (3 to 6 dwts. per ton) in some samples of iron and arsenical pyrites taken from a narrow cross-vein, which is cut at the shaft, and threats 8 or 10 rods by the Galway lode. It would be advisable to have the pyrites vein thoroughly tested, where cut by the drifts at different levels, as the amount of gold may be found to increase. The blende before this cross-vein has been subjected, shows the most minute grains of tin baryta; or galena veins and various indications observable in close of the surrounding rock, and we also afterwards that while better veins are not likely to be disturbed by dips or other interruptions. They, at least, may be safely predicted as far as regards the Galway and Peterborough lodes.

Drifting and stoping ought be commenced at the present depth of the shaft on the Galway lode, but this can scarcely be recommended. If the unconstructed management of the works were under my charge, I would continue the sinking to another level of ten fathoms, and commence at the same time a second shaft about two hundred feet to the south-east of the present one. Owing to the fall of the ground the new shaft at about 10 fathoms would reach the EASTERN limit of the drift. The ore taken from these shafts ought to be at least sufficient to defray the cost of sinking. This second shaft would also fairly test the strength and richness of the lode: points known to us, at present, only by the 10-feet exposure in the shaft now being carried down. Until these works were completed, I would not think of erecting a crushing mill or putting up furnaces. A certain accumulation of ore, to feed them, should be on hand before starting, and also a certain amount of stoping ground under excavation, otherwise it will not be possible to keep the furnaces in constant blast.

The mill and furnaces ought to be near each other. A suitable spot for their erection might be found on the Company's ground; but a partly nearly desirable site, for works of this kind, occurs on a lot, adjacent to the Bobcaygeon Road, within a short distance of the Company's property. The necessary ground, I understand, might be rented or easily secured. It is contiguous to a small creek issuing from Silver Lake. A dam could be placed on this creek at little expense, and a good supply of water thus obtained.—Timber for fuel and mining purposes occurs abundantly on the Company's location.

Notwithstanding the loss of metal entailed by its use, the Larrowed American, or Rennie Hearth, giving a blast heated by the combustion of the ore and fuel will be found the most suitable furnace for the reduction of the ore. Pine or other wood is employed as fuel, and very little is required, the heat being derived, in great part, from the combustion of the sulphur in the ore. An ordinary furnace of this kind will give about three and a-half to three and three-quarter tons of reduced metal in three eight-hour shifts, the ore being previously dressed to an average richness of 70 to 75 per cent. At the present time, in consequence of the stoppage of several mining works at no very distant localities mill machinery, steam engines, and furnace materials may, probably, be obtained at a comparatively low cost With judicious management, a sum of $5,000 or $6,000 would be sufficient to start the mine fairly, but a larger working capital will be eventually required in order to achieve a permanent success. Disappointment is very commonly caused, especially in new countries, by an attempt to work mining property on too small a scale. The ore may yield a fair profit, but the production is small in total to render the aggregate profit of much account. Hence, if a lode begin to run poor for a time, or heavier machinery be required, or other difficulties arise to cause a temporary stoppage, the works are too frequently abandoned altogether. I urge these points more particularly, feeling confident that, under prudent and liberal management, no fear of failure need be apprehended as regards the Galway Mine.

A JEALOUS FATHER.

A RAILROAD ADVENTURE.

'Katonah,' shouted the brakesman, opening the car door as the train passed before a splendid little station on the Harlem railroad.

I do not know that I should have particularly noticed that we stopped at all, for I had been napping it for some miles; but just as I was casting an inquiring, sleepy look out of the window, and settling myself for another siesta, my attention was attracted by the entrance of a young lady, a way passenger, who, perceiving that the car was well filled, paused before me in evident embarrassment.

I scarcely wish the reader to infer from this that there were no vacant seats; on the contrary, the chair I occupied was selfishly monopolized by my shawl and valise, which had excluded many an occupant, and on the moment I observed the car door open I mentally resolved not to budge an inch; but one glance at the new comer changed my mind.

She was a young lady of exceeding beauty, dressed in the most tasty style of the present fashion. With that womanly instinct or the soft melancholy of her dark expressive eyes I cannot say, but when she ventured, almost timidly, to inquire if the half seat at my side was occupied,' I gallantly arose and proffered it to her at once. 'I must acknowledge I felt somewhat flattered by her preference, for though a young man, and tolerably good looking, I had the sense to perceive there were far better looking men around, who, like me, might have shared their chair with the handsome lady stranger, I half fancied they envied me too, as the fair girl sat plump down, and her dainty form nestled close to my side.

'I fear I have disturbed you,' said my companion, in a low tone, sweet voice that thrilled me with its soft cadence.

'Not at all, Miss,' I rejoined with more-than-politeness. 'I am too happy to oblige you.'

She bowed and smiled in reply, and a short pause ensued, as a usual ship must sudden magnetism overcame.

In the meantime the train was started, and we rattled swiftly through the fashionable avenue, now dotted on the Brady line of Harlem! The conductor came in, and made through his examination, passing on regarding the tickets of those who were seated from the platform, when I perceived that here was another for New York, and after some hesitation I asked

'You go to the city?'

'Yes,' she replied with a shade of winning coolness; 'I presume you have found that out.'

'I shall keep you company, then,' I observed pleasantly.

'Thank you, sir.'

There was a slight dignity, I thought, in her tone which repelled further familiarity on, so I was very modest man I drew back and said nothing further. On reached the steam horse upon its iron railway. One more station has been passed, and I was just relapsing into my former quietude when my lady friend, to my surprise, leaned toward me and whispered—

'I am very much on the cars.'

'Indeed,' said I, quite charmed with her abruptness. 'You surely are well accustomed to travelling!'

'Perfectly,' she replied with some confidence; 'but that is not it exactly. There are so many dreadful accidents on the railroad!'

'Dreadful indeed,' echoed I.

'And,' added my companion, with naivete; 'it is unpleasant to travel unattended. I usually have my brother Charlie with me. He is a splendid escort.'

'If you will allow me,' I said quite gallantly, 'I will gladly occupy that position.'

'I am much obliged to you, sir,' replied the young lady, with a grateful glance from her dark eyes, 'but I am half frightened to think I am accepting the escort of a stranger; nor that I fear you, sir; but alas, I have a jealous father.'

'A jealous father,' I repeated, somewhat puzzled and surprised.

'Ah yes,' sighed the young lady, 'it is my misfortune, while having wealth, wealth and almost everything that the heart can wish, to be under the control of a tyrannical old step-father, who treats me oft-times in a most cruel manner, debars me from the society of our sex, shuts me up in the gloom of my chamber, and treats me with pitiless rigor if I do not as much as speak to or look at a man.'

'What a monster!' I ejaculated with a face of melodramatic sympathy.

'That is the reason,' she continued, looking around her half fearfully as she spoke, 'that is the reason why I am so full out about trusting myself to your care, but I did it on one condition.'

'Name it,' I rejoined, charmed and delighted with the strange confidence the young lady was reposing in me.

'That you leave me the instant the cars reach New York.'

I was so bewitched by the beauty and charming innocence of my quondam friend that I readily gave the required pledge. Apparently quite relieved the young lady threw aside all reserve, and talked and chatted with me in the most pleasant manner possible. It is needless to say that in an hour I had so far advanced in her good graces as to venture to press her hand, and the sweet half coquettish smile that played around the corners of her cherry lips did not seem to disapprove of the liberty I had taken.

'Do you know,' said she, as we sat chatting confidentially together, 'that I liked your face the first time I saw it.'

'It was sympathetic on both sides, then,' I whispered, drawing her so near that I could feel her hot breath fan my cheek.

'Yes,' she murmured gently withdrawing herself from my glowing embrace, for we had passed through the tunnel, and I had taken a lover's advantage and snatched a hasty kiss.

'You are a naughty man—the naughtiest man I ever saw,' she said in a low and tremulous tone. 'If pa should be on the train, what would he say of such proceedings.'

'Never fear, sweet creature,' I rejoined earnestly, 'your cross old father is miles away, and let us improve the present opportunity.'

'Are you aware,' she observed half mischievously, 'that there is another tunnel beyond, a great deal darker too, than the one we have left?'

'I know it,' said I, with a tender glance at my fair co-lover. 'We are drawing near it very fast.'

Once more I placed my arms around the waist of the lady, and wrapped up in the gloom of the tunnel, took sweet pledges from her lips. It was very gratifying to my vanity. All go at looking men are vain, you know. I perceived that my love's companion clung more affectionately to me than before; indeed, I had scarcely time to tear myself from her arms when we emerged once more into broad day light. She had let her veil drop over her face, but I could detect the crimson flush through the fine net work of lace. Her voice betrayed much agitation as she whispered:

'I have gone too far with you sir; alas! you have ceased to respect me.'

'My sweet charmer,' I replied, 'let us ever be friends. Give me your name and address.'

'My name and address,' she responded, 'you must never know. I already feel frightened to think how far I have permitted myself to venture with a stranger. Forgive and forget me.'

'A flirt—a coquette!'

'No, no,' she returned hurriedly, pressing my hand; 'I am not a flirt, but I dare not—as much as I think of you—let the acquaintance proceed so further. Have pity on me—have pity!'

She looked so pleadingly, so entreatingly, with those dark, soft eyes gleaming through the silken meshes of her veil, that I could not persuade myself to be offended with her. At last she reluctantly consented to give her name, and how big me a prettily embossed card I read, 'Kate Darnell, No—University Place.'

Already I was beginning to share the more to table feeling of my companion to visions of early days flourishing a rose over my head 'rose' vividly before my mind's eye, when suddenly Miss Darnell uttered an exclamation, rose from her seat and simultaneously darted from the car.

I wondered at the cool and dexterity with which she descended, though the cars was propelled quite rapidly by horse power but my wonder and surprise was doubled to be considerably increased when, a few minutes afterwards, a think-not store-looking gentleman entered from the side, his eyes ominously scanning the face of each lady passenger.

'Hallow!' said he rather gruffly, leaving half to me, 'has a young lady been occupying this seat?'

'Yes, sir,' I replied somewhat disconcerted and quite abashed.

'Light, lucky, maroon colored silk and pretty bonnet, eh?' pursued the interrogatively.

'I believe that was her costume,' I replied, coldly.

'By God! she's given me the slip again!' cried the gentleman, slapping his breeches pocket with much emphasis.

'Gone you the slip,' I repeated, a sudden and awful light breaking upon me.

'Yes, the jade is as sharp as a needle.'

'Pray, sir,' said I, with a slight sensation of suffocation, 'may I be so bold as to inquire if you are the father of that young lady?'

'Father, the devil! No, sir, I am a detective.'

'Then,' said I with desperate calmness 'who is this young lady?'

'Bless my soul, she is Nancy Dale—a the fashionable pick-pocket. By Gad, has she been playing her pranks on you?'

The detective groaned, and the passenger gradually comprehending the situation, smiled sweetly. I did not reply—the intelligence was stunning and mortifying in the highest degree. So my beautiful companion was nothing more than a member of the 'swell mob,' and I,—while fluttering myself upon having made a conquest, in reality had been the victim of cunning and designing deceiver; and while she had duped me, far over, while I was watching the coach-door-bought kisses she had dexterously relieved me of watch and purse, and it may be readily believed that my adventure was not without its moral, or that I was thereafter quite so eager for a RAILROAD FLIRTATION.

Church Music in Chicago.

A Chicago correspondent gives the following gossip in reference to the churchchoirs in that city:—"People who are fond of good singing, here only to attend one of our fashionable churches on a Sunday morning, in order to enjoy all the pleasures of a first-class concert, and that for very little money. The choirs in a majority of churches are composed of only four voices, which, with the organ, are considered quite sufficient to make melody for the largest congregation.—Some of the choirs, however, have two or twelve singers and one at least has sixty-five. The second Presbyterian church has acquired notably the finest choir in the city; its quartette costing the congregation the liberal sum of $3,750 a year. Trinity church pays $2,700 for its music; while the Central Presbyterian church allows $2,000 for the same purpose. The above samples will give some examples of what church music costs here, especially when it is borne in mind that there are some hundred and fifty churches in the city. The voluntary principle prevails to a certain extent, as there can be but little doubt that the pay of a paid choir works much more satisfactory, especially among wealthy congregations. Whether paid or volunteer, however, the choir is an essential part of the service, and the people of Chicago take a great pride in the excellence of those who by their sweet and harmonious music assist them in their devotions.

Awful String of Murders.

The Nashville Press and Times, Sept 25th says:—The details of a terrible chain of blood reached us yesterday from Hickman county. The victim was J. C. Wallis, himself the murderer of a man named Sizemore, who fell by a bullet from his pistol about a year ago in the same county.

This murder calls up a long train of homicides. In 1866 an old and highly esteemed citizen of Russellville, Mr. Cain, was killed by a young Federal soldier. citizen of the same county, James Bewley. A short time afterwards Bewley was killed by one of the sons of the old man, Cain.—But a short time was left for young Cain to live. He fell a victim to the murderous hand of Bewley's, Bill Sizemore, who, shortly after the killing of young Cain, completed the list of his murders by brutally murdering Lieutenant Thurmon, of Hawkins county. Sizemore did not live long to gloat over the deeds of blood. The avenger was on his path, and in a very short time Sizemore was sent to eternity by a bullet from the pistol of J. C. Wallis. Wallis is now murdered, and we may in horror exclaim: Where will the terrible tragedy end?

A young gentleman—or an elderly one we don't remember which—after having put his addresses to a lady for some time, popped the question;" the lady, in a frightened manner, said. "You scare me, sir." The gentleman did not wish to frighten the lady, and consequently remained quiet for some time, when she exclaimed, "Scare me again." We did not learn how affairs turned out, but should think it pretty near his turn to be scared.

"Say, Sambo, does you know what makes de corn grow so fast when you put the manure on it?" "No, I don't, headly." "Now, I'll just tell ye. When de corn 'gins to smell de manure, it don't like, de 'manure, so hurries out ob de ground and sits up high as possible, so as not to have to 'ale but it."

LEAP YEAR.—The year is so called because it is ladies jump at a chance of marriage.

It is a very curious thing to tell one's patent in a crowded, thing there are pa many there about.

The Irish Church Report.

The Westminster Gazette thus alludes to the above-named report:—In another page we have given the report of the Irish Church Commission, so that our readers may judge for themselves whether an establishment which requires such paring down does not stand self-condemned. Mr. Disraeli and the supporters of the Irish Establishment have now a basis on which to take their stand. Consolidation of dioceses and reduction in the number and incomes of bishops and of cathedral establishments and corporations, and suppressions and re-arrangements of every kind leave, however, the evil and the wrong standing, and that is the establishment of a heresy imposed originally by violence on the nation, and still abhorrent to the faith of the Catholic people of Ireland. By the proposed reduction, Protestant ascendancy, though shorn of much of its outward splendour, would still be upheld, an offence to the eye and to the heart of a Catholic, and a monument still erect of injustice inflicted by England on Ireland. The proposed reduction would be simply an act of self-preservation on the part of the wrong-doer and the robber of the rights and possessions of the Catholic Church. What is wanted is not an act of reparation. It is an act due to Ireland, it is a duty which England has to fulfil for its own sake. Justice requires its fulfilment, immediate and complete. The disestablishment of the Irish Church ought not to be made a party question of, for vexatious opposition, especially if prolonged, will destroy the completeness of the act. For Catholics to pretend to strike a balance of loss and gain, by misconceive altogether the nature of the act, or to make use of this weighing process as a pretext. The report, it seems to us, supplies a strong argument for complete disestablishment.

PAUPERISM IN ENGLAND.

The number of persons in receipt of relief from the rates in England and Wales in the year ending at Lady-day, 1849 (taking as a fair average the mean of the numbers on the 1st of January and 1st of July) was 6·2 per cent. of the estimated population; in the year 1849 50, 5·7 per cent.; in 1850-51, 5·3 per cent.; in 1851-52, 5·0 per cent.; in 1852 53, 4·8 per cent.; in 1853-54, 4·6 per cent.; in 1854-55, 4·8 per cent.; in 1855-56, also 4·8 per cent.; in 1856-57, 4·6 per cent.; in 1857-58, 4·7 per cent.; in 1858-59, 4·4 per cent.; in 1859-60, 4·3 per cent.; in 1860-61, 4·4 per cent; in 1861-62, 4·5 per cent; in 1862-63, (American civil war), 5·3 per cent.; in 1863-64, 4·9 per cent.; in 1864-65, 4·6 per cent.; in 1865-66, 4·3 per cent.; in 1866 67, 4·4 per cent. The expenditure for all purposes connected with the relief of the poor in England and Wales was 8s. 9¼d. per head of the estimated population in the year ending at Lady-day, 1836; in the year 1834-35, 7s. 7d. per head; in 1835-36, 6s. 4¼d.; in 1836-37, 5s. 5d. The expenditure then gradually rose, and in 1843 reached 7s. 1½d. per head. An improvement then set in, and in 1852 and 1853 the amount was as low as 5s. 4½d. per head. In 1856 it had risen again to 6s. 3½d. The next five years saw a gradual decline, and in the year 1860-61 the rate was but 5s. 2¼d. per head. From that time it has never been below 6s., at which figure exactly it stood in the year 1864-65. In 1865-66 it was 6s. 1½d.; in 1866-67, 6s. 0½d. In the year 1841 the net annual value of the rateable property was £62,540,030, and the expenditure for relief to the poor amounted to 1s. 6·2d. in the pound; in 1847 the annual value was £67,320,587, and the expenditure 2s. 6·9d. in the pound; in 1850 the annual value was £67,700,153, and the expenditure 6s. 7·4d.; in 1856 the annual value was £71,860,271, and the expenditure 6s. 8·1d.; in 1866 the annual value was £93,638,402, and the expenditure 1s. 4·5d.

OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—The failure of the attempt of Murphy, yesterday, to escape from jail was mainly owing to the prompt and courageous action of the witness Lacroix, who happened to be near when he attacked turnkey. Lacroix grappled with Murphy before he had time to deal a second blow, and held him until further assistance arrived. The alarm being given a few of the soldiers on guard went to the scene and speedily secured the prisoners. The jail physician was sent for to dress the wounds on the turnkey's head. There is no doubt but Murphy had studied his intended escape. He was dressed in his best suit, and had placed himself in such a position in the corridor as to dodge the turnkey, then engaged in locking the other prisoners in their cells. The bludgeon with which he was armed, and which he attempted to conceal until the moment arrived for its use, was probably designed to knock down any of the turnkeys he might meet, and enable him to get possession of the keys. Had he succeeded in the bold move it is clear the affair might have proved far more serious than it did.

Considerable excitement was created in Hamilton by the publication in the Times of an account of a robbery which took place at the Bank of Montreal. The vault of the bank was entered, and a bag containing $5,000 in gold carried off. How the robbery was committed is a puzzle, as none of the windows or doors were broken, nor was the vault forced open.

The Gore Bank is also in trouble. Mr. Robt. Park, formerly of this city, and lately manager of the agency in Woodstock, absconded some days ago. He is a defaulter to a large amount, but the precise sum is not yet known, as the investigations are not yet completed. The peculations extend over a period of two years.—Toronto Evening Telegraph, October 16.

Valuable beds of peat have been found in the neighborhood of Cobourg, on the properties of Mr. Stanley, near Grafton; Mr. Winans in rear of Cobourg; Mr. Grimshaw, and also on the old farm of Mr. Solomon. The star says the most extensive discovery has been on the farm of Mr. Geo. E. Jones at the lake. There the whole swamp, surrounding Duck Harbor, has been found to be a peat bed, four to eight feet deep. It is also said that the extensive morass close by Presque Isle, is an enormous bed of peat.

SUICIDE.—On Sunday afternoon a man named J. L. McCallum from Oswego was found dead in his bed in the Railroad house-Belleville, a bottle half filled with laudanum was found on the table in his room. He had been drinking freely for some time past but was held on the body but no further particulars were ascertained.

The National Anthem was, hissed in the Music Hall, Quebec, by some gaffians in the gallery. Cool Basques, of the troupe playing at the time, said it was the first demonstration of the kind he had ever witnessed in Canada, and he hoped it would be the last.

The organ question was again up before the Montreal Presbytery of the Canada Presbyterian Church, and was decided against Knox's Church by a vote of eleven to nine.

In the Court of Queen's Bench at Montreal, Morrice Blake, of the Sabrevois-road, was found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced to imprisonment in the Penitentiary for life.

The Otonabee Fall Show will be held at Keene, on Wednesday the 28th instant.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1868.

Is the Present Government a Coalition?

The bench-men and pap-hunters of the present mis-named Coalition are wont to tell that the Government is composed of men of all parties, Reformers as well as Conservatives, and this is necessary to the safe and happy inauguration and consummation of Confederation. A glance, however, at the doings of the Government, their appointments and distribution of the patronage is enough to convince the most confirmed infidel that both the Dominion and Local Governments are completely in the hands of the Tories. All the appointments to offices of importance, indeed, we may say literally, all the appointments have been given to Tories of the deepest dye, or to those who have sold themselves to the Tories. Brydges, Walsh, Howland and others, who have served John A. or John Sanfield in their late effort to bamboozle the country, are reaping the reward of their iniquity, while not a single Reformer down to petty Crown Land Agents is permitted to obtain or retain office under this degrading Coalition. The patronage of the Coalition is wholly in the hands of these pap-hunters and politicians, tricksters. The codfish and salmon of Nova Scotia and the petty regulations concerning the maritime provinces and Lower Canada only, are published by the column in the Tory papers of the far west, as well as in those in other parts of the country, as the price of their truckling to those in power and for their loud-mouthed advocacy of that monstrosity the pretended coalition. Poor creatures, what a sorry set they must be, when a little advertising patronage is the mess of pottage for which they barter their right to criticise the misdeeds of any set of men, especially of the present combination of political tricksters, who sell their friends and former friendship for the association of a set of hungry hyenas who are just as ready to devour them when the purse strings tighten, as they are now to praise them.

Immediately after the proclamation of Confederation, the Postmaster General, Mr. Campbell, instructed the Postmaster of Peterboro to give all his patronage to the local and better organ here—the pap hunter. Its proprietor had been to Quebec and no doubt had taken an Examiner in his pocket to exhibit the naughty things its Editor had said about Coalition; just as has been done to many of the Catholics of the county to impress on them to support their own organ. But the taking away of a dollar and a quarter of quarterly post office advertising did not prevent us condemning the injustice of the Coalition, nor induce us to be silent while wickedness reigned in high places.

The last master stroke of this Reform Coalition (where was that old Reformer, John Sandfield? or where was Mr. Richards?) is advising the Sheriff to patronize the Tory organ only. We say advise the Sheriff, for we see that some of his advertisements are now in the Peterboro Combination organ, and all these changes are done by advice from head-quarters. The Kingston papers advise the supporting of Mr. Calvin, because all the patronage of the county is now in the hands of the Tories; whereas, if Mr. Britton should be returned, this would not be so. Patronage is the common bosom of good government in their eyes. And this is the government that was to control the Conservative element or kick it out. Poor Sandfield will get kicked out himself some of these days and few will pity him. He and his colleagues have plenty of time to see after petty local advertising agencies, but the settlement of the country and other weightier matters of the law they neglect.—We advise them to open a regular advertising agency in Toronto; Mr. St. Germain should not have it all his own way.

The first snow of the season here fell yesterday morning. The earth was covered in a white mantle for the day but it will not remain long. It will, no doubt, be the means of tempering the atmosphere, and is the forerunner of a week or two of favorable weather. Farmers require a week or two yet to enable them to get the root crop safely stored away.

The Ontario Government has ordered the Sheriff and Clerk of the Peace for Essex to withdraw their patronage from the Signal and bestow it on the Star. What a noble Reform Premier John Sandfield is.

OF

CONSUMPTION!

IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, finding no relief, I tried different receipts and all without any good effect. Besides Peterson of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottles at once, with the Pills; so soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lungs, chills, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing to use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, better and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman Peter C. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him wrote to be of the very highest respectability and a very candid and creditable person, and am confident that I am safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

Rev. W. F. S. HARPER,
Rector of Bath, Ont.

"Jest so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said they were there "every time." If he felt weary in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or unusually oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins again and firm.

Four persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"* * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved a life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y.

"* * * I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. The Plantation Bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD New York City

"* * * I had lost all appetite—was weak and emaciated; I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"* * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 256 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred names of such certificates, but no advertisements so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near the name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See private stamp over the cork.

Poetry.

SILENCE.

In silence mighty things are wrought—
Silently builded, thought on thought.
Truth's temple greets the sky;
And like a citadel with tapestry,
The cedar-limb her subservient powers,
In strength'ning'd stately.

Groundsels as chalices up the taste,
Tall saplings on the forest grow
To tents of mighty girth;
Each mighty oak in silence burns,
And every day he silvered turns
The axle of the earth.

The silent frost, with mighty hand,
Fetters the rivers and the land,
With universal chain;
And, anchored, by the silent sun,
The chain is loosed, the rivers run,
The lands are free again.

SCENE IN COURT.

The Judge of one of the New Orleans Municipal Courts sat gloomy and grand on the bench of crimine. The prisoner occupied the dock apparently meek and pleasant. She had a merry twinkle in her eye however, that promised mischief, and had the magistrate but perceived it, he would have been more careful in his questions:

'How many times are you coming up here?'

'What, yer honor?'

'How many times are you coming before me? This is the third time the present week.'

'Oh no, yer honor!'

'Didn't I see you here yesterday?'

'Why, no, yer honor; it was last night you seed me, in the concert saloon. It was a bit of drink we had together, and yer honor did look beautiful, with your cunning ways and sweet jokes. Aye, yer honor's the man for the gals. The devil admire ye but yours are on ez.'

'Stop your tongue—you can go!'

'Thank ye, yer honor.'

The prisoner went out—the Judge blushed, and the audience roared.

DIDN'T FOSTER NO SUCH FEELIN'.—Deacon Somes was an eastern man who followed oystering, and was one of the long-bell persuasion. The deacon 'allus had a pint' to tell his customers that the money which he received for 'oisters' did not belong to him. 'The good Father made the oisters,' said the deacon, 'and the money is his'n; I'm only a steward.' They do say the deacon had a way of getting about ten cents more on a hundred by his peculiar method of doing business for somebody else. One Sunday morning the old fellow was tearing round from house to house with a suspicious bit of currency in his hand, and more than a suspicion of rage in his face. Some one had given him a bad fifty cents, and he wasn't goin' to meetin' till that was fixed up. 'Why, deacon,' said one of his customers, whom he talked about it, 'what's the odds? what need you care? 'tain't yours, you know; you are only a steward; it isn't your loss.' The deacon shifted his shoulder, walked to the door, snuffed his quid, and said, 'Yaas, that's so; but if you think that I'm agoin' to stand by and see the Lord cheated out of fifty cents, you're mistaken. I don't foster no such feelin'!'

LOVE AND DISCOUNT.—Josephine Gallmeyer as a charming German soubrette, and when starring at Hamburg she attracted enthusiastic young man whom she allowed an entrance to her saloon. The acquaintance ended at the close of her departure, repeated visits soon paid her another visit, when the young [illegible] on his bended knee saw that moment [illegible] my friend?' she heard. 'What ails you, [illegible] tone, and she asked in the most encouraging [illegible] wish to ask a favor, which you could easily grant [illegible] but wait a moment; I will hasten and fetch the casket." The soubrette awaited the return in eager expectation.—"Is he so timid," she said to herself, "as not to venture to present a souvenir to me?" A few moments afterwards the friend re-entered the room. He held in his very neat little box in his hand "Look, Miss Gallmeyer," he said, opening the lid, "these are the finest Bremen cigars. You have many distinguished acquaintances in Whose cavaliers I am a cigar-dealer, and I will give you ten per cent. discount on all you sell."

"TOO CLOSE TO HUM."—Bishop Heber's missionary song has recently received a new version. It runs as follows:

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strand;
Where Africa's sunny fountains
Roll down their golden sand;
To every Southern piece
Shall negro suffrage come,
But not up in New England,
For that's too close to hum."

A KIPPERED DIVINE.—It is said that Dr. Chalmers once entertained at his table a distinguished guest from Switzerland, whom he asked if he would be helped to 'kippered salmon.' The foreign divine asked the meaning of the uncouth word kippered, and was told that it meant preserved. The poor man in a public prayer soon after offered a petition that the distinguished divine might long be kippered to the Free Church of Scotland.'

A Western editor relates a story of a man who bought a lot of hogs in Illinois and drove them slowly to Chicago. He was compelled to sell them there at a loss of $400. Returning home, was asked by his neighbors what were the profits of the operation. "Well," said he, "I reckon I didn't make much money out of the trip, but I had the company of the hogs down."

SITTING UP AND SITTING DOWN.—Swift was one day in company with a young coxcomb, who, rising from his chair, said with a confident and conceited air, "I would have you to know, Mr. Dean, I set up for a wit." "Do you indeed?" replied the dean; "then take my advice, and sit down again."

A little girl of three years was saying her prayers, not long since, when her little brother, about four years old, came softly behind and pulled her hair. Without moving her head, she paused and said: 'Please Lord, excuse me a minute while I kick Herby.'

An Ohio editor refused to speak to the toast, 'Woman,' on the ground that woman was able to speak for herself, and any man who undertook to do it for her would get into trouble.

FITTING THE WOLVES.—Hearing it said that a Canadian monk had been devoured by wolves. "Poor Brutes!" exclaimed Sophia Arnold, "hunger must indeed be a terrible thing!"

'What is the difference 'twixt a watch and fodder bad, Sam?' 'Dunno; gin it up.' 'Because the tickin of the watch is on de inside, and de tickin of fodder is on de outside.'

A lawyer has been pithily described as a man who, in his anxiety to obtain possession of another, has lost possession of himself.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of spurious Coney and Cross Fox for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by [illegible] but by other colors, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Poetry.

POOR.

What! poor you say? Why, never tell me so!
I've more than half the world can show;
Such wealth as mine you cannot know,
Such titles as mine you cannot know.
I've more than heaven eyes can count,
Could ever dream of night or day;
I've treasure hid from sordid hearts,
No dunning thief can take away.

My richest never being distrust
Between me and my fellowmen;
No cold passion fill my breast,
To yield me time for hate again.
But pleasure, pure and joy-ing bring,
They hustle my cares, they make me glad,
They give me all I cannot name,
And buy me smiles when I am sad.

Come here and open wide your eyes,
You are earth's glory at my feet,
You are the sky above my head,
The sunshine on my garden seat;
You are the love that ligh me home,
The children round my cottage door—
The birds, the trees, and grass and flowers,
And you have dared to call me poor.

Come here and open wide your ears,
And hark the music nearing nearer,
It rings from the hills and from the woods
Her high and holy anthem breaks.
Come here and catch the grand old songs
That nature sings the evermore—
The whisperings of a thousand things,
And tell me—tell me, am I poor?

Selections.

EXPIATION.

Margaret Burnside was an orphan. Her parents, who had been the poor people in the parish, had died when she was a mere child; and as they had left no near relatives, there were few or none to care much about the desolate creature, who might be well said to have been left friendless in the world. True, that the feeling of charity is seldom wholly wanting in any heart; but it is generally but a cold feeling, rousing kindred-like folk towards objects of the narrow circle of their own family affections and selfishness has a ready and strong excuse in a struggling. There seems, indeed to be a sort of disgrace in the lot of the orphan off-spring of paupers. On some the eye of Christian benevolence falls at the very first moment of their utter destitution—and their worst sorrows, instead of becoming, terrestrial with the tears shed over their parents' graves. They are taken by the hands, as soon as their husbands have been stretched out for protection, and a limited as means into households, whose doors, had their mothers and mothers been alive, they would never have darkened.—The light of comfort falls upon the inmates the gloom of grief, and attends them all their days. Others again, are overlooked at the first fall of the pen, as if in some measure connected with the wretches were with which all have become familiar, on one very ordinary pities; and thus the orphan, recoiled her all at the extreme hardships of her condition, lives on unheeded by those sympathies out of which grow both happiness and virtue, pining by degrees to the constant pressure of her lot, becomes poor in spirit as in estate, and either regulates like an almost worthless weed that is carelessly trodden on by every foot, or if by some chance or a flower in time loves her destiny, and all her days—not long—be do the life not so much of a weed, as of a place.

Such, till she was twelve years old, had been the fate of Margaret Burnside. Of a slender form and weak constitution, she had never been able for much work; and thus from one discontented and harsh master and mistress to another, she had been transferred from house to house—always the poorest—till she came to be looked on as an encumbrance rather than a help to any family, and thought hardly worth her bread. Sad and sickly she sat on the knee herding the bee. It was supposed that she was in consumption—and as the sin fate of death seemed to lie on the neglected creature—a feeling, something like love was awakened towards her in the heart of pity for which she showed her gratitude by all attending to all household tasks with an alacrity beyond her strength. Few doubted that she was dying—and it was plain that she thought so herself, for the Bible, which in her friendlessness she had always read more than other child, she was seen to look up, as to call attention on the Word of that Being from whom their happiness flowed, was now, when leisure permitted, seldom or never out of her hands, and whenever pleasure, there was no human ear to receive, did the dying girl often support her heart when quaking at natural fears of the grave, by singing to herself hymns and psalms. But her end was not yet come—though by the inscrutable decrees of Providence doomed to be hideous—and sad with almost deepest guilt. As for herself—she was innocent as the insect that sang beside her in the broom, and innocent was she to be up to the last throbbings of her religious heart. When the sparkling fell on the leaves of my Bible, the orphan seemed to see in the holy words, brightening through the radiance, assurances of forgiveness of all her sins—small sins indeed—yet to her humble and contrite heart exceeding great—and to be pondered oft by the intercession of Him who died for us on the tree. Oft when clouds were in the sky and blackness covered the Book, Hope crept away from the darkened page—and The lonely dreamer wept and sobbed over the doom pronounced on all who sin, and repent not—whether in deed or in thought. And then rain came pouring with her an awful thing—but, in her rest, nature she feared to die. But look on that flower by the left side path watered, as it seems, beyond the power of sun and air, and dew and rain, to nourish it to the beauty of life. Next day you happen to turn to the place, the flower is gone, and a darkling grave, no blossom of a darkling grass, and the joyful hearts to look on all the underneath. No! was it with the Orphan. Nature as if, breathing towards her a sudden love, and on my restrained her in a few weeks to life—but, to perfect health and strength she, whom few had thanked or, and for whom still fewer cared, and who united to be the barest girl in all the parish—and the most beautiful of any while she continued to be, as she had always done from very childhood, in the poor's farm at the lobby of the kirk.

Such a face, such a figure, and such a manner, at once so perfectly attired and so meanly placed, attracted the eyes of the young Ladies in the Patron's Gallery. Margaret Burnside was taken under their especial protection—out for two years to a superior school, where she was taught all things useful for persons in humble life—and then got married fit-ter, returning to her native parish, was appointed teacher of a small school of her own, to which were sent all the female children that could be spared from home, from those of parents poorer as her own had been, up to those of the farmers and small proprietors, who knew the blessings of a good education—and that without it, the richer may preach in vain. And thus Margaret Burnside grew and blossomed like the lily of the field—and every eye blessed her—and she slept her health in gratitude, piety, and peace.

Thus a few happy and useful years passed by—and it was forgot on by all—but herself—that Margaret Burnside was an orphan. But to be without one near and dear kindred tie in all the world, must often even to the happy heart of youthful innocence, be more than a penance—a pang thought; and the relove, though Margaret Burnside was always cheerful among her little scholars, and wore a sweet smile on her face for in the retirement of her own room (a pretty parlour with a window looking into a flower-garden), and on her walks among the trees, her eyes were somewhat melancholy, and her eyes were that touching expression, which seems doubtfully to denote—either joy or sadness—but a hint of neat which, in its tranquillity still partakes of the mournful, as if in many dwelt—lies on past sorrows, and how scarcely confined to indulge in dreams of future repose. That profound orphan feeling entwined in the whole character; and some times when the young Ladies from the Castle smiled praises upon her, she retired to an odourable gratitude to her chamber—and wept.

Among the friends at whose houses she visited were the family at Moorside, the highest hill-farm in the parish, and on which her father had been a man. It consisted of the master, a man whose head was grey, his son and daughter, and a grandchild, her schoolar, whose parents were dead. Gilbert Adam on had long been a widower—indeed his wife had never been in the parish, but had died abroad. He had been a soldier in his youth and prime of manhood; and when he came to settle at Moorside, he had been looked at with no very friendly eyes; for evil rumours of his character had preceded his arrival there—and in that peaceful pastoral parish, far removed from the world's strife, suspicion as we have said of

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1868.

What are the Townships Doing.

About two weeks ago we called the attention of the council and of the citizens to the distress in the Red River settlement, caused by the cattle destruction of the crops by the caterpillars—we are glad to be able to say that the Town has done something in the matter. Now, what are the Townships doing? The cities and towns are very often called upon to assist the suffering, very many of the poor of the towns—come from the country, and we have to support them; notwithstanding this, we find that the towns and cities are coming out nobly in the present demands and giving pretty large sums. Should not the rural municipalities aid also?

They are blessed with plenty and good prices too; there is no want among them, and there is no more fitting way of expressing their gratitude for the bounty bestowed than by giving to those that are really in want. The good people of this County do not need to be told that the Red River colonists are their near kinsmen, and as such have a strong claim on our benevolence and charity. We trust to be able to chronicle, next week, that the people of this County recognize the relationship by offering a few hundred dollars to aid their brethern in distress.

RED RIVER.

At a public meeting called by the Mayor on Saturday evening—the Mayor in the chair, and Mr. J. Stratton acting as Secretary,—it was moved by Mr. Hall, (Sheriff,) and seconded by Mr. C. Ormond,—That this meeting, deeply sympathizing with their fellow colonists at Red River in their present distress, and having been blessed with a plentiful harvest and general prosperity, feel it to be a privilege and a duty to assist in a tangible form those suffering under exhaustive depression, beg leave to suggest to our Town Council that a vote of ——dollars should be at once passed, and the money forwarded to them without delay.

Mr. W. Hall thought that the blank should be filled up with $1000 or $2000. Some Towns had given $500, some $250—Toronto $500, and Quebec $800, but in those places the citizens had supplemented these sums. Mr. Sherwood thought that we should consider that this suffering was brought about by circumstances over which the people had no control, and under the circumstances we should deal as liberally as possible; we were blessed with abundance and should show our sympathy by giving a little out of that abundance—in fact, should show how much we sympathize. He thought $500 was not too much for Peterboro. Mr. R. Walton thought that $400 would not be amiss. Others expressed themselves in favour of $500. It was found, however, that while some were for $500, some for $400, that there were some who thought $300 would be a reasonable sum.

Mr. Wm. Hall would rather ask for four hundred dollars and get that sum than ask for $500 and get only $300.

On motion of Mr. Eastwood, seconded by Mr. Romaine,—it was agreed to fill the blank up with $500. After tendering a vote of thanks to the chairman the meeting dispersed.

MISSIONARY MEETING.—A public meeting in aid of the Saltcoats mission will be held (D V.) in St. John's Church School room, on Tuesday evening next, 3rd Nov. at half past seven p. m. The Rev. Mr. Fortin and other gentlemen will address the meeting.

WHO FOOTS THE BILLS?

We have lately had a visit of two members of the Local Cabinet on their way to Burleigh and Stoney Lake. The Conservative clique tried to get up a show for them but it was a signal failure—enough either of the eating and imbibing was concerning.

Mr. Richards made a speech on the occasion, but it only served to prove the utter incapacity of the man for the position he occupies; we would say that we think the man is completely at the mercy of others. He has not pluck enough to act until led by some more designing fellow. Hesitancy, fear, doubts and dangers of office will always weigh to heavy for his ability to grasp any matter, and no matter how economical his Government may appear to be, their experiments and exploration trips will cost as much as is gained by their economy.

WHAT CAN BE SEE IN ONE DAY.

They are now in Burleigh; what can they see of the lands as they pass along the road—the greater part of which was travelled after night. If his vision is such as to warrant him in coming to a conclusion on the quality of the soil of Burleigh or the richness of the rocks, we will have to give him credit for more optical keenness than we have ever been wont to do.

Mr. Carling visit Stony Lake to see what can be done in getting locks at Young's point. In our opinion the whole is a piece of canning of Mr Carling to ensure the votes of Messrs. Reed and Carnegie during this session. The combination is in danger.—These men cannot afford to support them unless they have a promise, Mr. Carling is just the man to give one, we will have great bursting soon but it will end in smoke.

THE COST OF THESE TRIPS.

Who paid for the special train to bring Mr. Richards here when his tardiness left him behind? Who pays the costs of the exploration of commissioners to Stony Lake and Burleigh? What good can come out of it? We suppose the country pays all, it's able, of course it is.

MR. RICHARDS AND CARLING IN THE HANDS OF THE TORIES.

Mr. Richards we are told is an old Reformer. Why was there not a Reformer at the dinner? Why does he permit himself to fall into the hands of the enemies of Reform? Why were not some of our leading Reformers made aware of his coming, and of his desire to take them into his confidence?—The fact is he's gone over body and bones to the enemy and is ready to suffer all things for them, if they will but keep him in office, and this the result of combinations. He came here as the representatives of barely one half of the county and, yet they are entirely selected from that half, and still forsooth, there is no party; was there ever such a political farce enacted in any country? It will not long be tolerated however. Reformers will arise in their might and cast them off and send men true to their principles, and to their country. Even this session may see the consummation devoutest.

A MAN KILLED BY THE FALLING OF A TREE.—We have received intelligence by Mr. J. Gow, that a French named Tuffield Pinotte, was killed in Mr. D. Church's Shanty, in Cardiff on 17th instant by the falling of a tree. It appears that two gangs were chopping together, and just as the trees were about falling, Pinotte shouted to the other gang "look out," when they left the way. The wind caught the tree that the men had left and blew it down, Pecotte endeavoring to get out of the way took the wrong direction and it fell on him. He lived till Wednesday following: he was buried decently in the woods by the men of the Shanty, and a pole dressed and placed over his grave. His brother intends having the body removed to Lower Canada.

VANDENHOFF.—We have only to call the attention of our readers to the fact that Vandenhoff is to be in town, on Monday evening, and will give several readings in the Music Hall, under the auspices of the Literary Club. This Club deserves the praise of the good people of Peterboro for their efforts to afford instruction and amusement, and this the first of the season will, we feel satisfied, be one of no common interest, as affording an opportunity of hearing some readings from the best authors by a master Elocutionist. If admirable sun command a crowded house as Fox, how surely Vandenhoff will also.

The Leader of the 20th inst., speaks in the most flattering terms of Mr. V. as a reader. Let all go and hear him.

Rochester House Toronto.—We invite attention to the advertisement of this excellent Hotel, it is the conveniently situated both to business and the Railway Stations, and the fare, for the standing of the house, very moderate. It is kept by Mr. John Carroll, whom the people of this county so favorably know and who will no doubt make any guest from Peterboro comfortable. Travellers from Peterboro would do well to remember the "Rochester House," Front street.

THE COURT OF ASSIZES commences here next week. Those having to attend court would do well to be here on Monday evening that they may have the opportunity of hearing Vandenhoff, the celebrated Elocutionist and Reader. Teachers sending near the town should not fail to hear him, few of them may ever have another opportunity of hearing a good reader.

FRANK LESLIE'S LADY'S MAGAZINE, for November, has been received and as usual contains some plates that will be of no small interest to the lovers of fashion. The literary part will also be found interesting to those who indulge in light literature. The November number is an excellent one.

In last weeks edition we made a mistake in saying that Mr. S. Fowlie had shown us some rich specimens of quartz full of gold taken from Madoc, we ought to have said Nova Scotia, in which place we under-stand Mr. Fowlie has got hold of some valuable mineral property.

CORRECTION.—The Washing machine recommended at the late Show in the Drill Shed was erroneously put down as the property of Mr. Owen; it ought to have been Messrs. G. Stethem & Co.

Some of our exchanges say that it is reported that Victoria College is to be removed to Toronto. We can scarcely receive it. Perhaps a little home from the Torontonians might induce the absence of place.

After the late Snow fell the weather has become fine, promising better days and affording an excellent opportunity for sealing all the crops are winter sets in.

The Great Tory Rush on Saturday Night.

ABOUT FOUR CITIZENS PRESENT.

As we intimated last week two members of the Great Tory Confederation Fakirization, made their appearance here that week. Mr. Carling on Friday, Mr. Richards not arriving till about half past ten o'clock on Saturday night. On Friday there was great excitement among the combination pimps, making what preparations they could for the gassle. But Mr. Richards, the lion of the Tory Camp, did not come as per appointment. On Saturday their expectations were high till about 9 o'clock p. m., even then no Richards, but a telegram informed them he was on his way by special train, from Port Hope. The appetite however became so strong that they could wait no longer, and accordingly they set to work.

About 30 in all sat down, but when the hungry M. P's and M. P. P's, Reporters and guests were entertained about 16 remained, one half of whom were lumbermen and individuals who swelled the number for patronage.

The Mayor, of course occupied the chair, and Mr. A. H. Campbell the vice chair. On one side we noticed Messrs. W. A. Scott, J. J. Hall, D. G. Hatton, two from the Review office, Geo. A. Stewart, Engineer; and on the other Messrs. Shaw, Lumberman; J. O'Donnel, — Strickland, Rev. Mr. Beck, Geo. Hilliard and Mr. Clurton. (As I ought,) there, with Messrs. Carling, Richards, R. Tully, Williams, Port Hope; Matchett, Perry, Reed and Carnegie, constituted the entire affair.

While engaged in stowing away the ample stores provided by "mine host," Turver, Mr. Richards entered, when a faint effort was made to receive him with cheers, but all mouths were too full for the process, and it had to pass with a few stamps on the floor.

Justice being done to the feast of fat things, the second part of the programme was introduced—he toasts and their accompaniment! The Mayor doing the nice thing. "The Queen and the Royal family" were received with the usual eclat, but in this next toast we had an aping at snobbery that has not occurred in Canada, heretofore; it remained until Saturday night for Mayor Scott to cap the climax as of the funny by proposing, in one toast, "His Excellency the Governor General and His Honor the Lieut. Governor! Our Tory friends will ape anything that proceeds from aristocratic quarters, though by doing so they render themselves open to ridicule. Of course "His Honor" was received as well as "His Excellency," and they proceeded to the "army and navy" from the vice chair, which was introduced by Mr. Campbell, in one of his brilliantly florid speeches. We almost forgot to say that before this Mr. Tully charmed all present by singing the "flag that braved a thousand years," &c., and our excellent band aided materially in the harmonious sounds. Col. Williams, on behalf of the volunteers, responded in a short speech; he praised the volunteers of this Battalion as being well up in drill and are ready for duty. Dr. Emmett being called on also returned thanks, followed by the song "The Law Backed Car," by Mr. Tully.

Then came the toast—"The Honorables, Messrs. Richards and Carling," from the chair, in which Mayor Scott expressed his own great pleasure and the unwonted honor conferred on him by being permitted to propose the toast. He labored hard to make them believe that the ministry was meeting the requirements of the people of Canada, and the present trip was to be of material benefit to the county. Let us wait till we see.

Mr Richards, who by the way is a pleasant looking, apparently good natured, old man of 60 years, and one who would be more at home in his parlor than dabbling in politics, for which he appears entirely unfit, was highly delighted and surprised at the reception offered to him as member of the great Combination. He would not take it as personal, of course it was a token of their assent (of 16 men) to the general policy of the government. He had to consider three great interests—Agricultural, Lumber, and Mineral. His great act for retting the back country, the Free Grant system, &c., was a guarantee that the government desired the settlement of the wild lands, and something had been done for this county, and more would be done. (wil! that not warrant a conservative majority? What's in the tenderloin to our own. The lumbering was a great interest, none desire to sweep it away, if they gained power, (what humbug).

GOVERNMENTAL INCAPACITY.

When they came into power they heard that the Superior mines were yielding $4,000 to $5,000 to the ton, this startled them, and they in fear that the country might be robbed could not bring down a mineral policy, passed a bill merely to protect the miners's. They had since taken a trip to the mines and found that they were deceived by the reports. They were now going to see the wild land of Peterboro, &c., and after this would be able to form, from a personal and observation at the results now approaching.

Mr. Carling, sharpened no doubt by his ale, (he is a reverer we believe,) is a keener man than Richards—sharp enough to say so little that no one will find out his policy. But he told those 16 gentlemen that the Government did really intend to have a policy this session—quite assuring to them it was. He would go and see Stony Lake and then be able to do his mite towards advancing the interest of this County.

The "Legislatures, Dominion and Local Governments" followed.

MR. PERRY'S SPEECH.

Mr. Perry thanked those present for the manner in which this toast had been received, and would ask leave to give place to others who intended to make speeches.

MR. MATCHETT'S SPEECH.

Mr. Matchett was elected to support the Government and this he would do.

MR. CARNEGIE'S SPEECH.

He would simply return thanks for the manner in which the Local Legislature had been toasted.

MR. REED'S SPEECH.

This County contributed largely to the revenue and deserved to receive largely.

The speeches by Mr. W. A. Scott and Mr. Shaw were rouge but longer than the others. We have to omit them as the hour of mail forbids our reporter to remain to the end. We understand that the party broke up shortly after.

What a great thing this will turn out to be, our contemporary to-morrow will tell.

The Sale of Park Lot advertised to come off at A. McNeil's Auction Room, on Saturday, 31 inst., will take place at Gannes Hotel, at half o'clock, Saturday.

OTONABEE FALL SHOW.

The above show was held yesterday in Keene, and although the day was a little cold it brought a number of people from different parts to exhibit or inspect the animals, produce, and handicraft of the people, of that fine Township. The number of entries was 278. The show of young horses surpassed anything at the County shows both in number and quality. A beautiful 2 year old belonging to Mr. John Miller, was very much admired. Mr. Robert Renwick also had a very fine oak at the show, but it was not competing for a prize. It would be difficult to equal either of these in the Province. Mr. Moffatt had also a fine animal. The year olds, too, were better than any shown at Peterboro or Norwood. There were 51 entries of cattle (all grades that we saw,) but they were very good looking animals. Smith of Monaghan can show as good cattle, however. Sheep appear to be little thought of; only three or four good ones were on the ground, and these carried off the prizes. Wheat, barley, oats, peas and roots were well represented and of excellent quality.

Ladies' work: We regret to say we got only a glance at the crowded room in which all were huddled together, and which marred the whole affair. Cam Otonabee met 12 mile, a room of sufficient dimensions to allow the handiwork of their wives and daughters to be seen? We can assure them that if they intend continuing these annual shows, they must provide accommodation. The part we got a glimpse of consisted of things useful Cloth, flannels, stockings, blankets and quilts, indicative of the desire to be as comfortable as possible during our Canadian winter; we could not come near the rest for the press.

On the whole the Otonabee exhibition equalled either the Peterboro or Norwood shows in most articles and surpassed it in many things, and this should stimulate them to go on—provide a good shed for such occasions, continue to deal fairly, and Otonabee will remain able to compete with the whole County, and in some things with the Province.

OF

CONSUMPTION!

IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shashoonee Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the coughing cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different remedies, but all without any good effect. Seeing Pamphlets of Both, recommended me to use the Great Shashoonee Remedy; I procured three bottle, at once, with the Pills; on so on as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, chills, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the healing virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

Poetry.

Only a little child,
Who stops at every street,
To look at the things
Which are spread out to sell,
A poor, pale, pretty child!

And a wild grief for
On which her face can be seen.
Out in the damp, wet fog,

Out in the dreadful night,
By the longest of town days,
In hot, as she sings
Of the pity that flings,
Into a pause on the hard-stained floor.

Mothers who rock her by Shudder with terrible fear,
Hoping her feet may
Never be worse dad.
Children who hear her sing
Stare at her features so wild
Old her the wonder,
Thinking with wonder
What can she be but a child?

Out in the damp, wet fog,
Out in the street and the rain,
Through the blast whirled
Through her again and again,
In this great city
To save her from shame and sin?

Miscellaneous.

A WRITER IN SPITE OF IT.

William Prescott was a rich man's son. He was a delicate boy. With every comfort and advantage in life, he never had to struggle. He was a delicate lad, and quite likely, constitutional, was more carefully brought up. But he losed his hearing and studied hard.

In the college dining-room at Cambridge, one of the boys in play threw a crust of bread at him. It hit one of his eyes, and the blow cost poor Prescott his sight. Of course, more pain was thrown on his mind, and he soon devoted it, that he will eye became inflamed, and he was shut up in a dark room for many months.

This was not hard for a boy with all so many means of enjoyment and improvement within his reach. Study seemed out of the question, and he gave up all thought of [illegible] which he had chosen for his profession. When he got better, his father sent him to Europe. Perhaps Dr. Jackson or London doctors could do nothing for him. But they could not cure him.

He was not to find the light of a new day; he could see his darkened eye-lids. But he did not [illegible] his case. He longed to work. God had given him a mind to improve and use, and he could not be still. A life of ease and idleness did not suit him. [illegible] was his motto. But what could he do?

[illegible] to write a history about the last piece of work one would have thought of his doing. To this he devoted years of labor, and brought out "The Life of Ferdinand and Isabella, Kings and Queens of Spain," in three large volumes. It proved to be one of the best and most successful books for our time, and made him famous immediately, both in this country and Europe. After that, he wrote other histories, and well earned the name of Prescott the historian.

You see what resolution can accomplish, with a purpose and [illegible] to carry it up; and what a life can be lived without it.—Child's Paper.

Statistics of the Colony of New Zealand.

The returns compiled by the Registrar-General of New Zealand of the principal results of the census of that colony taken in December, 1867, have just reached this country. The population of the colony (exclusive of the military and their families and of the aboriginal natives) was, says the Express, at December, 1867, 218,637, showing an increase over the census of 1864, of 26,99 [illegible]. There can be no doubt, however, from the difficulty of getting a correct account of the ever-changing population, that the actual number exceeded this. The respective populations of the chief towns were as follows:—Auckland, 12,000; Nelson, 7,000; Wellington, 7,460; Napier, 1,827; Nelson, 2,[illegible]; [illegible], 3,647; Christchurch, 2,510; Dunedin, 12,776; and Invercargill, 2,006. The [illegible] and their families in the Canterbury and [illegible] were 6,[illegible], women and children, 537. This number, added to the population shown by the census, gives a total of 250,000. Of cattle [illegible] 102 were sheep, and 89,990 [illegible]. The houses or dwelling in the colony numbered 54,000, against 40,000 in 1864. The total quantity of land [illegible] 2,[illegible] acres; the total quantity under crop, 676,867 acres, as compared with 382,655 in 1864. The number of live stock of all kinds (except poultry) had increased from 1,728,093 in 1864 to 5,310,062 in 1867, [illegible] 4,937,274 in 1867. The [illegible] from 1,324 in 1861 and 4,937,274 in 1867, to 8,[illegible],579 in 1867.

—The Aylesbury duck is one of the most desirable; some writers say it is the best. Some of the points denoting that it is well-bred are a pale, flesh colored bill dark, prominent eyes, orange colored legs and a stately carriage. The weight of a full grown pair should reach twelve pounds. They are prolific layers; their nature early and yet quiet. The White Dorking fowls [illegible] one of a pure, brilliant white color, with a rose comb, square in front and straight on the head without a hollow in the middle, and having a point or peak behind, with [illegible] distinct and straight; legs white, and body deep, compact and plump.

—The late Mr. Higgins was six feet seven inches high; his friend Thackeray six feet three and a half. While Thackeray, Mr. Higgins went to [illegible] to see a play. At the door, Thackeray pointed to his companion, and whispered to the doorkeeper, "We are in the profession;" so the pair were admitted without paying. "But," he Thackeray used to end the story, "we were mean, and paid our shillings as we came out."

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced whole[illegible] dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were of vastly inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

Poetry.

THE GOLDEN STAIR.

Put away the little dresses,
That the darling used to wear;
She will need them no earth never,
She has entered the golden stair.

She is with the golden angels,
And I long for her sweet kind;
Where her little feet are walking
In the realms of perfect bliss.

Ask in whisper that our darling
Is in hands of love so fair:
That her little feet are waiting
Close beside the golden stair.

Lay aside her little playthings,
Wet with mother's pearly tears;
We shall miss our darling Bessie,
All the coming weary years!

Fold the dainty little dresses,
That she never more will wear;
For her little feet are waiting,
Up above the golden stair.

Kiss the curly little tresses
Out from her bright golden hair;
Do the angels kiss our darling,
In the realms so bright and fair?

Oh! we pray to meet our darling,
For a long, long, sweet embrace;
Where the little feet are waiting,
And we meet her face to face.

EXPIATION.

The hand of some one had thrown a cloth over a corpse. The room was filled with people—but all their power and capacity of horror had been exhausted—and the silence was now almost like that which attends a natural death, when all the neighbours are assembled for the funeral. Alice, with little Ann beside her, kneeled at the bed, nor feared to lean her head close to the covered corpse—sobbing out syllables that shewed how passionately she prayed—and that she and her little niece—and, oh! for that unhappy father—were delivering themselves up into the hands of God. That father knelt not—neither did he sit down—nor moved—nor groan—but stood at the foot of the bed, with arms folded almost sternly—and with his eyes fixed on the sheet, in which there seemed to be neither ruth nor dread—but only an austere composure, which, were it indeed but resignation to that dismal decree of Providence, had been most sublime—but who can see into the heart of a man either righteous or wicked, and know what may be passing there, breathed from the gates of heaven or of hell!

Soon as the body had been found, shepherds and herdsmen, fleet of foot as the deer, had set off to scour the country far and wide, hill and glen, mountain and morass, moor and wood, for the murderer. It be be on the face of the earth, and not self-plunged in drowning suicide into some quagmire, he will be found,—for all the population of many districts are now afoot, and precipices are clomb till now brushed but by the falcons. A figure, like that of a man, is seen by some of the hunters from a hill top, lying among the stones by the side of a solitary loch. They separate, and descend upon him, and then, gathering in, they behold the man whom they seek, Ludovic Adamson, the murderer.

His face is pale and haggard—yet flushed as if by a fever centered in his heart. That is no dress fit for the Sabbath-day—soiled and savage-looking—and giving to the eyes that search an assurance of guilt. He starts to his feet, as they think, like some wild beast surprised in his lair, and gathering itself up to fight or fly. But—strange enormity—a Bible is in his hand! And the shepherd who first seized him, taking the book out of his grasp, looks into the page, and reads, "Whoever sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be surely shed." On a leaf is written, in her own well-known hand, "The gift of Margaret Burnside!" Not a word is said by his captors—they offer no needless violence—no indignities—but answer all exclamations of surprise and astonishment (O! was one so young be so hardened in wickedness!) by a stern silence, and upbraiding eyes, that like daggers must stab his heart. At last he walks doggedly and sullenly along, and refuses to speak—yet his tread is firm—there is no want of composure in his face—now that the first passion of fear or anger has left it; and now that they have the murderer in their clutch, some begin almost to pity him, and others to believe, or at least to hope, that he may be innocent. As yet they have said not a word of the crime of which they accuse him—but let him try to master the expression of his voice and his eyes as he may, guilt is in those stealthy glances—guilt is in those reckless tones—And why does he seek to hide his right hand in his bosom?—And whatever he may affect to say—they ask him not—most certainly that stain on his shirt-collar is blood. But now they are at Moorside.

There is still a great crowd all round about the house—in the garden—and at the door—and a troubled cry announces that the criminal has been taken, and is close at hand. His father meets him at the gate—and, kneeling down, holds up his clasped hands, and says, "My son, if thou art guilty, confess, and die." The criminal sagely waves his father aside, and walks towards the door. "Fools! fools! what mean ye by this? What crime has been committed? And how dare ye to think me the criminal? Am I like a murderer?" —"We never spoke to him of the murder—we never spoke to him of the murder!" cried one of the men who now held him by the arm; and all assembled then exclaimed, "Guilty, guilty—that one word will hang him! O, pity, pity, for his father and poor sister—this will break their hearts!" Appalled, yet firm of foot, the prisoner forced his way into the house; and turning, in his confusion, into the chamber on the left, there he beheld the corpse of the murdered up the bed—for the sheet had been removed—as yet not laid out, and disfigured and deformed just as she had been found on the moor, in the same unshapen heap of death! One long insane glare—one shriek, as if all his heart-strings at once had burst—and then down fell too strong was on the floor the load. One trial was past which no human hardihood could endure—another, and yet another, awaits him—but these he will bear as the guilty brave have often borne them, and the most searching eye shall not see him quail at the bar or on the scaffold.

They lifted the stricken wretch from the floor, placed him in a chair, and held him upright, till he should revive from the fit. And he soon did revive; for health flowed in all his veins, and he had the strength of a giant. But when his senses returned there was no one to pity him; for the shock has given an expression of guilty horror to all his looks, and, like a man walking in his sleep under the temptation of some dreadful dream, he moved with fixed eyes towards the bed, and looking at the corpse, gobbled in hideous laughter, and then wept and tore his hair like a distracted woman or a child. Then he stooped down as he would kiss the face, but staggered back, and, covering his eyes with his hands, uttered such a groan as is sometimes heard rending the sunset's breast when the avenging Furies are upon him in his dreams. All who heard it felt that he was guilty—and there was a fierce cry through the room of, "Make him touch the body, and if he be the murderer, it will bleed!"—"Fear not, Ludovic, to touch it, my boy,"—said his father; "bleed afresh it will not, for thou art innocent; and savage though now they be, who once were proud to be thy friends, even they will believe thee guiltless when the corpse refuses to bear witness against thee—and not a drop leaves its quiet heart!" But his son spoke not a word, nor did he seem to know that his father had spoken, but he suffered himself to be led passively towards the bed. One of the bystanders took his hand and placed it on the naked breast, when out of the corners of the teeth clenched mouth, and out of the swollen nostrils, two or three blood-drops visibly oozed—and a sort of shrieking shout declared the sacred faith of all the crowd in the dreadful ordeal. "What body is this? 'tis all over blood!" said the prisoner, looking with an idiot vacancy on the faces that surrounded him. But now the sheriff of the county entered the room, along with some officers of justice—and he was spared any further shocks from that old saving superstition. His wrists soon after were manacled. That he were all the words he had uttered since he recovered from the fit—and he seemed now in a state of stupor.

Ludovic Adamson, after examination of witnesses who crowded against him from many unexpected quarters, was committed that very Sabbath night to prison on a charge of murder. On the Tuesday following, the remains of Margaret Burnside were interred. All the parish were at the funeral. In Scotland it is not customary for females to join in the last simple ceremonies of death. But in this case they did; and all her schoolars, in the same white dresses in which they used to walk with her at their head into the kirk on Sabbaths, followed her bier. Alice and little Ann were there, nearest the coffin, and the father of him who had wrought all this woe was one of its supporters. The head of the murdered girl rested it might be said, on his shoulder—but none can know the strength which God gives to his servants—and all present felt for him as he walked steadily under the dismal burden, a pity, and even an affection, which they had been unable to yield to him ere he had been so sorely tried. The Ladies from the Castle were among the other mourners, and stood by the open grave. A summer day had never shone from heaven, and that very grave itself partook of the brightness, as the coffin, with the gilt letters—"Margaret Burnside—Aged 18"—was let down, and the clods thundered hollow disappeared. No flowers were sprinkled there—nor afterwards planted on the turf—vain offerings of unavailing sorrow! But in that nook—beside the bodies of her poor parents—she was left for the grass to grow over her, as over the other human dead—and nothing but the very simplest headstone was placed there, with a sentence from Scripture below the name. There was less weeping, less sobbing, than at many other funerals; for as sure as Mercy ruled the skies, all believed that she was there—all knew it, just as if the gates of heaven had opened and shewed her a white-robed spirit at the right hand of the throne. And why should any mortal lamentation have been wailed over the senseless dust? But on the way home over the hills, and in the hush of evening beside their hearths, and in the stillness of night on their beds—all—young and old—all did nothing but weep!

For weeks—such was the pity, grief, and awe inspired by this portentous crime and lamentable calamity, that all the domestic engorges in all the houses far and wide, were melancholy and mournful, as if the country had been fearing a visitation of the plague. Sin, it was felt, had brought not only sorrow on the parish, but shame that as we would not wipe away; and strangers, as they travelled through the moor, would point the place where the foulest murder had been committed in all the annals of crime. As for the family at Moorside—the daughter had their boundless compassion—though no eye had seen her since the funeral; but people, in speaking of the father, would still shake their heads, and put their fingers to their lips, and say to one another in whispers, that Gilbert Adamson had once been a bold, bad man—that his religion, in spite of all his repulsive austerity, were not the aspect of truth—and that had he held a stricter and a stronger hand on the errors of his misguided son, this foul deed had not been perpetrated, nor that wretched sinner's soul given to perdition. Yet others had gentler and humaner thoughts. They remembered him walking along God-supported beneath the bier—and at the mouth of the grave—and feared to look on that head—formerly grizzled, but now quite grey—when on the very first Sabbath after the murder he took his place in the elder's seat—and was able to stand up along with the rest of the congregation, when the minister prayed for peace of his soul, and hoped for the deliverance out of jeopardy of him now lying in bonds. A low Amen went all round the kirk at these words—for the most hopeless called to mind that maxim of law, equity, and justice—that every man under accusation of crime should be held innocent till he is proved to be guilty. Nay, a human tribunal might condemn him, and yet might he stand acquitted before the judgment of God.

There were various accounts of the behaviour of the prisoner. Some said that he was desperately hardened—others, sunk in sullen apathy and indifference—and one or two persons belonging to the parish who had seen him, declared that he seemed to care not for himself, but to be plunged in profound melancholy for the fate of Margaret Burnside, whose name he voluntarily mentioned, and then bowed his head on his knees and wept. His guilt he neither admitted at that interview, nor denied—but he confessed that some circumstances bore hard against him—and that he was prepared for the event of his trial—condemnation and death. "But if you are not guilty, Ludovic, who can be the murderer?—Not the slightest shade of suspicion has fallen on any other person—and did not, alas! the body bleed when"—— The unhappy wretch sprang up from the bed, it was said, at these words, and hurried like a madman back and forward along the stone-floor of his cell. "Yea—yea," at last he cried, 'the mouth and nostrils of my Margaret did indeed bleed, when they pressed down my hand on her cold bosom. It is God's truth!"—"God's truth?"—"God's truth. I saw one drop, and then another, trickle towards me—and I prayed to our Saviour to wipe them off before other eyes might behold the dreadful witnesses against me—but at that hour Heaven was most unmerciful—for those two small drops—as all of you saw—soon became a very stream—and all her face, neck, and breast—you saw it as well as I miserable!—were at last drenched in blood. Then I may have confessed that I was guilty—did I, or did I not, confess it? Tell me—for I remember nothing distinctly;—but it I did—the judgment of offended Heaven, then pursuing me for my sins, had made me worse than mad—and so had all your abhorrent eyes—and, men, if I did confess, it was the cruelty of God that drove me to it—and your cruelty—which was great—for no pity had any one for me that day, though Margaret Burnside lay before me a murdered corpse—and a hoarse whisper came to my ear urging me to confess—I well believe from no human lips, but from the Father of Lies, who, at that hour, was suffered to leave the pit to ensnare my soul." Such was said to have been the main sense of what he uttered in the presence of two or three who had formerly been among his most intimate friends, and who knew not, on leaving his cell and coming into the open air, whether to think him innocent or guilty. As long as they thought they saw his eyes regarding them, and that they heard his voice speaking, they believed him innocent—but when the expression of the tone of his voice, and of the look of his eyes—which they had felt belonged to innocence—died away from their memory—then arose against him the strong, strange circumstantial evidence, which—wisely or unwisely—lawyers and judges have said cannot lie—and then, in their hearts, one and all of them pronounced him guilty.

But had not his father often visited the prisoner's cell? Once—and once only—for in obedience to his son's passionate prayer, beseeching him—if there were any mercy left either on earth or heaven—never more to enter that dungeon, the miserable parent had not again entered the prison—but he had been seen one morning at dawn, by one who knew his person, walking round and round the walls, staring up at the black building in distraction, especially at one small grated window in the north tower—and it is most probable that he had been pacing his rounds there during all the night. Nobody could conjecture, however dimly, what was the meaning of his banishment from his son's cell. Gilbert Adamson, so stern to others, even to his own only daughter, had been always but too indulgent to his Ludovic—and had that lost wretch's guilt, so exceeding great, changed his heart into stone, and made the sight of his old father's grey hairs hateful to his eyes? But then the jailor, who had heard him imploring—beseeching—commanding his father to remain till after the trial at Moorside, said, that all the while the prisoner sobbed and wept like a child—and that when he unlocked the door of the cell, to let the old man out, it was a hard thing to tear away the arms and hands of Ludovic from his knees, while the father sat like a stone-image on the bed, and kept his tearless eyes fixed sternly upon the wall, as if not a soul had been present, and he himself had been a criminal condemned next day to die.

The father had obeyed, religiously, that miserable injunction, and from religion it seemed that he had found comfort. For Sabbath after Sabbath he was at the kirk—he stood, as he had been wont to do for years, at the poor's-plate, and returned grave salutations to those who dropt their mite into the small sacred treasury—his eyes gaudy, and even critically, regarded the pastor during prayer and sermon—and his deep bass voice was heard, as usual, through all the house of God, in the Psalms. On week-days, he was seen by passers-by to drive his flocks a-field, and to overlook his sheep on the hill pastures, or in the pinfold; and as it was still spring, and seed-time had been late this season, he was observed holding the plough, as of yore—nor had his skill deserted him—for the furrows were as straight as if drawn by a rule on paper—and soon bright and beautiful was the braird on all the low lands of his farm. The Comforter was with him, and, sorely as he had been tried, his heart was not yet wholly broken, and it was believed that, for years, he might out-live the blow that at first had seemed more than a mortal man might bear and be! Yet that his woe, though hidden, was dumb, all one long, knew, from certain tokens that intrenched his face—cheeks shrunk and fallen, brow not so much furrowed as scarred, eyes quenched, hair thinner and thinner far, as if he himself had torn it away in handfuls during the paleness of midnight—and now absolutely as white as snow; and over the whole man an indescribable air-liness far beyond his years—though they were many, and most of them had been passed in torrid climes—all showed how great had its ravages been on the once [illegible] and was then those most wasting when they work in the heart, and in the brain, unrelieved by the shedding of one single tear—when the very soul turns dry as dust, and life is imprisoned, rather than mingled, in the decaying—the smouldering frame!

The Day of Trial came, and all labour was suspended in the parish, as if it had been a mourning fast. Hundreds of people from this remote district poured into the circuit town, and besieged the court-house. Horsemen were in readiness, soon as the verdict should be returned, to carry the intelligence—of life or death—to all those glens. A few words will suffice to tell the trial, the nature of the evidence, and its issue. The prisoner, who stood at the bar, in black, appeared—though miserably changed from a man of great muscular power and activity, a magnificent man, into a tall thin shadow—perfectly compiled; but in a face so white, and wasted, and woe-begone, the most profound physiognomist could read not one faintest symptom either of hope or fear, trembling or trust, guilt or innocence. He mildly seemed to belong to this world, and stood fearfully and ghastly conspicuous between the officers of justice, above all the crowd that devoured him with their eyes, all leaning towards the bar to catch the first sound of his voice, when to the indictment he should plead "Not Guilty." Those words he did utter, in a hollow voice altogether passionless, and then was suffered to sit down, which he did in a manner destitute of all emotion. During all the many long hours of his trial, he never moved head, limb, or body, except once, when he drank some water, which he had not asked for, but which was given to him by a friend. The evidence was circumstantial, and consisted of a few damning facts, and of many of the very slightest sort, which, taken singly, seemed to mean nothing, but which, when considered all together, seemed to mean something against him—how much or how little, there were among the agitated audience many differing opinions. But slight as they were, either singly or together, they told fearfully against the prisoner, when connected with the fatal few which no ingenuity could ever explain away; and though ingenuity did all it could do, when enabled by eloquence of the highest order—and as the prisoner's counsel sat down, there went a rustle and a buz through the court, and a communication of looks and whispers, that seemed to denote that there were hopes of his acquittal—yet, if such hopes there were, they were deadened by the calm, clear, logical address to the jury by the counsel for the crown, and destroyed by the judge's charge, which amounted almost to a demonstration of guilt, and concluded with a confession due to his oath and conscience, that he saw not how the jury could do their duty to their Creator, and their fellow-creatures, but by returning a one verdict. They retired to consider it; and during a death-like silence, all eyes were bent on a death-like image.

It appeared in evidence, that the murder had been committed—at least all the gashes inflicted—for there were also finger-marks of strangulation—with a bill-hook, such as foresters use in lopping trees—and several witnesses swore that the bill-hook which was shewn them, stained with blood, and with hair sticking on the haft—belonged to Ludovic Adamson. It was also given in evidence—though some doubts rested on the nature of the precise words—that on that day, in the room with the corpse, he had given a wild and incoherent denial to the question then put to him in the din, "What he had done with the bill-hook?" Nobody had seen it in his possession since the spring before—but it had been found, after several weeks' search, in a bag in the moss, in the direction that he would have most probably taken—had he been the murderer—when flying from the spot to the loch where he was seized. The shoes which he had on when taken, fitted the foot marks on the ground, not far from the place of the murder, but not so perfectly as another pair which were found in the house. But that other pair, it was proved, belonged to the old man; and therefore the correspondence between the foot-marks and the prisoner's shoes, though not perfect, was a circumstance of much suspicion. But a far stronger fact, in this part of the evidence, was sworn to against the prisoner. Though there was no blood on his shoes—when apprehended his legs were bare—though that circumstance, strange as it may seem, had never been noticed till he was on the way to prison! His stockings had been next day found lying on the sward, near the shore of the loch, manifestly having been washed and laid out to dry in the sun. At mention of this circumstance a cold shudder ran through the court; but neither that, nor indeed any other circumstance in all the evidence—not even the account of the appearance which the murdered body exhibited when found on the moor, or when afterwards laid on the bed—extorted from the prisoner one groan—one sigh—or touched the imperturbable deathliness of his countenance. It was proven, that when searched—in prison—and not before—for the agitation that reigned over all assembled in the room at Moorside that dreadful day, had confounded even those accustomed to deal with suspected criminals—there were found in his pocket a small French gold watch, and also a gold brooch, which the Ladies of the Castle had given to Margaret Burnside. On these being taken from him, he had said nothing, but looked aghast. A piece of torn and bloody paper, which had been picked up near the body, was sworn to be in his handwriting; and though the meaning of the words yet legible was obscure, they seemed to express a request that Margaret would meet him on the moor on that Saturday afternoon she was murdered. The words, "Thursday"—"meet me"—"last time"—were not indistinct, and the paper was of the same quality and colour with some found in a drawer in his bedroom at Moorside. It was proved that he had been drinking with some dissolute persons—poachers and the like—in a public-house in a neighbouring parish all Saturday, till well on in the afternoon, who, as he left them [illegible] was seen running along the hollow in the direction of the moor. Where he past the night between the Saturday and the Sabbath he could give no account, except once when, unasked, and as if speaking to himself, he was overheard by the jailer to mutter, "Oh! that fatal night—that fatal night!" And then, when suddenly interrogated, "Where were you?" he answered, "Asleep on the hill;" and immediately relapsed into a state of mental abstraction.

MANUFACTURE OF PINS.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post, gives the following graphic account of the manufacture of pins as it is now conducted:

The pin machine is one of the closest approaches that mechanics have made to the dexterity of the human hand. A small machine, about the size of a tailor's sewing machine, only stronger stands before you. On the back side a light belt descends from the long shaft at the ceiling that drives all the machinery, ranged in rows on the floor. On the left side of our machine hangs on a peg a small reel of wire, that has been straightened by running through a sequenced system of small rollers.

This wire descends and the end of it enters the machine. Then is the food consumed by this insatiable, voracious little dwarf. He pulls it in and bites it off by inches, I presume, one hundred and forty bites to the minute. Just as he seizes each bite a saucy little hammer, with a concave face, hits the end of the wire three taps and "upsets" it to a head, while he gripes it in a counter-sunk hole, between his teeth. With an outward torsel of his tongue he lays the pin sideways in a little groove across the rim of a small wheel that slowly revolves under his nose. By the external pressure of a stationary hoop these pins roll in their places, all they are carried under two series of small dies, three in each.

The dies grow finer toward the end of the series. They lie at a slight inclination on the points of the pins, and by a series of cams, levers, and springs, are made to play "like lightening." Thus, the pins are pointed and dropped in a little shower into a box. Twenty-eight pounds of pins is a day's work for one of these jerking little automatons. Forty machines on the floor make are hundred and sixty pounds of pins daily. These are then polished. Two very intelligent machines reject every crooked pin, even the slightest irregularity or form being detected.

Another automaton asserts half a dozen lengths in as many different boxes, all at once and unerringly, when a careless operator has mixed the contents of boxes from various machines. Lastly, a person governs of a machine hangs the pins by the head on an inclined platform through as many "slots" as there are pins in a row on the papers. These slots converge into the exact space spanning the length of a row. Under them runs the strip of pin paper. A head-like part of the machine catches one pin from each of the slots as it falls, and by one movement sticks them all through two corrugated ridges in the paper, from which they are to be picked by taper fingers in boudoirs and all sorts of human fingers in all sorts of human circumstances. Thus you have its genesis:

"Tall and slender, straight and thin, Pretty, little, useful pin."

A beautiful Yankee trick was once exposed by those modern Yankee pins. A not ever-scrupulous antiquarian was displaying the relics of the "Salem Witchcraft" to a wondering throng at a shilling a head. Among the relics was a saucer full, more or less, of pins taken from arms, stomachs, etc., of the bewitched victims. This was a chance for one of the astonished, who was a pinmaker. He gave a close squint at the pins, and opened his eyes very wide. "Do you say that these pins were taken from the unfortunate victims of witchcraft in Salem?" solemnly inquired the pin-man. "Of course they were; what do you ask that question for?" responded the showman. "Because I find one little obstacle to my faith in your story," rejoined the pin-man. "Solid-headed pins were not invented until two hundred years after the Salem witchcraft?" Moral—Showmen of relics should accost antiquarians and experts when "getting up" their stock.

A Good Reply.—One of the colored members of the Georgia Legislature being sneered at for his rude speech, replied: "You laugh at my ignorance—would you have been any more learned than I am, if, for forty-seven years you were not permitted to own a spelling-book without running the risk of the lash?" This was a home thrust, but it was not appreciated by the obliviary.

A New York and Chicago merchant conversing on the railway train of the merit of their respective cities, the former remarked:—

"But you must own New York is the great city—the metropolis, so to speak, of the country."

"Yes," remarked the Chicago man, "New York is a right smart place for business enterprises; New York is the Chicago of the East."

This is not quite so bad as the man in town, who on being asked his opinion remarked:—"That New York was too far from Bobsetycon ever to be much of a place."

The man who strained a point got a little twist in himself.

SPAIN.

The Provincial Government has issued a manifesto concerning the administration of the kingdom. After passing in review the various reforms decreed by the late Central Junta, they proceed to argue in favor of the decentralization of the administrative power, and conclude by promising to render a faithful account of their doings to the constituent Cortez. Some Spaniards of advanced liberal views advise the sale of Cuba to the United States as the most direct and speedy method of solving the question of the abolition of slavery.

LONDON, Oct. 28—The reports that Great Britain, France, and Italy have renewed diplomatic relations with Spain under the Revolutionary Government are confirmed. It is authoritatively announced that Prussia and Portugal have also recognized the new Government, and that the Papal Nuncio at Madrid has put himself in communication with the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The progressist clubs of this city have formed a union for political purposes. At a recent meeting of the united clubs Senor Olozaga informed them that Queen Isabella would abdicate in favor of Don Carlos.

The election for members of the Commercial Cortes will take place on the 29th of November.

Senor A Vale, Colonial Minister, has issued a circular announcing that the Colonies will be placed upon the same electoral basis as the rest of Spain.

LONDON, Oct. 29—It is fully confirmed that Prussia, Portugal, France and Great Britain have renewed their relations with the new government of Spain.

Four Young Men Missing—The Circumstances of their Disappearance.

About ten days ago seven gentleman left Big Bay Point, near Barrie, for the purpose of shooting and fishing on lake Simcoe. They proceeded to an island near the mouth of the Muskoka river, where they camped for some days but their provisions giving out, four of the party, named respectively Joseph Hunt, John Boon, Charles Sandford and James Lawrence left the island in a sail boat with the intention of procuring a fresh supply at Barrie, a distance of about sixty miles. They had been gone for three days when those that had remained on the island determined to return to Barrie, and, if possible, meet the others. They failed to find them on their way, and when they reached Barrie they were surprised to learn that they had not yet arrived. On Saturday it was reported that their boat had been found at Jackson's Point, and, strange to say, it was in perfect order. This gave their friends hope, and they immediately procured the services of a small steam-boat and set off in search of them among the numerous islands on the lake. One of the missing party is an expert boat-man having won several sailor's prizes at the Barrie races. Mr. Hunt is about forty five years of age, is married and has five children, while the other are young men between the ages of nineteen and twenty-one. The event has caused great excitement in Barrie and the neighborhood where the young men reside. It is supposed that they landed on some one of the islands, and that their boat drifted away, leaving them there without means of getting home. It is to be hoped this conjecture will prove correct, and that the missing men will soon be found.—Telegraph.

The Times New Orleans special says: —A procession of Democrats in the parish of St. Bernard killed two colored men and produced consternation among the colored people who assembled in large numbers. They killed a white man and his two sons and burned his bakery and house. The excitement extended to New Orleans. Democrats in arms were patroling the city in bands of fifty six yesterday and last night Troops are now in town patroling the streets. Democratic clubs are also patroling and shooting colored men. At three o'clock the city is more quiet, but great apprehensions exist. An armed body of two hundred Democrats attempted to take a steamer for the scene of conflict in St. Bernard, but General Rousseau seized the boat and prevented it. Seymour clubs, last night, broke into the rooms of the Republicans Club and destroyed the paraphernalia. Houses and places of business, of various Republicans have been forcibly entered and property destroyed. The Mayor and committee called on the Governor to-day, and demanded the dismissal of the Metropolitan police immediately. This he refused to do. A large meeting of Democrats also demanded the dismissal of the police. General Rousseau ordered the crowd to be dispersed.

BEER AND RELIGION.—The religious mind of Dublin is a good deal exercised over a question just now broached there. When Guinness, the famous and wealthy brewer, died, the Bishop of Cork preached a sermon, in which he spoke of the admirable manner in which the deceased brewer used the great wealth "which God had placed at his disposal." Whereupon the Bishop is vehemently assailed by a righteous pamphleteer, who alleges that he in effect charges God with being concerned in the beer traffic, and with taking the four pences and three pences per bottle from the poor men who ought to have used it to support their families, and "placing it at the disposal of Sir Benjamin Guinness." This charge is elaborately worked up in a pamphlet intended "for circulation by temperance societies."

Bismarck is a popular landlord. His estate covers some 16,000 acres, of which he leases all but the castle and park. Having repeatedly observed that one of his tenants seemed to be in very bad spirits, he one day took the opportunity of asking the cause—whether, perhaps, his rent was too high.—"It is not that" said the tenant, "but I have no capital, and without capital one cannot get on—one can make no improvements." "And how much do you want?" said the Count. "Six thousand thalers" ($4,560) was the reply; "and if I were to borrow them I should have to pay most exorbitant interest." "There you are mistaken," said the count, "you can have them at a very reasonable rate. Go to my secretary this afternoon, and he will give you the sum at once"

Two men, named Garwood and Carr, were arrested on board the steamer "City of Cork" at Halifax, from England, on Monday, on a charge of embezzlement at Manchester. They were brought up before Judge Wilkins on habeas corpus and remanded, the judge being of the opinion that the chief of police's affidavit of the arrest and a cable telegram was sufficient evidence for their detention until the arrival of a detective from England.

The Grand Jury of Toronto recommend corporal punishment for young offenders and in cases of brutal conduct, such as wife beating, for adults.

CANADA WELLINGTON.—Dame Rumour is rife with the announcement that the Hon. George Brown will probably be a candidate to fill the position lately rendered vacant by the lamented death of Dr. Parker, M. P.—Ottawa Sentinel.

Dr. Lacerte was returned on Tuesday, the 27th inst., to the House of Commons, for St. Maurice County, P. Q., by a majority of 260 over Mr. Gerin Lajoie.

THE LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO.

On Tuesday the Local Legislature of Ontario met in Toronto. There was a great preparation for a show, but although a fair turn out it was by no means as extensive as expected. Gov Howland, in his opening speech, referred to his visit to the Provincial Exhibition and the pleasure he had derived from it.

He then informs the assembled wisdom that the Arbitrators have not been able to adjust certain differences between the Province of Ontario and Quebec, but trusts they will at an early day.

He assures them that the Immigration question will be attended to, as representatives from Ontario, Quebec and the Dominion are now at Ottawa considering a plan of action.

The Election law is promised a little dabbling in reference to independence of members. The Civil law in the matter of dispensing with certain sittings of County Courts and Courts of Quarter Sessions; and a change of some sort in the Mineral laws likewise.

He hints at a necessity for a Deaf and Dumb Asylum, in which this class of persons can be properly treated and cared for. One, he says, worthy of the Province. Why not say according to the necessity of the Province.

Another scheme of the Government is the erection of certain central jails or prisons in certain localities, suitable for two or three or more counties, where prisoners sentenced to confinement for a less term than two years might be placed and forced to undergo discipline, and where their labors could be utilised, towards defraying their maintenance. These are to be analogous to Penitentiaries. The great question will be the cost of erecting buildings. Could none of the present jails be used for this purpose by a moderate outlay?—We must wait till we see the Bill before we make any remarks.

NOTICES.

Attorney-General Macdonald gave notice that he would, on Friday, move for leave to introduce the following Bills: An Act to repeal certain acts and enactments therein mentioned; to abolish the Court of impeachment for the trial of County Judges; and to make other provisions in that behalf: An Act to define the privileges, immunities and powers of the Legislative Assembly, and to give summary protection to persons employed in the publication of sessional papers: An Act to provide for oaths to witnesses being administered, in certain cases, for the purposes of the Legislative Assembly: An Act to amend chap. 119 of the Consolidated Statutes for Upper Canada, so far as relates to the fees of Sheriffs: An Act respecting members of the Legislative Assembly: An Act to secure the independence of the Legislative Assembly: An Act respecting the security to be given by officers of Ontario: An Act to continue the Legislative Assembly in in case of the demise of the Crowe.

PERSEVERANCE.—We invite attention to the advertisement announcing the Lecture of Mr. O. S. Fowler, formerly of N. Y. He is undoubtedly the most renowned living Phrenologist, and his Lecture being free must attract a large crowd. He will be at Caisse's Hotel during the week, where he can be consulted.

PETERBORO' ASSIZES.

Justice Haggarty, presiding.

This court opened on Monday. Mr. John Hillyard Cameron, Q. C., has charge of the criminal proceedings on behalf of the Crown.

The Queen vs. James Farley.—Shooting with intent of doing grievous bodily harm. As our readers are aware this happened in Dec. about a month since, when Farley shot at and wounded Lachlan Nolan while entering the house of Farley's father. Nolan set forth that he had been buying colts that day—he and James Farley, and that they were going to put them in the stable he saw a light in Farley's, and on going to enter was shot by James Farley, who afterwards went and gave himself up. The defence was that Farley was afraid of Nolan because of some previous threats. S Smith for prisoner. Verdict: Guilty of assault—sentenced to 5 months in jail having been in already 1 month.

The Queen vs. Sovais,—Larceny. Not guilty.

The Queen vs. Howden,—True bill; not to be found.

The Queen vs. R. Roby.—Rape. In this case Roby was charged with rape, but this failed. The Judge then directed the jury that they could consider whether it was an attempt at rape. The jury, however, acquitted him.

The Queen vs. Richard Stinson,—Assault. Stinson is evidently insane and dangerous, and the object of trying him was more to get him out of the way of doing harm. Verdict: not guilty on ground of insanity.

CIVIL CASES.

Royal Canadian Bank vs. J. M. Grover,—Weller for plt; Payne for deft. Verdict for plf, $413.88.

Gilmour vs. McDonald.—Referred. S. Smith for plt; Weller & Hatton for deft.

McDonald vs. Gilmour.—Referred. Weller & Hatton for plf; S. Smith for deft.

Fowler vs. Perry, et al.—Referred. J. Armour for plf; Weller & Hatton for deft.

Dickson vs. Toole,—J. F. Dennistoun for plt: S. Smith for deft. Verdict for plf. $10.

Paterson vs. the Town of Peterborough.—This case arose out of damages to plaintiff's property during the spring freshets, when the creek overflowed, on account of the ice damming up the creek. S. Smith for plf; Weller & Hatton for Town. Verdict, $100 damages.

Walsh vs. Hamilton,—
This is a case in which it was sought to show that a deed of a lot of land was invalid, on the ground that the person named in the deed, to whom it was made, was dead at the time. Verdict for deft.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

To the Honorable Mr. Justice Haggerty:

The Jurors of our Sovereign Lady the Queen upon their oath present,—That having in course of their duties inspected the jail and offices connected therewith, find them amply commodious for the present or probable wants of the County, and keept in a clean and orderly condition; the officers seemingly, perform their duties in a trustworthy and becoming manner.

Your Grand Jurors regret to hear that no sufficient means exist for the employment of convicts undergoing the sentence of the Courts, and think Legislative provisions should be made to remedy this want.

Your Grand Jurors are find confined in the Jail, a young man whose offence is abuse of his parents when under the influence of intoxicating liquors The present, it appears, is not his first confinement for a similar crime. He seems heartily sorry for the crime, and your Grand Jurors feel it a duty to suggest that some provisions should be made by which a refuge and employment might be provided for those who should be in the unfortunate position of the person alluded to.

Your Grand Jurors regret to find in the jail a lunatic who has been an inmate for over two years in consequence of the over-crowded state of the Asylum at Toronto, and are happy to learn that an extension of the accommodation there is being made which, they trust, will afford relief in this as well as in cases.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. SUTHERLAND,
Grand Jury Rooms, Foreman.
Peterboro, Nov. 3rd, 1868.

THE SWISS BELL RINGERS AND ALLEGHANIANS.—This troupe will appear at the Music Hall to-morrow evening, Nov. 6th, and we are requested to extend an invitation to the clergy of all denominations, who will be admitted as usual on presentations of their names at the door. The Rev. Mr Spurgeon in speaking of the Alleghanians, says:—

"The most worthy songsters that have ever visited Britain's shores. Their singing is worthy of all the commendations so heartily bestowed upon it; and no human tongue could discourse more melodious music than is uttered by the metal tongues of their magical bells."

THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.

This is another institution of our Town that has a strong claim on us. It appeared at first like a rival to the "Literary Club," but it is not; it has its mission to perform in a different way. It is intended to bring out a class that would not join the "Club," and it is also looking towards supplying a certain amount of elementary education that the Literary Club never contemplated attempting. To this end it has opened evening classes in arithmetic, book keeping and drawing, which will prove very acceptable to young men engaged through the day. The Committee, too, provided a rich treat in the way of works of art and beauty, which the citizens kindly lent them for exhibition during the few days past. The St. Andrews Hall, where they were on exhibition, drew a large number of visitors on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Monday and part of Tuesday. The variety was very great and in many cases very rich, rare and curious. Ornaments valued at large sums, paintings, curiosities collected from every quarter, curious workmanship, photographs, steel plates, Indian relics, Chinese curiosities, collections of coins and fancy work all neatly arranged for inspection were to be seen and which to many proved interesting. We regret, however, to learn that some one's cleptomania was such as to induce him or her to take a pair of small Indian Photo's. Some friends of the person would do well to return them to the committee and thus enable them to return safely the articles to their proper owners. The act will create an unwillingness to again trust valuable articles to the mercy of those afflicted with this terrible malady.

The Literary Club.—Vandenhoff.

The reading of Vandenhoff, on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Literary Club, was a decided success in every respect. The readings were well rendered, Mr. Vandenhoff fully maintained the good name he has gained at other places. The audience, too, was one of the best that has yet graced the "Music Hall," in respect to numbers, and consisted of the elite of the town and village, who all appeared highly pleased.

The club deserves the warmest support of the citizens. For nearly three years it has provided the principal amusement afforded of a Literary character, and this, its first entertainment of the season, gives it a still stronger claim. We sincerely trust that members will continue their efforts, and that the Club will continue to receive its usual support.

UNION SCHOOL.

The Board met on Tuesday evening. Present—Messrs. Coulter, Cluxton, Cameron, Rodgers, Toole and Lundy.

The minutes of previous meeting were read.

Mr. Rogers enquired if the circulars sent round were to be taken as they read, "that all children whose parents resided out of the town should pay 50 cents per month"—Messrs. Coulter and Cluxton remarked that it was not intended to include parents who paid taxes in the town.

There was also some talk whether the Board can charge a different rate per month for pupils attending the Grammar School Department; some holding that they could, and a few the opposite.

The law is very plain on this matter.—All who pay any rate for the support of the Grammar School has a legal right to send on the same terms, and as the County does contribute to the school, every individual in the County has an equal right to attend on the same terms, at least during the current year.

The Principal read a report, showing the school in a very satisfactory state. The attendance for October is as follows:

North Ward, on register, 34; average, 29.
Primary, on register, 83; average, 70.
Miss Curtis's room, on register, 64; average, 71.
Mr. Taylor's room, on register, 58; average, 47.
Mr. McFaul's room, on register, 37; average, 28.
Miss Beatty's room, on register, 47; average, 42.
Miss Borrowman, on register, 74; average, 66.
Mr. Hardie, on register, 42; average, 32.
Miss Hatton, on register, 36; average, 30.
Total boys for month, on register, 237; average, 213.
Total girls for month, on register, 259; average, 228.

At late inspection of Grammar School 18 boys had been admitted and 12 girls.

At present there are 144 pupils on the Grammar School register—100 boys, 44 girls.

A school for the South Ward was next discussed, when it was agreed, on motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Cameron,—That the Chairman, Mr. Cameron, and the mover wait on Robert Nicholls, Esq., and ascertain on what terms he would permit the Board to erect a new school house on Lot No. 8, South of Simcoe street.

On motion of Mr. Cluxton, it was also ordered to employ Mrs. Charlier for a month as assistant teacher in the Primary Department, at the rate of $200 a year, until it would be ascertained whether she would succeed as a teacher.

The Board then signed a petition to parliament, relative to the Upper Canada College and the Grammar School grants, and adjourned.

A County Ploughing Match.

In another column will be found the names of successful competitors at the East Riding ploughing match. We have had a little conversation with some of the Otonabee farmers, and they assure us that these matches have been the means of stirring up the young men, and that they believe the ploughing done on Saturday last could hardly be surpassed in Ontario.

Smith and Monaghan have not had a match, but this was owing to the uncertain state of the weather; we would throw out the hint to our young men—what do they think about a match for the whole County next year? Let there be prizes sufficient to induce them to come out and there is no fear of results. If committees were named in each Township, a large sum could be realized—say $400, and this sum properly divided would enable a committee to offer large premiums. We merely throw out the hint, and ask the farmers to consider the matter for another year.

At the Wentworth Assizes a man named Hall obtained a verdict against Lieut.-Gov. Howland for $136, for getting enabled in a hot bath owned by Mr. Howland in Toronto.

PLOUGHING MATCH.

The East Riding ploughing match came off on Saturday last on Mr. Blizard's farm. The day was very severe indeed, rain pouring down from about eight o'clock till dark. Notwithstanding, about 12 o'clock those present determined that they would not let it off a second time let the ground should be frozen the next day. There were 26 entries and 23 really competed—an evidence that severe as the day was the people of the East were not to be frightened. Through the kindness of Jas. Cameron, Esq., we have been furnished with the prize list, which is as follows:

MEN'S MATCH.

1st, James Cameron, jr., a Plough worth $14 Mr. Cameron ploughed two years ago and claimed the first prize then also.

2nd, David Henderson, a Plough worth $10.

3rd, Richard Elmhirst, $5. given by Geo. Read, Esq., M. P. P., and a Vest worth $2, given by A. Campbell, Esq., Keene.

4th, Thomas Stewart, $3, and a Felt Hat worth $2, from Mr. Evans, Keene.

5th, Thos. Barry, $2, and a Flannel Shirt worth $2.

6th, Paul Scott, $1, and a two inch auger worth $1.50.

7th, John Graham, $1.

BOY'S MATCH.

1st, Thos. Millar, son of Jas. Millar, Esq., a Plough worth $10.

2nd, Wm. Stewart, $3.

3rd, Wm. Christie, $4, and a Vest worth $2, from Mr. Christie, Westwood.

4th, Jas. McFee, $3, and a pair of Boots worth $2, from Campbell & McNeely.

5th, John Henderson, $2, and a Necktie from Mr. Sharp.

6th, David Taylor, $1, and a Sash worth $1.

7th, John Gillespie, $1.

8th, John Clancy, $1.

We are informed by good ploughmen that the work was done in excellent style, notwithstanding the severity of the day, and the heavy rain tending to drive the horses off their course. All the prize men are Canadians, too; although there were old countrymen there who have often done good work, our young Canadians carried off all the premiums. That speaks well for the County of Peterboro.

The judges were Wm. Bredin, John Smith and Robert Harrison, Esqs.

At the close, the whole party were treated to a sumptuous dinner by Mr Tuos. Blezard, who did all in his power to make them as comfortable as the day would permit. Everything passed off quietly.

Agricultural—Turnips and Carrots.

Through the kindness of Mr. Waram we give the prizes for Turnips and Carrots for the Township of Smith, and also the West Riding, Mr. Matthew Waram and E. Mann Judges in both cases.

SMITH.

Turnips: Nicholas Walton, 1st; Samuel Wallace, 2nd; Robert Tully, 3rd.

Carrots: Wm. Darling, 1st; Geo. Tully, 2nd; Jas. Middleton, 3rd.

WEST RIDING.

Turnips, Nicholas Walton, 1st; Robert Tully, 2nd; Matthew Walton, 3rd.

Carrots, Wm. Beavis, 1st; Geo. Tully, 2nd; John Riddell, 3rd.

Peterboro' Protestant Home.

At a meeting held in the Protestant Home on Wednesday, the 15th September, 1868, Judge Dennistoun appeared before the Committee and presented a mortgage for one thousand dollars, that Mr. Henry Pearson, of Smith, wished to convey to Trustees for the benefit of the Home, and it was resolved that the handsome gift be accepted with many thanks; also that Mr James Frederick Dennistoun be requested to draw an assignment to carry out Mr. Pearson's wishes to Trustees, and that the Trustees be Sheriff Hall, A.W. Kempt, Esq., and Col. Hamilton.

Since the establishment of the Peterboro Protestant Home for the destitute was first decided upon, the Ladies connected with its management have been desirous of erecting a building as a permanent Home in place of the present temporary one. Mr. Pearson's generous gift has opened to them a prospect of attaining this object, if they can apply the whole amount to its furtherance. By the terms of the mortgage, however, no portion either of the original $1,000 or of the interest to accrue from it, comes into their hands before March, 1870, but by that time it is hoped that, with the assistance of the public who have supported them so well in their work as at present, they may be enabled to take active steps towards carrying out the design.

The subscriptions and donations to be accounted for by the Treasurer, as received since December 8th, 1858, appeared in an issue of this paper in the early part of the current month. Mention has still to be made of a subscription from Mr. Romaine, not though in money, nor entered as amongst the cash receipts.

In the statement of accounts furnished as above, Mrs. Calcutt's name is given as a contributor for the benefit of Mrs. Nelson. This refers only to the monies had from her, but, in addition, she has constantly, since Mrs. Nelson's admission, supplied her with various requisites, as applied for, of which no previous acknowledgement has been made.

Contributions from other sources of useful second hand clothing or furniture, provisions, &c., not belonging to the Treasurer's accounts, are duly notified to the public after the close of each month through the two newspapers of the town.

J. P.,
Treasurer, &c.

The thanks of the Protestant Home Committee are given to the undermentioned friends for donations in October:—Mrs. Tully, large basket of Potatoes and Turnips; Capt. Ratcliffe, quarter beef, shank and head; Mrs. Walter Patterson, basket of apples; Mr. White, of Monaghan, large piece mutton and sheep's head and two hearts; a friend, 20 cents; Mrs. Hamilton, large parcel of clothing; Mrs. Miller, many useful articles of furniture, clothing, &c.; Mrs. W. H. Scott, large parcel clothing, furniture, tomato catsup, and many other things too numerous to mention; a friend, pickles and preserves; Mrs. Walter Patterson, roast of beef; Mrs. Kempt, large cheese; Mrs. Thos. White, half a dozen plates, coffee pot and clothing.

Three men sentenced to be hung at the late Sheriffs Court of Queen's Bench. They are John Perkins, Robert Perkins and Andrew Monkton. The execution to take place on the 18th day of January next.

PROTECTIVE FIRE COMPANY.—The following is the list of officers for the ensuing year:—

Captain, J. O'Donnell
1st Lieutenant, John Robertson.
2nd Lieutenant, J. M. Cobb.
Secretary, B. Hall.
Treasurer, F. Hamilton.
1st Branchman, C Robinson.
2nd Branchman, T. Rutherford.
3rd Branchman, Wm. Cartwright
Captain of Hose, J Gibbs
Lieutenant of Hose, C. Henderson.
Engineer, J. Fardell.
Axemen, J. English and Wm. Minaker.

RELIGIOUS.—We have been requested to state that on sabbath evening, Col. Haultain will preach in the Wesleyan Methodist Church at the usual hour, and that after service a collection will be taken up in aid of the French Canadian (Point au Trembles) Mission.

LOWER CANADA MUNICIPAL LAWS.—There will be a meeting of Mayors and Councillors of the Eastern Townships, on the 17th inst., to take into consideration the Municipal Institutions and report for the information of the Local Parliament of Quebec at its approaching session.

At the recent Wentworth Assizes a man named Charles Camp was sentenced to be hung on the 15th December. Crime: Rape. The jury had recommended him to mercy.

The Orange brethren of several lodges in Peterboro intend having a public meeting in their hall, on the 5th instant, instead of the usual display on the anniversary of the gunpowder plot.

Blanchard the Union Candidate, at the Inverness election, Nova Scotia, was defeated by a large majority.

A man named Mackay is now confined in Hamilton jail for robbing Her Majesty's mail.

POLITICAL IMMORALITY.—Mr. James E. Smith the present Mayor of Toronto, has been appointed Collector of Customs in Toronto. We did think that such an office required a man of known business ability and unimpeached integrity; but it would appear by the present appointment that such requirements are not at all essential. All that seems to be needed is that a man get the right hold of Sir John A. McDonald, and all is right, no matter it both character and ability be as distant from him as the antipodes. We ask, where is the political morality of such a proceeding? Is it right that a man of such mediocre abilities as J. E. Smith is possessed of, should thus be placed head and shoulders over several other public officers far in advance of himself in mere ability, and infinitely superior a him in integrity of character. We confess we should be glad to see less exhibitions of political immorality in the actions of the present Government of Canada.—Banner.

CHURCH ROBBING AT WELLINGTON SQUARE.—On Monday the 26th inst., some sacrilegious rascals broke into the Temperance Hall, and broke open the Sunday School Library desk, scattered the books around the hall, and carried off a small box containing the voluntary contributions of the scholars. They then went to the Presbyterian Church, broke into the vestry, and carried off some towels. Thence they proceeded to the Roman Catholic Church, but it is not known yet what they carried off from there. The amount of their depredations is not fully known, as it was not discovered until this evening.—Globe.

The Montreal Witness lately announced that the bones of a mastodon had been found in Danville, Quebec. It now appears that it was in Danville, Ont., the skeleton of such an animal was found. E. Billings, Esq., stated before the Natural History Society, Montreal, on the 26th inst., that he visited the place and examined the bones in question. He describes it as a mastodon of medium size, perhaps nine feet in height. The remains were found in a swamp imbedded in sand, the bones much decayed. He said it was clear that the animal lived long after the glacial period.

Seven missionaries from France arrived last week in Montreal, under the auspices of the French Canadian Missionary Society. Three of them are converted Catholics. One has been assigned a professorship in the Pointe aux Trembles Institution, and the others are to be employed as preachers and colporteurs among the French Canadians. The employment of these missionaries will require a yearly expenditure by the Society of $5,000, of which Canada is expected to contribute $1,000, U. States $2 500, Great Britain $1,500.

A young man named John Lamb, about 21 years of age, disappeared in a rather mysterious manner in the early part of last week from the wharf near Dominion, lying at Peters' wharf. He took his watch and some other things from his pocket and left them in the cabin, went on deck, and has not been seen or heard of since. Thinking he might have fallen overboard and been drowned, parties grappled all around the vessel, but without avail. The whole matter is still a mystery.—News.

ACCIDENT.—The Hamilton Times states that while Dr. Parker was lying on his death bed in Guelph, his brother, the Rev. W. R. Parker, Wesleyan Minister at Stanstead, while riding in Barnston, on the 21st inst., with his wife and child, had his carriage precipitated over the bank by his horse taking fright. Mr. Parker received a contusion and cut on his head, which were quite serious. The others escaped serious injury.

LORD MONCK.—It is said that it is now settled beyond further doubt that His Excellency Lord Monck will take his departure from Canada on the 14th Nov. proximo. It is also settled that the new Governor General will not leave England until the end of November, which will necessitate the swearing in of General Windham as administrator. Col. Monck, the military secretary to His Excellency is here at present.

Whoever may be the new Sovereign of Spain, the revolution is certain to effect a considerable economy in the civil list. The annual donation to the Royal Family has hitherto been £458,000, apportioned as follows:—The Queen, £340,000; her husband, £24,000; her son, Alfonso, £24,000; her daughter, (the Countess Girgenti,) £20,000; and her mother, Queen Christine, £30,000.

The schooner Scandinavian, bound from Chicago to Oswego with 12,000 bushels of wheat, went ashore about ten miles above this place at 4 p. m. on Saturday. The vessel is sunk in 12 feet of water and is a total wreck. The crew and the captain's wife took to the rigging and remained there until 10 a. m. yesterday, when they were rescued in an exhausted condition. They are all here now and doing well.

The steamer "Gresham" struck in the Galop Rapids on Friday last, and sank till her hurricane deck lay flush with the surface. Passengers, &c., were speedily despatched from Montreal to raise her. Her passengers and cargo—the latter little injured, were forwarded to Prescott by the ferry boats of that place. The water in the St. Lawrence is so low that rocks never before seen are visible.

ARCHBISHOP LONGLEY DEAD.—Cable despatches state that the Archbishop of Canterbury, his grace the Most Rev. Charles Thomas Longley, D.D., died yesterday, aged 76. His death appears to have been somewhat sudden and unexpected, as we had received no previous announcement of his illness

"HIS EXCELLENCY."—Up to this time the Government of Ontario has fought shy of the Duke of Buckingham's "order" as to the title of the Lieut.-Governor. We believe they have at last concluded to style him "His Excellency." We think this is to be regretted, not because we do not feel convinced the "Order" was a mistake in this respect, but that such a summery rejection of imperial instructions and desire is a very way of inculcating a sentiment of loyal respect in the generation just growing into maturity. The late Mr. GeGee used strongly to dwell upon the necessity of respecting authority as an important element of our constitutional system. Now-a-days, and in Ontario, it evidently goes for little in some quarters.—Leader.

A French paper remarks, that if Count Bismarck has turned up the revolution in Spain, it has done good service to France, for it is impossible that what has happened across the Pyrenees, should not suggest to Napoleon III some wholesome reflections.—"When a man sees his neighbour's chimney catch fire, he sweeps his own."

The Roman correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette says: "It is believed at the Vatican that the Spanish revolution has been got up by the Duke de Montpensier, prompted by Count Bismarck, who is trying by this movement to force Napoleon from the attitude of inaction."

The price of provisions in 1868 is almost double of that of 1861, yet the remuneration of the laboring classes remains as it was in 1861. It is therefore difficult for a laborer to maintain himself and family, when from the same wages he must pay double for clothing—for groceries—for provisions—for everything except the great Shoshonees Remedy, for diseases of the throat, liver, lungs, &c., which the humanity of the Proprietors still keeps at $1 per bottle. For sale by all druggists.

OUR FORTIFICATIONS.—It is now nearly fifty years since our fortifications have been looked after in any way, we think it is now high time and that it behoves our government to put them in a proper state of defence, and have our Lakes and Rivers well protected, "one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; but while we are protecting ourselves against a foreign enemy we should not forget to fortify ourselves against bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, pains in the back and side, cholic, cholera morbus, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the most effectual medicine Sold by all Dealers in Medicine, at 25 cents per bottle.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers. 37

JOHN BULLINGS ON PEACOCKS.—Peacocks don't spooney upon close scrutiny, to me of many vital importance to themselves nor anybody else, just now. We read in the old books that the wife of Jupiter quite often appeared upon the boulevard at mount Ida, with peahens in double harness to a skeleton; they was undoubtedly so, but you must remember that peahens, like everything else, have grown weaker, if not wiser. As a means of diet, peahens are not good—if the am. it is a profound secret known only to a few. They are altogether too good looking to be worth much; they has made them useless; it often works so, but they is worth more to a peahen than to anybody else; take the duty awl out of them, and what is left wouldn't bring more than fifteen dollars. The female peahen has a sad and spoon-um demeanor; they look and sekt as tho they had been brought up and educated just to admire their handsum husbands. There is one unfortunate fact that I have noticed among the animal and bird creashun, and that is, the men all outstrip the wimmen, and keep them under their thumbs. What a mess this would range in the human family. The grate duty of the peahen himself is in his posterior. This he can lift up perpendicular, and spread like a fire-herd. But when you lean right down to actual arithmetik, one peahen in a township is enuff capital for the whole population, and he can't ov enny more account, pretty soon than the circus bills on the but end ov a horse the next day after the performance is over.

TIGHT BREECHES.—Some woman, in an apparently revengeful spirit, thus holds forth on the prevailing gentlemen's fashions:—The press has never been remiss in deprecating the follies of the female sex upon the occasion of each change in the style of female apparel, but it is a noticeable fact that the popinjay style of breeches now in vogue, is more ridiculous than anything the women wear, and is unnoticed. Female loveliness is such that it can make charming any extreme of fashion; but what length of familiarity, pray heaven, can ever make tolerable—much less comely—is a desirable appendage of a human creature, wound about so tight with clothes, as to stop the circulation? The present style of pantloons is neither comfortable, comely, nor economical. The 'swell' that adopts it can neither stoop nor sit down without positive danger. Here comes a six-foot gallant, with a number ten boot, and a figure like a pair of tongs. There is not enough in his legs to make a show, and he walks as if each boot was a base viol. By his side is another creature of the same style, half his length whose make up reminds one of a plumb pudding perched on a pair of pin bars. They go to the extreme of folly, and the very essence of indecentness. Nothing a woman ever wore will compare in folly with tight breeches on a bandy-legged human biped.

In Gillespie's History of Falkirk is a story of the battle in which Prince Charlie defeated the Hanoverians. After the battle the victor buried the dead, and some other? One of these, a poor native of Skye, was relentlessly dragged to the edge of the pit. He earnestly entreated his barbarist to spare him. Just gang in wi' quiet, was the cool reply, or the Prince may be angry.

When Artemus Ward was approached in a theatre one evening by a young mad who said he, was a son of John Jacob Astor, and desired the loan of a quarter of a dollar, Artemus replied: Young man go home and tell your father to order your funeral, and I'll engage to furnish the corpse.

The father of Baron Rosen, a shrewd and humble-born German, sent his son out into the wide world with this advice as to expenditure: In clothing live up to your means, in food below your means. Don't be a soldier; stand erect before a man with a title.

A young lady who teaches music in an academy in Western New York, sent an order to a publisher, recently, in which she had spelled the words very poorly. She appologised by adding a postcript as follows: You must, excuse this letter, as I is bi nest but spell by ear.

A facetious gentleman named Hunt, of Williamsburgh, Mass., dining upon a tough fowl in a Boston hotel, asked the landlady where the fowl came from. She replied—"From Williamsburgh." Impossible, said Mr. Hunt, for the town hasn't been incorporated over forty years.

A fellow in an obliterious state took up his lodgings on the sidewalk. He woke next morning and straightened himself up, looked on the ground upon which he had made his couch, and said:—Well if I had a pickaxe I would make up my bed.

My son said Jallup to his hopeful scion, I'm dreadfully feared you keep bad company, from all I hear. Why father, you know I'm at home about all the time. Old gent guesses he won't continue the subject.

A witness spoke of a particular person as having seen him partially clad. Was he not quiet nude? asked the examining counsel. No replied the witness, he wore a pair of spectacles.

A celebrated wit was asked why he did not marry a young lady to whom he was much attached. I know no reason, replied he, except the great regard we have for each other.

"Tom," said a girl to her sweetheart, "you have been paying your distress to me long enough. It is time you made known your contentions, so as not to keep us in expense any longer."

Silly Indeed!—We know a young lady of the name of Elizabeth who has recently gone into a convent, and who as a matter of course has taken the vow of "Silly Beth!"—Judy.

It is a mooted question whether persons who attempt to destroy themselves are of sound minds; but there is no doubt that the Parisian who leap into the river are in Seine.

The affected singer at a concert, the other night, was told by a wag in the audience "to come out from behind his nose and sing like other people."

The young lady who saw a baby without hissing it has acknowledged that her friend's bonnet is handsomer than her own.

The new moon reminds one of a giddy girl, because she is too young to show much reflection.

It is an original remark that the "estate" of matrimony may be said to be in a "ring fence!"

Because a young fellow is seen with a weed in his mouth, it doesn't follow that he is in mourning.

Wheels, like men are often tired, and very frequently from a kindred cause—going "rolled or much."

The man who minds his own business was in the city a few days ago, but left immediately he fell no lonesome.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were coloured and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and inconvertable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the Blood we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was the ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Kenestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Cameron, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞ Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourself.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

OF

CONSUMPTION!

IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—SIRS,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I complete a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different nostrums, but all without any good effect. Squire Peterson of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottle, at once, with the Pills; so soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lungs, chills, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing to use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make the above known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER C. V. MILLER,
Earnestown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman Peter C. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy for all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

Poetry.

HESTER.

BY CHARLES LAMB.

What maidens such as Hester die,
Their place ye may not well supply,
Though ye among a thousand try,
With vain endeavor.

A month or more hath she been dead,
Yet cannot I by force be led
To think upon the wormy bed
And her together.

A springy motion in her gait,
A rising step, did indicate
Of pride and joy no common rate,
That flushed her spirit.

I know not by what name beside
I shall call it; if 'twas not pride,
It was a joy to that allied,
She did inherit.

Her parents held the Quaker rule,
Which doth the human feeling cool,
But she was trained in Nature's school—
Nature had blessed her.

A waking eye, a prying mind,
A heart that stirs is hard to bind;
A hawk's keen sight ye cannot blind—
Ye could not Hester.

My sprightly neighbour gone before
To that unknown and silent shore!
Shall we not meet, as heretofore,
Some summer morning?

When from thy cheerful eyes pray
Hath struck a blite upon the day—
A blast that would not go away—
A sweet forewarning.

Selections.

EXPIATION.

(Concluded.)

These were the chief circumstances against him, which his counsel had striven to explain away. That most eloquent person dwelt with affecting earnestness on the wickedness of putting any evil construction on the distracted behaviour of the wretched man when brought without warning upon the sudden sight of the mangled corpse of the beautiful girl, whom all allowed he had most passionately and tenderly loved; and he strove to prove—as he did prove to the conviction of many—that such behaviour was incompatible with such guilt, and almost of itself established his innocence. All that was sworn to against him, as having passed in that dreadful room, was in truth for him—unless all our knowledge of the best and of the worst of human nature were not, as folly, to be given to the winds. He beseeched the jury, therefore, to look at all the other circumstances that did indeed seem to bear hard upon the prisoner, in the light of his innocence, and not of his guilt, and that they would all fade into nothing. What mattered his possession of the watch and other trinkets? Lovers as they were, might not the unhappy girl have given them to him for temporary keepsake? Or might he not have taken them from her in some playful mood, or received them—(and the brooch was cracked, and the mainspring of the watch broken, though the glass was whole)—to get them repaired in the town, which he often visited, and she never? Could human credulity for one moment believe, that such a man as the prisoner at the bar been sworn to be by a host of witnesses—and especially by that witness, who, with such overwhelming solemnity, had declared he loved him as his own son, and would have been proud if heaven had given him such a son—he who had baptized him, and known him well ever since a child,—that such a man could rob the body of her whom he had violated and murdered? If, under the instigation of the devil, he had violated and murdered her, and for a moment were made the hideous supposition, did vast hell hold that demon whose voice would have tempted the violator and murderer—suppose him both—yea that man at the bar—sworn to by all the parish, if need were, as a man of tenderest charities, and generosity unbounded,—in the lust of lucre, consequent on the satiating of another lust—to rob his victim of a few trinkets! Let loose the wildest imagination in the realms of wildest wickedness, and yet they dared not, as they feared God, to credit for a moment the union of such appalling and such paltry guilt. Yet that man who now trembled not before them, but who seemed cut off from all the sensibilities of this life by the scythe of Misery that had shorn him down! But why try to recount, however feebly, the line of defence taken by the speaker, who on that day seemed all but inspired. The sea may overturn rocks, or fire consume them till they split in pieces; but a crisis there sometimes is in man's destiny, which all the powers ever lodged in the lips of man, were they touched with a soul from heaven, cannot avert, and when even he who strives to save, feels and knows that he is striving all in vain—aye, vein as a worm—to arrest the tread of Fate about to trample down its victim into the dust.—All hoped—many almost believed—that the prisoner would be acquitted—that a verdict of 'Not Proven,' at least, if not of 'Not Guilty,' would be returned—but they had not been sworn to do justice before man and before God—and, if need were, to seal up even the fountains of mercy in their hearts—flowing, and easily set a-flowing, by such a spectacle as that her presented—a man already seeming to belong unto the dead!

In about a quarter of an hour the Jury returned to the box—and the verdict, having been sealed with black wax, and handed up to the Judge, who read, "We unanimously find the prisoner Guilty." He then stood up to receive sentence of death. Not a dry eye was in the court during the Judge's solemn and affecting address to the criminal—except those in the Shadow on whom had been pronounced the doom.—"Your body will be hung in chains on the moor—on a gibbet erected on the spot where you murdered the victim of your unhallowed lust, and there will your bones bleach in the sun, and rattle in the wind, after the insects and the birds of the air have devoured your flesh; and in all future times, the spot on which, God-forsaking and God-forsaken, you perpetrated that double crime, at which all humanity shudders, will be looked on from afar by the traveller passing through that lonesome wild, with a sacred horror!"—Here the voice of the Judge faltered, and he covered his face with his hands; but the prisoner stood unmoved in figure, and in face untroubled—and when all was closed, was removed from the bar, the same ghostlike and unearthly phantom, seemingly unconscious of what had passed, or even of his own existence.

Surely now he will suffer his old father to visit him in his cell! "Once more only—only once more let me see him before I die!" were his words to the clergyman of the parish, whose Manse he had so often visited, when a young and happy boy!—That servant of Christ had not forsaken him, whom now all the world had forsaken. As free from sin himself as might be mortal and fallen man—mortal because fallen—he knew from Scripture and from nature, that is "the lowest deep there is still a lower deep" in wickedness, into which all of whom born may fall, unless held back by the arm of the Almighty Being, whom they must serve steadfastly in holiness and in truth. He knew, too, from the same source, that man cannot sin beyond the reach of God's mercy—if the worst of all imaginable sinners seek, in a Bible-breathed spirit at last, that mercy through the Atonement of the Redeemer. Daily—and nightly—he visited that cell; nor did he fear to touch the hand—now wasted to the bone—which, at the temptation of the Prince of the Air, who is mysteriously suffered to enter in at the gates of every human heart that is guarded not by the flaming sword of God's own Seraphim—lately drenched in the blood of the most innocent creature that ever looked on the day. Yet a sore trial it was to his Christianity to find the criminal so obdurate. He would make no confession! Yet said that it was fit—that it was far best—he should die!—that he deserved death! But ever when the deed without a name was alluded to, his tongue was tied—and once in the midst of an impassioned prayer, beseeching him to listen to conscience and confess—he that prayed shuddered to behold him frown, and to hear bursting out in terrible energy, "Cease—cease to torment me, or you will drive me to deny my God!"

No father came to visit him in his cell. On the day of trial he had been missing from Moorside, and was seen next morning—(where he had been all night never was known—though it was afterwards rumoured, that one like him had been seen sitting, as he gloaming darkened, on the very spot of the murder)—wandering about the hills, hither and thither, and round and round about, like a man stricken with blindness, and vainly seeking to find his home. When brought into the house, his scarves were gore, and he had lost the power of speech. All he could do was to mutter some disjointed syllables, which he did continually, without one moment's cessation, one unintelligible and most rueful moan! The figure of his daughter seemed to cast no image on his eyes—blind and dumb he sat where he had been placed, perpetually wringing his hands, with his shaggy eye-brows drawn high up his forehead, and the fixed orbs—though stone-blind, at least to all real things—beneath them flashing fire. He had borne up bravely—almost to the last—but had some tongue syllabled his son's doom to him in the wilderness, and at that instant had insanity smitten his soul?

Such utter prostration of intellect had been expected by none; for the old man, up to the very night before the Trial, had expressed the most confident trust of his son's acquittal. Nothing had ever served to shake his conviction of his innocence—though he had always forborne speaking about the circumstances of the murder—and had communicated to nobody any of the grounds on which he more than hoped in a case so hopeless; and though a trouble in his eyes often gave the lie to his lips, when he used to say to the silent neighbours, "We shall soon see him back at Moorside." Had his belief in his Ludovic's innocence would be established and set free, be so sacred, that the blow, when it did come, had smitten him like a hammer, and felled him to the ground, from which he had risen with a brain rent and riven? In whatever way the shock had been given, it had been terrible; for old Gilbert Adamson was now a confirmed lunatic, and keepers were in Moorside—not keepers from a mad-house—for his daughter could not afford such tendance—but two of her brother's friends who sat up with him alternately, night and day, while the arms of the old man, in his distraction, had to be bound with cords. That dreadful morning was at an end now; but the echoes of the hills responded to his yells and shrieks; and people were afraid to go near the house. It was proposed among the neighbours to take Alice and little Ann out of it; and an asylum for them was in the Manse; but Alice would not stir at all their entreaties; and as, in such a case, it would have been too shocking to tear her away by violence, she was sufferred to remain with him who knew her not, but who often—it was said—stared distractedly upon her, as if she had been some fiend sent in upon his insanity from the place of punishment. Weeks passed on, and still she was there—bolting herself at times from those terrified eyes; and from her watching corner, waiting from morn till night, and from night till morn—for she never lay down to sleep, and had never undressed herself since that fatal sentence—for some moment of exhausted horror, when she might steal out, and carry some slight gleam of comfort, however evanescent, to the glimmer or the gloom in which the brain of her Father swam through a dream of blood. But there were no lucid intervals; and ever as she moved towards him, like a pitying angel, did he furiously rage against her, as if she had been a fiend. At last, she who, though yet so young, had lived to see the murdered corpse of her dearest friend—murdered by her own only brother, whom, in secret, that murdered maiden had most tenderly loved—that murderous brother loaded with prison-

The moor groaned as in earthquake—and then all that congregation bowed their heads with a rustling noise, like a wood smitten by the wind. Had they heard aright the unimaginable confession? His head had long been grey—he had reached the term allotted to man's mortal life here below—threescore and ten. Morning and evening, never had the Bible been out of his hands at the hour set apart for family worship. And who so eloquent as he in expounding its most dreadful mysteries! The congregation's heart-of-man he had ever said—in scriptural phrase—was "desperately wicked." Desperately wicked indeed! And now again he tossed his arms wrathfully—so the wild motion looked—in the wrathful skies. "I ravished—I murdered her—ye know it, ye evil spirits in the depths of hell!" Consternation now fell on the minds of all—and the truth was clear as light—and all eyes knew at once that now indeed they looked on the murderer. The dreadful delusion under which all their understandings had been brought by the power of circumstances, was by that voice destroyed—the obduracy of him who had been about to die, was now seen to have been the most heroic virtue—the self-sacrifice of a son to save a father from ignominy and death!

"O monster, beyond the reach of redemption! and the very day after the murder, while the corpse was lying in blood on the Moor, he was with us in the House of God! Tear him in pieces—rend him limb from limb—tear him in a thousand pieces!"—"The Evil One had power given him to prevail against me, and I fell under the temptation. It was so written in the Book of Predestination, and the dead lies at the door of God!"—"Tear the blasphemer into pieces! Let the scaffold drink his blood!"—"So let it be, if it be so written, good people! Satan never left me since the murder till this day—he sat by my side in the kirk—when I was ploughing in the field—there—ever as I came back from the other end of the furrows—he stood on the head-rig—in the shape of a black shadow. But now I see him not—he has returned to his den in the pit. I cannot imagine what I have been doing, or what has been done to me, all the time between the day of trial and this of execution. Was I mad? No matter. But you shall not hang Ludovic—he, poor boy, is innocent;—here, look at him—here—I tell you again—is the Violator and Murderer!"

But shall the men in authority dare to stay the execution at a maniac's words? If the dare not—that multitude will, now all rising together like the waves of the sea. "Cut the cords asunder that bind our Ludovic's arms"—a thousand voices cried—and the murderer, unclasping a knife, that, all unknown to his keepers, he had worn in his breast when a maniac, sheared them asunder as the sickle shears the corn. But his son stirred not—and on being lifted up by his father, gave not so much as a groan. His heart had burst—and he was dead! No one touched the grey-headed murderer, who knelt down—not to pray—but to look into his son's eyes—and to examine his lips—and to feel his left breast—and to search out all the symptoms of a fainting-fit, or to assure himself,—and many a corpse had the plunderer handled on the field after bush of the noise of battle,—that this was death. He rose; and standing forward on the edge of the scaffold, said, with a voice that shook not, deep, strong, hollow, and hoarse—"Good people! I am likewise now the murderer of my daughter and my son! and of myself!" Next moment, the knife was in his heart—and he fell down on the corpse of his Ludovic. All round the sultry horizon the black clouds had for hours been gathering—and now came the thunder and the lightening—and the storm. Again the whole multitude prostrated themselves on the moor—and the Pastor, bending over the bodies, said,

"THIS IS EXPIATION!"

POWER OF THE PRESS.—Napoleon, since he became Emperor, has many times tried his hand at newspaper-writing; and, as experts at the business, we must confess that his occasional articles in the Moniteur evince an ability and force that few editors of the present day could equal. It is still more surprising, however, to hear that the Pope has taken to writing in the newspapers. A letter from Rome says that he seems to have caught the infection while reading the proofs of the Civilta Cattolica, for it is from the annotations he then made that he has composed several articles which have appeared in the official journal. The last Giornale di Roma contains some anonymous strictures by His Holiness on a canon of Vienna, who, it appears, held condemned doctrines, and lately died unrepentant. Through we do not feel that the profession of journalism derives any particular dignity from the fact that the Emperor and the Pope appear among newspaper writers, yet nothing could show more strikingly the power of the modern Press. The Pope has again and again denounced and cursed the newspaper as a child of the devil and an enemy of God. The Emperor is more afraid of the newspaper than of all the Kings and armies of the world. And both the Pope and the Emperor, having utterly failed to extirpate or control that great engine of thought and freedom, have humbly sought its assistance to spread their ideas and strengthen their authority. Verily, this is the nineteenth century!—N. Y Times.

Lieut. Gov. Howland's Speech from the Throne.

Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

It affords me sincere gratification to meet you for the first time, when you are about to enter on the consideration of numerous measures affecting public interest, of which, as the representatives of the people, you are the guardians, and in thus assembling you, I trust I have selected that season of the year in which you can most conveniently be spared from your various avocations.

I have derived the liveliest satisfaction from my visit to the Provincial Exhibition, at Hamilton, where the display of the products of the soil gave token of the increased productiveness and of the unwearied industry of the farming population, while the superior character of the live stock testified to the advanced state of our husbandry, and reflected the highest credit upon the enterprise of the people. I was gratified to observe the many proofs of the skill of our artizans and manufacturers, and the ingenuity applied to those improvements in machinery and implements by which manual labor is diminished and also rendered more productive. And it was an additional pleasure to note, besides these fruits of mechanical skill, such a representation of the more cultivated arts as gave promise of the noblest achievements in time. The spectacle altogether clearly indicated a diffusion of individual wealth and a general state of advancement and prosperity, as marked contrast with the condition of the country as I recollect it within the past quarter of a century.

I regret that circumstances which could not well be controlled, have thus far prevented the arbitrators appointed to adjust the differences between this Province and that of Quebec, in respect to certain debts and assets to be apportioned between them, from entering on the task assigned to them. I have, however good grounds for believing that the examination of accounts relative to these matters will shortly engage their attention, and I trust to be able to announce at an early day the final result of their deliberations.

It gives me much pleasure to inform you that the policy adopted by you during the last Session with respect to "Free Grants," has been, in great measure, a success, and it will now be for you to consider whether, with a view to the further encouragement of colonization, larger grants of land than are now authorized by Law may not wisely be made to settlers in townships where a considerable portion of the surface is not well adapted for actual cultivation.

The powers of the General and Local Governments being concurrent, with respect to Immigration, it has been deemed advisable to hold a conference, at Ottawa, to devise the best means of increasing the flow of a portion of the redundant population of Europe to the Dominion. Representatives from three of the Local Governments met for that purpose, at Ottawa, last week. No positive decision has yet been arrived at. No positive decision has yet been arrived at. It would be premature to anticipate what plan of action will be finally adopted; but I entertain the hope of being able shortly to report to you that a well organized scheme has been agreed upon for the furtherance of this all-important object, in which the people of Ottawa feel so deep an interest.

A just cause of complaint as set forth in the frequent presentation of Grand Juries, with respect to the detention of convict and other lunatics in the gaols of the Province, has, I am glad to say, been remedied by their removal to the Rockwood Asylum, at Kingston, under an arrangement with the Government of the Dominion, where they will no doubt receive that proper and judicious treatment best suited to their unfortunate condition.

Amendments in the law of election, as well as that which relates to the independence of the members of your House, the dispensing with certain sittings and terms of the County Courts and Quarter Sessions of the Peace, and the abolition of Recorders' Courts in cities—changes which will greatly lessen the attendance of Jurors, and diminish very considerably the costs and the out-lay in the administration of justice, without impairing its efficiency—and a modification of the present law relating to mines and minerals, with a view to further encourage the development of this important source of our Provincial wealth, will be among the measures that will be submitted for your consideration.

I commend to you as objects imperatively calling for your sympathy the deaf, dumb, and blind. The necessity is felt for a public institution worthy of the Province, in which these classes of our fellow subjects may receive such a course of instruction as will tend to ameliorate their sad condition, and render them at the same time more useful members of society. It will be for you to decide what measure of relief should be extended to them.

I cannot avoid bringing under your special notice the state of our prisons, as ones the receptacles of the hardened criminal and the novice in crime, generally huddled together without any regard to their classification. The latter surely ought not to be exposed to influences calculated to stifle the disposition to reform when again at liberty. The objection to the present system is still more obvious in the case of untried prisoners, who may not be found guilty of the crime for which they are committed. Still more is it clear in the case of females of a like class. I recommend to you strongly the erection of institutions in central localities, to which those sentenced for periods less than two years may be transferred from the surrounding gaols, to undergo their term of punishment under a system of rigid discipline analogous to that of penitentiaries, and where their labor can be utilized towards defraying the cost of their own maintenance.

I shall direct the public accounts, with the estimates for the coming year to be laid before you, and I have no doubt that the appropriations voted during the last session will be found to have been expended then far with care and a due regard to economy.

I rely on your readiness to grant supplies necessary for the public service.

In legislating on all these and other measures which have for their object the promotion of the moral, intellectual and material well-being of the public of this prosperous Province, you will find me ever willing and anxious to co-operate with you. Enjoying a constitution framed, I may say, in accordance with our expressed wishes, which secures to us the great boon of self government, to which we are daily becoming more attached; with no burdensome taxation to oppress us, and shielded by the powerful nation, whose history and traditions are cherished by us, and to whom we can at all times appeal for protection in the hour of danger, Ontario may well exult in the enjoyment of great and singular advantages.

Let us trust under God's providence, that our legislative labors may conduce to the continuance of the peace, happiness and contentment of our people.

Mr. Gladstone on the Late Metropolitan.

In an electioneering address recently delivered at Ormskirk, Lancashire (Eng.), Mr. Gladstone, while referring to the question of disestablishing the Irish Church, bore testimony as follows to the ability and personal worth of the late Rev. Dr. Fulford:

"Canada is under a monarchial government, Canada has no semblance of an established church; Canada has passed acts of Parliament, the very prescribes of which recite that it is desirable to put an end to all semblance of connection between Church and State in that country, and has acted upon those principles. Yet who is there that for one moment will pretend to say that religious liberty does not prevail in Canada? (Hear, hear.) That was a country, gentlemen, somewhat resembling—though far less aggravated—the case of Ireland; resembling it in this important point, that the members of the Church of England formed every small proportion of the whole of the members of the community. And here, gentlemen, I must digress for one moment to revert to what I stated just now about the cases of many eminent and excellent men, clergy, and even bishops, in connection with the Anglican Church, who are favorable to the policy which we, the Liberal party, recommend. Among them I cannot fail to notice one little known probably to you, for his sphere of action was very distinct,—Bishop Fulford, of Montreal, the Metropolitan of the Anglican Church in Canada, a gentleman whom I had the honor of knowing, whom no man could know without respecting and reverencing, or without perceiving that he was a man of the most solid and powerful understanding, and of high governing qualities. That gentleman, who died, I am sorry to say, but two months ago, is the bishop under whom the Canadian Church has undergone this process of disestablishment. I had the honor of seeing him in London during the past year, and hearing his opinions from his own lips; and but a fortnight before his death I received from him a letter, setting forth to me the details of that which had been done in canada, and the ground upon which he approved of it. He had seen it. He had seen his church flourish under the operation, and had it been in his power to reverse the course of legislative proceedings, and to claim for himself all the privileges and titles of establishment, nothing would induce him to make a single retrograde step. (Applause.)

An Appeal from Switzerland.—A part of Switzerland has just been the scene of a calamity which is without parallel in its entire history. Torrents of rain descending almost without intermission for eight days from the northern and southern slopes of the Alps, while at the same time a powerful south wind was furiously raging amid the recess of ice and snow in the inaccessible Alpine strongholds, have swelled rivulets into streams and streams into torrents, and have carried appalling destruction into a number of cantons. Hundreds of people have perished; thousands of families have been impoverished; more than sixty millions of francs have been lost. The most strenuous efforts have at once been made to alleviate so immense an amount of suffering. The President of the Confederation himself has hastened to the scene of suffering to see what aid can be rendered, corps of sappers and miners have been ordered there to render all possible aid. The Federal Government has appropriated one million francs, and relief associations have sprung up in every section of the country. In our country, the Consul-General of Switzerland in Washington has published a stirring appeal to the Swiss and the friends of Switzerland in the United States, to aid as promptly and as much as possible in the relief of the poor sufferers.—Am Paper.

Mr. Bright's Oratorical Beginings.—One constantly hears talk of Mr. Bright's oratorical genius, but few expressions seems to us to be so little fitting or adequate, unless we adopt the illegitimate recount of genius as no more than a supreme capacity for taking pains. A visitor to the parish church of Rochdale not long ago, asked the verger or sexton whether John Bright ever came there. "Nay," the sexton said, "he never comes now, but I can recollect the time when he wor but a lad, and he used to come then and mak' speeches again' church rates. I've seen him speeking from one o' the grave stones; he couldn't speek much, and he used to read his speeches from paper." Whether this be a calumny, tired of the sexton's professional zeal, we cannot tell, but there is nothing in Mr. Bright's most masterly orations which would make us unprepared for this humble initiation They all betoken an orator who has been made and was not born. This is no disparagement to the result.—Pall-Mall Gazett.

The Pope's Nuncio at Paris has been instructed to urge the dethroned Spanish Queen to take a refuge in Rome where the Palace of the Quirinal has been prepared for her reception. Of course the Paris papers anxious to know whether she will insist upon Senor Marfoni, from whom she is inseparable, accompanying her to the Quirnal. As for her husband, he is only laughed at in this connection, and we are reminded of the severe etiquette of the Spanish Court, by which it is laid down that when a King of Spain wishes to enter the Queen's chamber at night, he must glide along the corridor in slippers, a black mantle thrown over his shoulders, a feathern bottle under his arm, a dark lantern in one hand and a naked sword in the other. In the meantime it is stated that one of the first acts of the new Government will be to pass a decree declaring Her Majesty's children bastard and incapable of reigning.

A very pressing and well-written letter, now going the rounds of the French press, has been addressed by the celebrated publicist, M. de Girardin, to General Prim, taking the ground that all the available pretenders to the throne of Spain are fatally objectionable, and that the only safe way of securing the liberty the people have obtained is to adopt a republican and federal form of government.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1868.

PARLIAMENT, ONTARIO.

The Parliament met on the 5th instant. The first day was spent in receiving the Governor's address, and in attending to other minor matters.

Mr. McKellar and Mr. Blake made clever speeches against the uncertain, hesitating, doubting, fearing policy of the government, shewing the complete unfitness of the present Ministry for the position they occupy, especially in the management of the Crown Lands. Even the supporters of the Government speak condemnatory of the vacillating orders that were issued from that department. Mr. McKellar gives the sentiments of the whole people, when he declared that the great duty of the government was the settlement of the wild lands, for whatever purpose they prove most suitable. There are thousands of acres of wild land fit for cultivation, and yet unsettled. It may not be of the very best quality, but there will be found enough good land on two or three lots to make a comfortable home, and in the end a tolerably good farm. All that is required is a liberal manner of dealing with settlers and a reasonable inducement to immigrants to come to our country, and ere long we will find entire counties where now the wolf and the bear are the chief occupants. It must be somewhat pleasing to the Opposition to know that their principles have been forced upon John Sandfield and Mr. Richards. The obnoxious order in reference to arrears of purchases of Crown Lands we are told was never intended to be enforced to the detriment of the settlers.—What could more satisfactorily prove the unfitness of John Sandfield's governments for managing our public affairs? What would we think of a general issuing orders that were never to be enforced? or of even a common school teacher's regulations that were not required to be obeyed? Why issue such orders or form such regulations? The fact is the commissioners found that their orders were unpopular, and hence the modification and nullification. The speech from the throne intimates an intention to amend the free grant system and mineral laws; and thus we are subject to a law passed in the spring of '68 and repealed in the fall '68, simply because ministers have no policy and are at the mercy of mere accident.

The member for the West Riding of Peterboro, however, has made a speech, of course advocating the rickety combination policy. He is not in favor of abatement of debts due to the government by settlers on Crown Lands. He is not in favor of the poor settler who has had to toil and moil to make a living for his family, and has scarcely succeeded in doing so, being allowed any abatement until after careful enquiry by somebody. On whose recommendation then would this abatement be made? On that of some one who would make his intercessions—with the government for an abatement, the price of a vote at the next election, and thus political intercedors commence a new system of bribery and corruption at the polls. We warn our legislators against adopting a policy that opens up such a field for the purchase of votes. Better ten thousand times to forgive the debt due to the government than to give away the wild lands at the beck of political demagogues who would purchase office and emolument, perhaps at the price of blood. When an officer was sent here last summer to enquire after arrears, we were credibly informed that he could not move hand or foot, nor could any one obtain a hearing except in the presence of that Member, who now so loudly advocates the insane policy of appointing commissioners to learn who is and who is not able to pay his arrears. Is such a commissioner to be sent here and to receive his inflatus from that member? if so, all we can say is, God help all who voted against him or him for them there will be no abatement they may rely on it. Let the Government deal equally and justly with all and all will respect them, but if unjustly, retribution will follow.

By all means forgive the debt of the poor man, thrifty or unthrifty, and if his neighbors has bought and paid for his lot, give a lot as a free grant; this will encourage him to go on; it will teach him to respect and maintain the institutions that thus cares for and protects him, and it will tend to bind the people to Canada instead of drive them away as heretofore. Why let not our country be carved by a system of favoritism to one that is denied to another, or that cannot be obtained except at the price of bartering conscientiously held political opinions for a few dollars or for a few acres of land.

Girls in the Grammar Schools.

This subject is also brought before the Legislature by Mr. Boyd's introducing a Bill providing for girls being admitted as pupils, and that they be considered in the distribution of Grammar School Funds.

We ask the special attention of our Local Members to this Bill. There can be no doubts of the justice of girls' claims to the highest education the best of our Schools can impart. Our Common Schools are not in a position to impart a hight standard of education, nor are our Boards of Common School Trustees in a position to remunerate a high order of Teachers, and hence the country has been and is looking to our Grammar Schools to complete what is begun in the Common Schools. If girls are not to enjoy the right of receiving the higher order of mental training under the immediate eye of the Principal, but must rest satisfied with what can be obtained in the Common School, or go to Toronto or elsewhere to get better, then tens of thousands of our girls and future women will have to stay at home, as their parents or guardians are, in many cases, unable to bear the expenses of sending them to the Cities. Very few of the Towns are in a position to support a good Ladies' School, then what are they to do?—to go without education? Surely not. To go to Toronto for it? They cannot for want of means. The country, therefore, imperatively demands that a portion of the Grammar School Funds be appropriated for the education of girls, and then Boards of Trustees will be able to secure the services of efficient Teachers.

If it be argued that Greek and Latin are not suitable studies for girls, then why does the Board of Public Instruction make them a sine qua non in the Grammar School curriculum? Is it not more reasonable to change the programme of Grammar School subjects than to retain them as at present, and thereby seclude one half of the pupils of the province from attendance. We fully agree with the late inspector of Grammar Schools, when he condemns the practice of forcing all the boys in the Grammar Schools to study Latin, while by nine tenths of them it will never be mastered, nor will it repay for the waste of time spent in an almost, to them, useless study. We therefore put it to our Legislators if it would not be better to conform the subjects taught in the Grammar Schools to the wants of the people rather than compel all who enter them to study Latin, which, it it is admitted, to many will be perfectly useless. Can Grammar School masters, parents and Boards of Trustees not be allowed to be the judges of what the pupils should study, making the entrance examination sufficiently high to be beyond the general work of the Common School?

The influences that are at work.

During the recess since last session of the Parliament of Ontario, Denominationalism has been busy, with a view to obtaining grants for their different Colleges—petitions have been quietly (none saw them, but supposed friends) circulated, asking the Government to continue the grants of the past, if not to increase them. This last effort of the sects, we hope, will be unsuccessful, as John Sandfield McDonald is not a man likely to cave in on this question.—The Upper Canada College question, too, is to be discussed, and in consequence Toronto fears matters will not bear close inspection; with the exception of Toronto the press of Ontario abounds with proofs of the extravagance and waste of funds on Upper Canada College; it is well understood to be no better than one of our Grammar Schools and yet it costs, annually, over $32,000; a sum equal to the maintenance of many such institutions, and yet the Toronto press thinks this state of things should be allowed to go on—the argument being: "it is in Toronto." We are satisfied that the University funds remain intact for the purpose of superior education; but the country will not long bear with giving a Toronto Grammar School a sum almost equal to all received by the remaining Grammar Schools of the Province. All they are entitled to is a sum proportionable to the work done in the College. Let them get that and no more. The balance added to the present pittance granted for Grammar School purposes would enable the different Boards to increase the efficiency of Grammar School work by engaging superior teachers.

Grant and Colfax Elected.

The Presidential campaign is over. Grant and Colfax, respectively, will occupy President and Vice-Presidential chair for the next four years. The Democrats do not appear to have the confidence of the American people as they have carried very few states. Seymour has but 89 votes or thereabouts, while Grant has 209. The Democratic plank of repudiation must have damaged their cause materially, while it would have the reverse effect on that of the Republicans, and afford a strong guarantee of the reasonable stability of American institution when an overwhelming majority declare that they have no sympathy with any party that would entertain the idea of the United States refusing to pay the last cent. The curse of slavery, too, is abolished, and this defeat of the Democratic party is a loud and earnest declaration of freemen, that slavery is altogether incompatible with Republicanism. The election of Grant will also tend to establish confidence in the integrity of the people as a whole and to crush the faintest hope that may have been entertained of the South being able again to establish that inhuman traffic. Our interests are so interwoven with the welfare of our neighbors, that we cannot but rejoice at the success of the party of progress.

Literary Club.—This evening the following subject will be discussed:—"Should Girls be admitted to the Grammar Schools?" Leaders—Messrs. Dixon and J. Burnham. On Thursday evening next, there will be a public debate, also a Reading and an Essay. The following is the subject for debate—"Has the Government of Napoleon III. been beneficial to the French Nation?"

Georgia Minstrels.—This troupe of genuine negro minstrels will be in the Music Hall on Friday evening. See Advertisement.

CENTRE WELLINGTON.

The names of the Hon. Geo. Brown, Mr. Foley and T. White, of the Hamilton Spectator, are given in connection with intended candidature for the representation of this Riding in the Commons. Dr. Parker, who represented Centre Wellington during the last session, was a Reformer and the constituency is strongly Reform. It is to be hoped therefore that a Reformer will be found ready to take Dr. Parker's place. The Hon. Mr. Brown would be the right man in the right place, and Reformers throughout the Dominion would feel pleased at his return to public life and more especially so at the present crisis. There never was a time when his talent and knowledge of public affairs could have been of so much service to the country as they would be now, and hence we trust that he will allow himself to be put in nomination, as there is no doubts of his return if once in the field. We cannot imagine that Mr. Foley will be brought out just now, and therefore his name may be passed over in silence. Mr. White, however, will bring himself out, if there is a hole to squeeze himself through. For many years his aspirations have been for this great object and his plans have been laid to carry it out, but hitherto he has failed. In Wentworth he was defeated by only a small majority, and this has emboldened him to thrust himself forward on Wellington. It is well known that he is ready to sacrifice party and principle a little to attain his object, In the Perry-Haultain contest in this County Mr. White felt wounded because his name was dropped for that of Mr. Perry, and in consequence he would not allow his organ, the Review, to advocate Mr. Perry, nor even permit Mr. Perry's addresses or handbills to be printed in the Review office, so aggrieved was he. In consequence Mr. Perry had to apply to the office of an opponent to get his printing done. This manifested a great willingness to give way to the choice of the party and support him for party sake. He has allowed himself for many years to be the ready advocate of all the jobbery and trickery of the Tory party, because that seemed to be the means to gain his ambitious projects, but we may not be surprized to find him coming before the people of South Wellington as a Liberal. They must be careful lest the wolf appear under the wool. We can fully endorse the following from the Dumfries Reformer:—"Centre Wellington deserves a better fate than to be represented by such a man."

LORD MONCK.

This distinguished nobleman takes his departure from Canada on Saturday, the 14th instant, for England. He carries with him the good wishes of all the people. Few Governors have had the control of colonial affairs at a more critical and trying time. The confederation of the provinces, and the consequent heat of debate and angry feelings; Nova Scotia troubles, and the shuffling of old card players, all failed to divert him from the path of duty. He committed himself to no party, favored none, and leaves respected by both. A few who are generally tender of gubernatorial viands than wise, good government, have laid the charge of penuriousness to him, because he did not give as many dinners as some of his predecessors.—If our statesmen but learn from his example and spend according to their means, there will be fewer bankrupt politicians. The course of politics is the extravagances that is believed to follow in its train. We fear, however, that Lord Monck's lesson of economy will be in vain. We, should, nevertheless, remember the man with gratitude who had the courage to show the example to the most extravagant government that ever cursed any country. His private virtues, too, are unassailed. We may also expect that in future we will not be neglected by him if Canadian affairs are ever before the Imperial Government. His successor is not expected for about two weeks. He is also highly recommended for his wisdom and prudence. Let us hope that he will be as acceptable to Canadians and retain their good will, as his predecessor has done, to the termination of his career in the Dominion of Canada.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. Howe has written a long letter to the Chronicle in which he declares the hopelessness of the repeal movement, as Britain cannot be expected to retrace the steps already taken for unity of the Provinces. He is now in communication with the Canadian Government on the matter of "reparation," and with a view to make the Union less burdensome to the Nova Scotians. All lovers of their country will hope that he may be successful in obtaining good government cheaper that it has wont to be, and assuredly this will prove worthy of his talent and energy. The tendency should be Union, and will be if the affairs of the Dominion were in the hands of proper men, but so long as those who have bought their present position can retain it by bribery, they will use the means, and just so long may we Canadians and Nova Scotians expect the "system to be burdensome."

It is satisfactory, however, for us to know that Mr. Howe accepts the position and is now set about making the best of it. If the Reformers of the Maritime Provinces unite with those of Ontario, their hopes may be realized ere long. To this end therefore should the leaders of both sections labour as otherwise, Cartier will remain virtual ruler so long as by permitting it, J. A. can retain his present position.

WHERE NEXT?

The Canadian Freeman, whose fly-sheets in behalf of the Tory Government of J. A. McDonald & Co., during the last election might have been numbered by the hundreds of thousands, is now advocating the liberal policy of Gladstone and giving Tory Disayths go-by. Hear him: "The constituencies of England will know how, we trust, to purge the disgrace of having so long tolerated in the chair of all but supreme power over the United Kingdom, a renegade Jew, belonging by religious faith neither to circumcision nor to baptism, and by political faith, neither to party nor to principle." Again: "Will any Catholic constituency or any Catholic voter possessing a sentiment of manhood or nationality or of religion, give his suffrage to a retainer of Mr. Disraeli," &c. May we not reasonably ask, on what side next? Poor Dizzy is accused of a vehement love of office and office at any price, as his motto. But how much better are they whose advocacy of party depends on patronage, and whose principles can only be measured by dollars and cents? Liberalism is right in Gladstone, but Toryism is right in John A. McDonald. Of course this is consistent.

An Accident.—On Saturday evening while a Mr. John Armstrong, of Cavan, and his wife on their way home were approaching the railway crossing, he foolishly attempted to cross while some cars were being shunted; one of the cars caught the hind wheels of his waggon and removed it to one side, threw him out of the waggon and caused the horses to run away. They did not run far till the waggon got upset, thereby also upsetting Mrs. A. The horses then concluded it was best to wait further orders. Col. and Mrs. Haultain, who were passing at the time, were unceasing in their attendance on Mrs. Armstrong. It was found, however, that she only had received any hurt, and that only a slight sprain of the wrist. Mr. Armstrong received no injury although thrown under the horses. When picked up he vented his anger in words versus railways, &c. The railway men, we understand, were no way to blame in the matter, as Mr. A. foolishly attempted to cross at the wrong time and under the influence of the idea that he could cope with the train at its best. He was astray however.

The Ottawa Citizen, so long accustomed to court flattery, thinks we were too severe on Commissioner Richards and his party during their late visit to Peterboro. We assure our contemporary that what he writes while enjoying their good patronage does not influence us in the least. Messrs. Richards and Carling in their late search for policies prove their unfitness even in the minds of their sycophants for the position they occupy. Notwithstanding this, Government hangers-on endeavoured to get up a display, but, like its originators, it proved a grand failure; and because we let our readers know it, the Citizen, to prove its great attachment to government patronage administers a short lecture. We understand the whole matter to be reducible to this: "Servants obey your masters."

Personal.—The Spectator of 6th instant says:—"We have had occasion more than once to chronicle the kind reception which the Nelson and Watertown congregation have given to the Rev. Mr. Edmison since his settlement among them. On Wednesday week, the Nelson people presented Mrs. Edmison with an excellent cow.—Such instances of good feeling and good doing, speak volumes for the manner in which the rev. gentleman has discharged his onerous duties. At the late communion service over twenty young persons partook of the Lord's supper for the first time; which is indeed a large addition for a country congregation." Rev. Mr. Edmison is a brother to Geo. Edmiston, Esq., Lawyer, of this town.

Temperance.—On Friday evening 30th ult., the members of the Smith Temperance Union held a Soiree in the school house on the 4th line. There were about 200 persons (chiefly young) present. The Rev. Mr. Simpson, Episcopal Methodist, Rev. Mr. Blain and others addressed the meeting on the subject of temperance and the wisdom of maintaining it. After the speaking Mr. Simpson sold the fragments (more than 12 baskets full) to the highest bidder, by which several dollars were realized for the benefit of the "Union." The audience was the most orderly we ever witnessed. We doubt whether 200 young people in any other neighbourhood could be found to behave as they did—a sign of the good effects of temperance.

The Alleghanians.—This distinguished troupe gave one of their highly popular musical entertainments here on Friday evening last. Hill's Music Hall was crowded on the occasion, not more than one-half being able to procure seats. The Bell Ringing was really oncanting; "Auld Lang Syne," "Scotts wha ha'e," and our National Anthem were well rendered on the Bells, which seem to be constructed on the same principle as the keys of a piano, each bell serving the same object as a key and producing a corresponding tone. It is needless to say that the audience was well pleased with the performance.

Burglary.—During Saturday or Sunday nights some person forcibly entered Mr. Lech's fur store and carried off about $300 worth of valuable furs. The party had forced the back door, systematically—they prepared two lamps and proceeded. They took a few coppers that were left in the till, several very valuable sets of furs and some work that Mr. Lech had just repaired for parties in town, and left. The perpetrator is not known, but a pair of mitts found on the counter and which must have belonged to the thief may lead to detection. This is a warning to others to keep their premises well secured.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Neithercut, sen., of Otonabee, who received injuries about two weeks ago by being thrown out of the waggon, died on Saturday last. Mrs. N. was on her way home from Peterboro with her son when the horses, very spirited animals, shyed, giving a sudden plunge, by which she was thrown out, receiving a severe shock from which she never recovered. Her advanced age, 68 years, almost forbade the hope of her recovery from the first.

Shooting Affray.—We understand that two men, Jas Drain and a man named Hunter who were hunting together, last week, on the borders of Stony Lake, in the North of Dummer, got into some altercation, when Hunter shot at Drain—the contents of the discharge consisting of shot, lodged in Drain's face, but fortunately did not kill him. They were under the influence of whiskey at the time. At last accounts Drain was alive.

Prof. O. S. Fowler, the celegrated Phrenologist, and the greatest of the age is now on a visit here. He lectured in the Music Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and gave a reading of the bumps of three or four of our citizens. From the way in which his descriptions were received they appear to have been acknowledged correct. His lectures were worth hearing—instructive and humorous.

Perekology.—Last half-day and hour of Prof. O. S. Fowler's Phrenological examinations and advice as to health, best business, managing children, marriage, self improvement, &c., at Caisse's Hotel, will be to-day; so that all those who would know all about themselves and children from this greatest living Phrenologist absolutely must call before three to-day.

Military—Opening the Drill Shed.—On Friday evening there will be a grand opening of the Drill Shed. A Tea, Speeches and a promenade Concert, all under the patronage of the Ladies of Peterboro. The Band will be present. Don't forget Friday evening therefore.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening.—Present—the Mayor and Messrs. Burnham, English, Dixon, Kennedy, Doherty, Dickson, Stevenson and Helm.

The minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Communications were read from T. D. Harrington, Deputy Receiver General, to the Town Treasurer, informing him that the Municipality owed the Municipal Loan Fund the sum of $26,995.66 and further that these arrears must be paid at once to avoid proceedings.

From His Worship, the Mayor, informing them that owing to the refusal of Constable McFaddin, to attend to his duty as a Constable, and his use of abusive and insulting language to persons asking him to act, he had suspended him, awaiting the action of the Council.

From D. Carlyle, Inspector of Streets, asking the Council what he was to understand by a reasonable time in the By-law for merchants removing goods off the sidewalk.

From Richard Hall, Secretary of the Fire Company, asking for the usual allowance of $2.00 a head for the Fire Company.

Petitions from Mrs. Knox and William Clark, asking the Council to remit their taxes for the present year.

Accounts from T. G. Hazlitt, $22.28; S. Dickson, $170.58; S. Dickson, $60.50, for lumber and building bridge.

The communication of Deputy Receiver General and the petitions of Mrs. Knox, W. Clark, and accounts were referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Doherty, the petition of R. Hall was granted,

Messrs. Burnham, Helm and S. Dickson were appointed to investigate the charge against Constable McFaddin.

Mr. Stevenson introduced a memorial to the Legislature and the Lieut.-Governor, asking for power to the Commissioners of the Town Trust to sell the land south of the town, and for power to allow a majority of the Commissioners to decide all matters coming before them. The memorial was read and carried by the Mayor and sealed, to be forwarded to the Legislature.

On motion of Mr. Burnham, seconded by S. Dickson,—The Mayor was instructed to prepare and sign a petition on behalf of the Council to the Legislature and Government of Ontario, asking them to construct a Lock at Young's dam, for the purpose of opening the navigation from Lakefield to Stoney Lake.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That in order to remove doubt or misconception upon the subject, this Council hereby declares that in future it does not bind itself to pay a salary or other remuneration to the Mayor.

Yeas—Messrs. Burnham, Stevenson, Kennedy and S. Dickson.

Nays—Messrs. J. Dixon, Doharty, Helm and English.

The motion was negative because of an equality of yeas and nays.

A motion was introduced by Mr. English to have the side walk on King street constructed. This motion was ruled out of order by the Mayor.

On motion of Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Doherty, the arrears of taxes of Widow Connors, amounting to $3.39, were agreed to be struck off.

The Mayor stated that Lewis McGregor had obtained judgment against him for $14.06, for billets of Volunteers in 1866.—The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Dickson gave notice of a motion relative to the repealing of By-law 187.

The Council adjourned for one week.

The 5th of November was kept here by several of the Lodges, by a public meeting. Revds. Messrs. Johnson and McDonnell delivered short, pithy addresses, after which a collection was taken up for charitable purposes. During the proceedings D.G. Hatton, C. M., occupied the chair. He made some remarks on the object of the meeting, and the use to which the funds would be applied—to help the needy. He also read the oath an Orangeman takes at his initiation into the order, showing that there was nothing in it that required to be concealed from the public. The meeting was well attended and the addresses received with great attention.

Law Examinations.—Of the twenty who have passed examination at Osgoode Hall, on Tuesday and Thursday last, and were admitted as students. We find the name Master J. B. Dixon, of this town.

Correction.—In our report of the Court of Assizes, in re Dickson vs. Toole, the verdict for plaintiff, Dickson, was $70 instead of $10, as the compositor made it.

Four gates of the Allanburgh Locks, Welland Canal, were carried off on the 4th instant, by the Probeller Lawrence. The boat was jammed in the Locks and badly damaged.

The election of a Metropolitan for Canada is now going on in Montreal. The Bishops and Synod met on Tuesday.

Libel.—The case of Saul Davis vs. The Hamilton Timess, resulted in favour of the Times.

Goldwin Smith has commenced his duties as Professor of Cornell College in the State of New York.

The Halifax Citizen, of the 9th ult., states that at that date $1,850 had been collected in that city for the Red-River sufferers. This amount has probably since been increased to $2,000. The Local Governments gave another $1,000.

An Irishman, noticing a woman passing along the streets, espied two strips depending from under her cloack. The Hiberman not knowing that these were styled sashes, and hanging in the right place, exclaimed, 'Fath ma'am, your galluses are untied.'

Hallowe'en was duly celebrated in Montreal. The Grand Annual Festival of the Canadian Society took place in the St. Patrick's Hall, which, notwithstanding the rain came down in Stoorrents, was perfectly jammed. A captain programme was offered, songs by Mr. Kennedy, the unrivalled Scottish Vocalist, by Miss Louisa Castle and by Mr. Hurst, Hallowe'en sports in the magic lantern, and the reading of prize poems. Forty-three had been received and out of them two received prizes—Miss Bothwell the first and Miss Jennie Hamilton the second. In the second the following verses were received with deep feeling by the audience.

"Ah! wad that he were here the night,
Whase tongue was like a faerie lute!
But vain the wish! Mellee, thy micht
Lies low in earth, thy voice is mute.
He's gone, the noblest o' us a'.
Aboon a' care o' warldly fame;
An' wha' soe proud as he to ca'
Our Canada his Hame?

The gentle maple weeps an' waves
Aboon our patriot statesman's head,
But if we prize the light he gave,
We'll bury frends of race and creed:
For this he wrocht, for this he died,
An' for the luve we bore his name,
Let's live as brithers, side by side,
In Canada our Hame."

Almost from the first day he set foot in Montreal, our Montreal Statesman was a staunch friend of the Caledonian Society, and advanced its interests wherever occasion offered. Another pleasing part of the evening's entertainment was the presentation of a massive gold medal to Mr. Kennedy, and a gold locket and chain to Miss Kennedy.—On Sunday the 78th Highlanders invited Mr. Kennedy to dinner, and presented him with a costly silver cup, and his daughter with a magnificent gold brooch. These presentations were made in admiration of his brilliant talents, and leal hearted patriotism.

Almost every day we meet with some individual who is pointed out—"there goes a man worth his millions." Nearly every business man hears the same statement, but how few stop to dwell upon the immensity of millions! Few people have any more idea what millions, billions and trillions are than they have of the style of brogans worn by the cobblers who inhabit the moon.—A million of dollar bills possesses a vastness that is rather startling to a man who has never faced such a pile. To count this sum at the rate of one thousand five hundred dollars an hour, and eight hours a day, it would require a man to work nearly three months. If the said dollar bills were laid side by side, they would reach three hundred and seventy-two miles, while their transportation would require more than an ox team. The debt of the United States represented by dollar notes laid out in a straight line would extend thirty-seven time around the earth, and is increasing in length at the rate of three thousand seven hundred and twenty miles of dollars per month.

Horses Saved.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers. 37

Bryan's Waters.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25 cts per box.

Our Fortifications.—It is now nearly fifty years since our fortifications have been looked after in any way, we think it is now high time and that it behoves our government to put them in a proper state of defence, and have our Lakes and Rivers well protected, "one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; but while we are protecting ourselves against a foreign enemy we should not forget to fortify ourselves against bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, pains in the back and side, cholic, cholera morbus, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the most effectual medicine Sold by all Dealers in Medicine, at 25 cents per bottle.

The price of provisions in 1868 is almost double of that of 1861, yet the remuneration of the laboring classes remains as it was in 1861. It is therefore difficult for a laborer to maintain himself and family, when from the same wages he must pay double for clothing—for groceries—for provisions—for everything except the great Shoshonees Remedy, for diseases of the throat, liver, lungs, &c., which the humanity of the Proprietors still keeps at $1 per bottle. For sale by all druggists.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and will prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It changes the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells the coagulable lymph of that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, opening the mucous membranes to assume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

Fenian Thieves.—O'Neil and others charged with stealing a million and a half of dollars.

The Irish People, a New York journal, and the organ of the John Savage section of the Fenian, contains the following characteristic story about the O'Neil wing of the Brotherhood:—

A scandalous row has sprung up among members of the maimed and moribund remnant of the Fenian secession, which still creeps along in a sort of wriggling vitality in Washington city. A person named James Ryan, who, it appears, once held a commission as District Centre under the defunct "President" of the Senatorials, Wm. R. Roberts, has seceded from and denounced the "Man of the Lost Documents" and his congenial cat's paw, Mr. John O'Neil, and Washingtonian adherents of these notorious individuals have rejoiced by denouncing and abusing the said Ryan. This is as it should be. We only hope that all the treacherous intriguers and fraudulent mountebanks who broke the once powerful Fenian Brotherhood and reduced it to its present state of comparative weakness, may soon get at loggerheads everywhere. Their honest but simple-minded dupes may then come to learn what Roberts, Meehan, O'Neil and Co., did with that million and a half of dollars which they swindled from their victims from the Winter of 1866 to the Spring of 1867.—It is certain that it was not expended in producing any result whatever favourable to the cause of Irish liberty. Did it cost all that sum to maintain Meehan's hungry gang of blatant mountebanks—his civil and military mock-auction men—who have been flaming the States for the last two years exterminating good men, and disgusting true Irish patriots? How much of it was spent in sowing discord among our Brethren in Ireland, and hunting Halpin, McCaffery, the Burkes, etc. into the toils of the British police? Was it all disbursed in destroying the Fenian organization? If so, we would ask, could not the British Government have afforded to pay for that job out of its own treasury, without extracting its price from the deluded Fenians of the United States upon false pretences? The true Fenian movement is in a dead-lock for the time being, and England has recovered from her most pressing terrors. The Meehanite organization itself is scattered, disheartened and prostrate. It is reduced to the last stage of exhaustion and impotence. "President" Roberts cunningly stole away long ago from his deceived followers, unwilling to abide the indignation impending over him from the approaching discovery and fraud in which he bore so prominent a part. The paid organizers are dumb at last. "President" and "General" John O'Neil is hard at work, striving to cover up his broken promises by means of lying, but stupidly ridiculous manifestoes. Meehan's work is accomplished, and he is at his wits' end for some new "ingenious device" whereby he may continue to blind the eyes of the few honest men that still have trust in him, to his manifold villanies. The Canadians may rest at ease. There is peace in Ireland and all is quiet on the St. Lawrence. What more remains for Meehan and his "Senate" and his "President" to do? Is it not time for them to rest upon their laurels? Their victory is won.

A Danseuse Fatally Burned—Shocking Scene.

From the Louisville Journal, Oct. 21.

Last evening when the pas de boquet was being performed at the Metropolitan Hall, on Jefferson street, near First Kate Hayden, one of the ballad girls advanced too near the foot lights. Her very inflammable dress of light gauze immediately took fire, and she was almost immediately wrapped in flames. Four other girls were upon the stage at the same time, but were too much panic stricken to afford assistance; indeed, from the light material of their attire it would have been dangerous for them to have done so. A gentleman in the audience had the presence of mind to throw his overcoat about the unfortunate woman, which in some measure suppressed the fire. Miss Hayden was removed to the green room, and the medical assistance of Dr. W. T. Owen was called into requisition, who promptly did all that his art could do to alleviate her sufferings. He discovered that she had been dreadfully burned on all parts of her person, and was but a scorched and withered relic of her former youth and grace. She was subsequently conveyed to her boarding-house, her piercing groans and heart-rending cries, piercing the cool night air. It was thought scarcely possible that she would survive till morning.

It was scarcely a moment after the dreadful calamity when the audience had resumed its composure, and the merry plays, light dances and jolly buffoonery were proceeded with. In one room lay the poor girl suffering from the tortures of death while in the next the music and revelry went on with undiminished ardour.

To Manage a Rearing Horse.—Whenever you perceive a horse's inclination to rear, seperate your reins and prepare for him. The instant he is about to rise, slacken one hand, and bend or twist his head with the other, keeping your hands low. This bending compels him to move a hind leg, and of necessity, brings his forefeet down. Instantly twist him completely round, two or three times, which will confuse him very much, and completely throw him off his guard. The moment you have finished twisting him round, place his head in the direction you to proceed, apply the spurs, and he will not fail to go forwards. If the situation be convenient, press him into a gallop, and apply the whip two or three times severely. The horse will not perhaps be quite satisfied with the defeat, but may feel disposed to try again for the mastery. Should this be the case, you have only to repeat the discipline.—Ex

A sad affair occurred in Owasso, Mich., few days since: Two Saginaw ladies went thither to meet their aged parents, whom they had not seen for years. As the cars from the East containing the old people approached the depot' the mother caught sight of her daughters, and in her eagerness to embrace them stumbled and fell. The cars ran over her, severing her head completely from her body.

Artemus Ward's executor being unable to discover the fortune bequeathed to him to found an asylum for worn-out printers; it is suggested that this regarded request was A. Ward's last 'gosh,' the only difference being that he did not make the usual appendage—' this is a gosh.'

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter U. V. Miller, of Keswtown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Rosey, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

OF

CONSUMPTION!

IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different receipes, but all without any good effect. Squire Peterman of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottle, at once, with the Pills; so soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this compliment, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, chills, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER U. V. MILLER,
Earnestown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman, Peter U. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy for all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

Poetry.

VOLUNTEER MELODY.

Fathers of Canada! ye who have won
Homes from her forests and wealth from her soil:
Hoping to leave them to daughter or son;
Say, shall th' invader your treasures despoil?
Not if your sons like their fathers are true,
Hold in their bearing when trouble is nigh;
Let them in bravery imitate you,
And save their possessions, or die.

Frostbite and sunstroke you've braved in your day;
Deadlier these than the bullet or steel;
Danger may lurk in the battle array,
But toil has its dangers when forest trees reel:
Ague and fever have challenged your right
To the lands you have cleared and the homes you possess;
But boldly you struggle with main and with might,
And labor resulted in wealth and success.

Let then your sons be as brave as you've been,
Gallantly go where their duty may call,
Trusting in Him who, by mortals unseen,
Looks with benignant regard upon all,
Then, tho' the foeman may bluster and boast,
Threatening ruin with bullet and brand;
Conquest shall be with the patriot host,
And plenty and peace reign again in the land.

Selections.

On the Present State of the Market Matrimonial.

From London Society

There is nothing new under the sun, says the wise man, explaining that if perchance anything appears to be new, it is only that 'there is no remembrance of former things that were before us.' So the cry 'There never were such times' is not true. Good seasons and bad seasons (even as to seasons matrimonial) have their cycle men and a long arrears of single women—yes, and even the very same popular reason or it—was the identical cry of one hundred years ago. Witness the following from Sir Charles Grandison:

'I believe there are more bachelors now in England by many thousands than there were a few years ago; and probably the members of them, and of single women of course, will every year increase. The luxury of this age will account for a great deal of this, and the turn our sex take to undemeaticate themselves for a good deal more.'

What is the reason that the ladies are in as great a hurry as ever to get husbands, but the gentlemen are by no means in as great a hurry to get wives?

To give this question we must consider that this dearth of husbands is only partial: it is not the complaint of all classes, but only of one. Among our labourers and mechanics, and indeed among our industrial population generally, rich or poor, as in Liverpool or Manchester, times matrimonial are not so bad. The John Hobsons and the Mary Snookses put up their banns as fast as ever. Manufacturers' sons and daughters also marry after their kind much as usual. So we can trace the evil to its source. It is the silks and the satins, not the corduroys and the calicoes, that raise the cry—they are the men of leasure, not the men of labour; the listless consumers, not the active producers, who are so backward in coming forward to the anxious mothers' content.

The simple reason is, men can't have what they can't afford, and there is a time when the ancestral estate or the fortune realised some generations back has been divided and subdivided till little but the pride of the thing remains. Yes, it is Gentility that is at a dead lock. Professions do not pay; money out of trade gives scarcely only about three per cent., and land pays less still; so the rent of a hundred acres may often go for my lady's dress alone, and with 30,000*l.* in the funds a young couple can barely afford even three maids and Connaught Square. The consequence is that now, as in Sir Charles Grandison's time, we have one large section of society holding on most frantically to the pride and position to which they were born, and reduced to a choice of evils simply to decide what luxury they shall give up first.

Now the very last thing to be risked is loss of caste. In England, as in India, caste reigns supreme. Here, as in ancient Rome, to be poor may be tolerable, but to look poor is the smart. The hardest part of poverty, said Juvenal, is quod ridiculos facit homines, that is, literally takes a peg out of your consequence, and makes you sing small. No; anything but that. The pleasant smiles of those you meet is as sunshine on your path; the hearty tone of sympathy is as marrow to your bones. There is an atmosphere social as well as material which must be balmy and genial, or it is a burthen to your spirits and blighting to your whole economy. The young fashionable knows that if once reduced to a shabby street it is, in one sense, false to say 'A man's a man for a' that,' for he isn't half the man he was, in pluck or feeling either.—What man can show a bold front with a seedy waistcoat? What lady can hold up her head in a dowdy bonnet?

Little wisdom is required to see that in a life-struggle for caste man single has a twofold advantage. Society does not ask where he lives or how he lives, and society expects but little of him. He may be the invitee, not the inviter, for many a long year, and by good look for a long life. His card need only stand his club and say nothing of his garret. But man married is taken to strict account at once. All must be open and above board; while that one-sided hospitality turns to an affair of give and take—a modern dinner-party being called 'a return'—not so much a gathering of friends as a meeting of creditors.—Fashionable people do not want to pay visits in back streets, still less to have shabby-genteels meet upon their staircase; and as to out-of-door greetings, 'carriage-people' hate a bow from a mere 'job;' and we heard of a lady mortally offended in a dashing barouche at receiving a friendly recognition, as she said, from a sorry creature who was jogging along at three and sixpence the first hour and half a crown every hour after.

It is silly to say that the luxuries of club-life indispose and spoil men for the purer and quiet home. We know a little of club-life. Our friend E—— would marry if he could. We have dined with him at the Rag-and-Bamb, and stopped across with him to dress in a mere garret (except his bedroom in Berners street. We have known him confined to his room, that is, boxed up in this garret, with only a dirty maid-of-all-work to ring up, when he can, as his ministering angel, for three and four days together. We have seen him lounging at his club many a weary hour with society without friendship, an aggregation of atoms without affinity, ever coming, ever going, shifting and fluctuating as a human stream. We have watched him killing time but not enjoying it, the very picture of unrest, yearning for quiet and repose—a life of smoke and billiards, sherry and bitters, 'Punch' and the 'Pall-Mall.' 'And yet this in the life 'with none to bless us, none whom we can bless,' supposed to be deliberately preferred to the homes to which such men are but too pleased that their married friends should invite them!

No; it is not married life, it is the mere apology of married life, from which we shrink. Robert South, the last man to be sentimental, speaks of a fond couple in poverty having just love enough to torture each other. That is what man fear. They have always seen that the cost is nothing, the comfort and elegance everything, and money no object, where ladies are, in the case. They dread the thought of taking the stylish daughter from Hyde Park Square to broil through September in Oxford Terrace, where all around is dust and dry leaves, ladders, whitewash, and closed shutters, because they cannot afford to follow the stream out of town.

You may say men's fears are unreasonable, or that many a girl values affection beyond all price, and with the object of her love will share the humblest abode—this may be true of some ladies, but, if so, their style betrays the contrary. Their dress and 'fast' ways in every variety of absurdity proclaim that appearance, vanity, fashion, and to be 'first-rate' is the very soul of their existence. Not a sentiment do you hear akin to Love in a cottage, still less to Contentment on a little, or to Inward resources above the whims and follies of the day.

These traits are not lost upon men, for even the many who find thinking a fatigue receive impressions they know not how from what swims before their eyes. Dresses trailing in the dust, head-straps and chignons worthy of Bedlam, faces bared of all those tresses by which Nature would screen ladies from the rude blasts of heaven and the rude gaze of men—these things men feel, if they do not, think, have little enough to do with 'the richer and the poorer,' 'the better and the worse' of rugged life. Thus women seem to teach that life is a jest; but men have an idea of life in earnest.

The same staring, impudent style has one weaning element more. In a wife man dreams of having amidst all the shocks of late one heart and one soul devoted to himself; but to mar this vision we have an affectation of giddiness and effrontery, as if the fair would be the creature of any man who pleased her most.

The present 'fast' style, believe me, ladies, is the most suicidal style you could adopt. It virtually proclaims, 'extravagance is our line; pace is everything;' and all men are aware 'it is the pace that kills.'

We are now speaking chiefly of London like, as also of Bath, Cheltenham, Brighton, and those few towns of England in which alone the strata next above the trade series naturally crop up. But these smaller towns claim little notice: the sons are soon drawn away to professions and to London; and, save a sprinkling of rich county men, it is in London that nearly all the eligibles can live or earn a livelihood. This congregation of men in London diminishes the chances of the ladies most alarmingly. In other places men could marry as the clergy marry, and be quite easy and comfortable on 500*l.* or 600*l.* a year; but double that sum would be required for the same relative position in town.

In London to live near the parks, and sufficiently near your office, is expensive.—To economize your income you risk your health. As suburb is added to suburb you cannot even drive into the country, much less walk, and the atmosphere of London, added to its noise and excitement, renders change and out-of-towning actually among the necessaries of life.

Such would be the pecuniary obstacles to marriage even if the value of money were the same as twenty years since. But the scale of expenses is higher far. For the mild aristocracy of those days we have a rampant snob-ocracy now. Mrs. World still holds her court, but one all of glitter and blazes, and the feathers and diamonds expected are more costly than ever. The mines of Northumberland, the forges of Birmingham, or the mills of Manchester, as also the sheep-farms of Australia and the diggings of California, all pour their lucky adventurers into Hyde Park Gardens or Lancaster Gate. County dignity and London style fade and pale before the luxury of their conservatories or the gorgeousness of their mansions, while by libraries ordered by the yard, and by pictures painted 'to be the correct thing,' the hope is by high art to bide low descent.

Competition rules society as well as trade. No doubt some few persons of family and respectability will say, 'Let these people bid high for their standing, since they cannot have even the semblance of it without, we are safer in our position on cheaper terms.' But the majority are not so philosophical. When the foolish go so fast, even the wisest feel slow. The old carriage of the older families now looks up tub-like, and the old horses no agricultural, that the very sight of these equipages sets on 'carriage-people' as an income-tax of thirty per cent., while fancy of all other kinds soon runs up in the same proportion. In this race of fashion what is a mere canter to the one class is a break-neck gallop to the other; and though the field is daily growing more select as the overweighted fall out, distanced, and are 'nowhere,' still a constant succession of donkeys fall in, decomed after a short burst and fitful effort, to the same jeers and disappointment.

All this makes the exactions of caste daily more severe, especially for married people, on whom Mrs. World aforesaid has no mercy. She virtually says to [illegible] young couple, 'You are now some of us, and must live up to the mark, as we are obliged to do;' the gentlemen know how high that mark is, and see that modern young ladies seem born and bred to keep the standard as high as possible.

If ladies were habitually quiet and inexpensive in their habits—if men felt that in married life each, happy with the other alone, would take leave of Vanity Fair, and be comparatively indifferent to its whims and ways—if the wife would be a housewife—if household duties were to employ the lady within, instead of the visiting, the gossiping, and the showing-off without—then there would be more marriages, no doubt. Now don't despise our suggestions, ladies. The home we are describing, however humble it may seem, is a far better one than will fall to the lot of many of you when the sad time arrives that the parents' home is broken up, and the executor drily informs you of the small dividends on the Three per Cent. on which you must cut and contrive to the end of your maiden days. We only remind you to be wise in time. The question is not simply a question of the single or the married state, but a question of a richer or poorer state some few years to come. For where is your provision? The men inherit the estate; the men alone earn money by professions. Single women now-a-days are doubly poor—poor because safe dividends never were so low, and poorer still because the cost of living and the demands of society never were so high.

At present the ladies will not meet the times, they will not see the future as it must be. 'Fast' with a vengeance, they 'go in' for all or nothing. It is plain to the meanest understanding that any home for their later years in which their butterfly style and trifling ways will not prove ridiculously out of place, is a lot that neither by patrimony nor by matrimony one in twenty can expect to realise. Still ladies shut their eyes, commit themselves to the whirling stream, and in the brilliancy of the possible prize forget the extreme probability of the blanks.

But if ladies will not, as we say, meet the times, let us be fair. Have we any right to wonder? Do not the men do precisely the same? Their own professional earnings are quite on the lottery principle. All the prizes in the church, equally divided, would hardly pay for the education to compete for them. All the fees at the bar would scarcely pay for the circuits and the wigs. Yet men hope against hope, and prefer the mere chance of higher reward, to compounding for a more certain position in a less enviable line of life.

The anxious mother only does the same. What though by the cold calculations of prudence her income and expectations require that she should draw off with her daughters to train the honeysuckle and help the parson in some Devonshire cottage, and so make sure of a plain gown and plain pudding to the end of their days, with a far more probable match with the land-agent or the parish doctor. This is as unreasonable as to expect the failing merchant to realize the retire into poverty, when a lucky venture—daily talked of for others, so why not for him?—would keep the carriage and mansion in the family still.

And there is this to be said for the ladies, that the prize matrimonial is at once so dazzling and so rich a prize. Not a few mothers are feelingly aware that when all they have to leave their girls is divided into fractions, and these fractions by safe investments are reduced to their lowest terms, a life of dependence awaits them, from which marriage offers the only escape. Besides, what mother ever forgets the rank and precedence of the married woman, or the triumph of proclaiming that her child is chosen before all.

Yet, strange to say, the marriage desired lies between the narrowest parallels; the gentleman must have the qualifications the least likely to meet together. With the family connections, the profession and the refinement, which are all more or less an earnest of poverty and extravagance, he must combine the income of the plain and plodding sons of busy life. In other wants, if people cannot afford one thing they put up with another—the second best, the say—it must serve. But not so with ladies in respect of their suitors. We rather pity than blame them; but not a jot will their feelings allow them to abate, otherwise, just as the rich manufacturer's daughter is caught by a spendthrift lord, so many a thriving man from debateable ground would be ambitious of the daughter of a needy officer or country gentleman.

But considering how limited is this range in point of standing, ladies look ridiculously high in point of money. At the present day ladies are in a state of strike. The money market is against them. They have too few offers on their own terms, and all others they discourage. They lay themselves out for prizes almost hopeless, till men of practicable income are afraid to offer. Their whole style, dress, and education proclaim them only ambitious to be rich men's wives, and rather bitters than blessings to any one less.

Consequently we are assured by those who mix much with young men, that marriage now enters fearfully little into their plans of life. Time was when the hope of a happy marriage was a stimulus to exertion and a motive to prudence; but now-a-days it is set aside as too generally impracticable, and its place supplied by discreditable arrangements. If the ladies are too refined to put up with the habits of a class below them, not so the other sex. Men arrange with some shopwoman to keep house and make some sort of home for them in lonely evenings, pleading it is the nearest approach to married life that they can afford.

Why then do ladies allow their places to be filled by those of whose existence, till these 'fast' days, they were not supposed to know? They well may answer, 'Oh thou art the cause of this anguish, my mother?'—and father too. Their whole rearing is often a mistake. They are rather accomplished than educated; rather ornamented than useful, born rather for waste than for thrift, started with the ideas and expectations of a peeress, to subside into the hard economies of village or small town life. Their parental establishment is one of false appearances. They carry on the ideas and habits of their family, forgetting the estate to support it has well-nigh dwindled away. So the style, taste, and expenses of ladies are altogether out of proportion to the future that awaits them; just as the modern schoolboy's pocket-money is more than he will be able to fritter so lightly as a man.

If parents would only coolly calculate the fortunes they can leave their daughters, and give them ideas in unison, things would soon find their level. Many a clergyman would remain on some poor beggar's head; many a flowing robe would be saved from the dirt; and Rotten Row—properly called Rotten—would be thin indeed, when deserted by all whose display is an imposition, the mere flickering of an income fast drawing to its close. But men without a farthing to give, and the merest pittance to bequeath, except a settlement utterly incompatible with the average means of that class of men to which their daughters aspire. They expect by some matrimonial juggle, to reap where they have not sown, and clear for their daughters at one jump all the struggles of life.

No wonder the gentlemen cry off. No, they say, to take a penniless girl is one thing; but to take one with all the ideas of the most affluent, is another. If they would marry contented with a home only very much better than that which one day awaits them if single, we then could venture; but the greatest of all misery must be a restless and discontented wife. Remember, we are no advocates for marrying into poverty. Let Belgravians marry with Belgravians still; but pity 'tis that any should be so reared to 'tread the velvet lawns and marble terraces,' when nothing awaits them but the rugged paths and wintry chill of later life.

When things are at their worst they are on the eve of improvement: a bad trade will soon be given up when once men see it does not pay; and though speculators are very perseverering, there is a point in the lottery matrimonial, as in all others, where the hopelessness of prizes, and the flood of blanks, puts an end to the game. Already there are symptoms of a change: first, the foreign market long gave relief; and though to go to India on spec. does not answer, still, marriages to settle abroad are less and less in disfavour: again, it not so particular about class, if the ladies are not so particular about the age, or the charms of the gentleman who is in a position to offer—May and December meet together, and once more the prudential reasoning of Sir Charles Grandison's day applies again—

'Love matches, my dear' (say the worldly wise), 'are foolish things. Mild, sedate convenience is better than a stark, staring mad passion. Who ever hears of darts, names, Cupids, Adonises, and such like nonsense in matrimony? No: passion is transitory; but discretion, which never boils over, gives durable happiness.

So we lately heard a lady exclaim: 'A capital match—a capital match, as to the loss, certainly; not at all the sort Miss A. ever wished to marry; but not one woman in twenty does get that.'

The Roman sage of old said that for his daughter he preferred the man without the money to the money without the man. But in the spirit of Horace, 'the money—by all means, the money—with a decent marriage if you can; but the money:' so says Rotten Row, from the top to the bottom.

As to age, if the ladies marry the old, or if they wait till they are themselves no longer young, they well may plead that, not affording the least of love, they simply put up with a cold collation; they begin married life in the middle, and quaff the champagne without the effervescence. In short, with due regard to the table of caste, anything counts as a marriage, and anything counts as a husband. Matrimony is simply a matter of money: Cupid yields to Cocker, and Venus is quite a woman of business. From the scarcity of able-bodied volunteers, she deals in bounties, and presses into her service such veterans and incapables as you would summon from Greenwich or from Chelsea. A clergyman lately said it was to him quite a heartache to couple such fine young women as presented themselves to such unlovable louts or wrinkled rous as now enact the part of bridegroom.

But though all the second-rate material has been used up, the difficulty still continues, the arrears are on the increase, and still the cry is raised, 'They come! they come!' There is a point at which the numbers of malcontents make common cause, and countenance each other in doing something; and will it not be so in the matter in question? Yes; nature will prove stronger than etiquette, or prudence either. To many a woman life without an object, a profession, a sphere for her energies, or the element in which she is intended to live and breathe. We say to many—not to all—some are strongminded females; more head than heart, rather masculine than feminine; and they find a vent ritualistic, radical, or what not. Some also, though proper women, are devoted to aged parents; while others subside into good aunts, ready for all family emergencies—take the rising generation in charge, and are very mothers to children and their own.

But a large majority of women, having no such sphere, or no such notions, are evidently, by the very yearnings of their nature, rather adjective than substantive, and useless and meaningless while they stand by themselves. They cannot live happy as single women. Every year tries them hard: they grow rather sour than mellow. The once affectionate sisters diverge and grow crabbed, till the same house won't hold them, and they—part.

In many ways Nature asserts her laws. There is with families, as with flowers, a time when certain sorts must be planted out, otherwise the stunted development, and the matted tangle of the pot-bound root does but express the violence done to the distorted natures and the thwarted, nipped buddings of ill-managed flowers of another kind.

Ladies have two alternatives: the one is to marry from a rank beneath their own; and this they will be slow indeed in doing to the honor of our fair sisters be it said. For, in spite of their slang and their fast style, which are affected vulgarity, and little else, nothing can prove their innate refinement and the real delicacy of nature more than this, that, however little they disguise their eagerness for husbands, those husbands must be gentlemen and nothing else. Their imputed forwardness is limited to their own order, and, however much they may abate in the age or the looks of their suitor, it is wonderful how rarely an English lady will look on any from a rank beneath her own.

The other alternative is, to marry as little and live on little. The smart of this alternative is in the opinion of their friends; but when numbers do the same, they will keep each other in countenance, and the smart will cease.

We are no advisers of marrying into poverty, either positive or comparative; we have seen its miseries too often; that is, poverty, properly so called, and swarming with brats we cannot keep. We once heard a youth, when told he must work, argue with his father and mother that it was very hard he never wanted to be born; and so bring a fellow into an expensive world like this, with nothing to maintain him, was a great deal too bad. Still, as to marrying with some sacrifice of externals, and being satisfied to begin with very much less than older people enjoy, we regard every such instance as helping to break up that impracticable scale which is now unfortunately regarded as indispensable for the wedded state.

But for this alternative the ladies must first of all induce the gentlemen to do the same, and to this end the first step must be taken by themselves—their whole style must be altered. Whereas at present they make a show of extravagance, they must change to the guise of economy. They must sue and be sued in formâ pauperis; and the 'neat and industrious,' the 'striving and deserving' character, will be the best they can adopt. To use their own phrase, they must 'go in for' the domestic and economical 'line.'

To this advice we are not addressing ladies of property, but only the many—also! the very many—whose present style is a deception, and who, if not married, will have one day to exercise the prudence which now perhaps provokes a smile. At the present time, so complete a deception is nine-tenths of the finery we see, that one sex seems born and bred to impose upon the other. Not a few ladies remind one painfully of the little fairies in a pantomime, who, when the transformation scene is over, are doomed to doff the crowns and spangles not their own, and return to their pinnies and skull-caps—all the toggery their real lot can afford.

A touching instance of childish devotion is told in a New Brunswick paper. Three children there got astray. One was about six years of age, the others four and three. It was a wild region, and in wild weather, and at the edge of night. From signs, it seems that the six-year-old child soon felt sure there was no hope of their being found, or finding themselves that night, and so it took measures at once for the safe keeping of its little ones. Putting them on the most sheltered nook it could find. It then stripped away the most of its own garments to put on them, and set out to gather dry seaweed and brush to cover them up and defend them. Quite a quantity of this had been gathered and piled about the babes into a sort of nest, and there they lay when the people found them, still alive; but the six-year-old mother and martyr lay out on the shore dead of the cold—lay beside the last pile of brush it had been able to gather, but was not able to bring in.

FRESH EARTH FOR STABLED ANIMALS.—From an experience of many years, I am satisfied of the beneficial results from giving stabled animals—horses, cattle or swine—what fresh earth they will eat, say twice a week, or oftner. It promotes and regulates their digestion, gives tone to their appetite, prevents disease, keeps their coats in fine condition—promoting their health. I usually lay in a good supply of thickly cut sods, and throw some into their troughs twice a week. Let those who have doubts try the experiment giving the sward to part of their stock and withholding from the rest for a few weeks, and their doubts will be removed. All cattle in grazing occasionally pull up a tuft of grass, sod and all, roots, earth and all. This certainly does no harm.

An exchange tells a story of a discontented widower, who, on seeing the remains of his late wife lowered into the grave, exclaimed with tears in his eyes: "Well, I've lost wife—I've lost umbrellas; yes, even cows and horses; but I never—no, never—had anything to cut me like this."

I never complained of my condition but once," said an old man, "when my feet were bare and I had no shoes: but I met a man without feet, and became contented."

Kissing that passes from parent to child and back again, seems to be as necessary as shinplasters to do business with; and kissing that husbands give and take is simply gathering ripe fruit from one's own plum tree and that otherwise drop ope or be stolen.

A Mississippi editor, in praising a favourite candidate says, "He is as fine a fellow as ever lifted a hat to a lady, or a boot to a blackguard."

Tremendous Fire in Caribo.

(From the British Columbian, New Westminster, Sept. 23.)

It becomes our painful duty to chronicle a fire in comparison with which all that have previously happened in this Colony are as a drop to the bucket. On Wednesday the 16th inst., about 2 p.m. a fire broke out in Barry's Saloon Barkerville, and before five o'clock the entire town was one mass of smouldering ashes. When it is understood that Barkerville was the principal town in Cariboo, the depot in fact for that entire region, some idea may be formed as to the extent of the disaster. The loss is variously estimated from one to two million of dollars, and if the cost or, indeed, the market value, of the buildings be taken into the account, we fear that the higher figure would not be found out of the way.—Owing to the unfortunate interruption to telegraphic communication we are still without details; but respecting the extent and main features of the deplorable disaster there can be no doubt, the facts having been telegraphed from Quesnelmouth on Thursday, by Mr. Pool, Mr. Barnard's agent for Cariboo. It appears that so great was the rapidity with which the fire spread, that in most instances little or nothing could be saved, even books, valuable papers and bank notes themselves falling a prey to the devouring elements. Of all the merchants, we are told that but one, Mr. Strouss, had taken the precaution to insure; and he only to the extent of $40,000 upon a stock of something like $120,000. So far as at present known the only parties who succeeded in saving anything worth mentioning were Mr. Strauss, Messrs Gruchesen Bros., and Mr. J. T. Scott, the last mentioned having saved his saloon and the greatest portion of his stock. The Hudson Bay Company had a warehouse beyond the precincts of the town, which, of course, escaped. But their retail stock met the common fate. It is difficult to estimate the extent of injury that must accure to the from this disaster. With winter so near, and no time to replace much that has been burned, it is to be feared that the mining interests must suffer, and that many who would otherwise have remained in Cariboo, will now have to leave the mines. Unquestionably there must be a very large quantity of goods in transitu between the seaboard and Cariboo, for shipments were never so heavy as they have been during the past six or eight weeks. But, view the matter in the most favorable light, one cannot evade the conclusion that to have two million dollars' worth of property swept away in a moment and no large a population left not only penniless but houseless at the late season, is a blow sufficiently heavy to make itself felt throughout every district and in every interest.

SUPERSTITION IN BEAUCE.—The Canadien of Quebec, gives an account of a trial which has taken place in the County of Beauce, and which reveals a singular degree of ignorance and superstition. A farmer of Beauce, returning from market, had been robbed of a sum of $100. A neighbor of his who, by the bye, had been taken up by him on the road in a state of apparent intoxication, bearing him complain with tears of his loss, offered to help him to recover the sum or part of it if he would give him half of what could be retrieved. The farmer consented, and they went at night together into a barn where the neighbor performed a number ridiculous acts of pretended magic or incantation, which were all described in court to the great amusements of the legal brotherhood. After having several times called upon the "evil one" to restore the money, he found the farmer's very purse, but with half the money only. Though recommended to keek the affair very secret, the farmer could not abstain from confiding his luck to his better half, by whom the story soon was repeated, and came to the ears of a person who suspecting the trick, had the too clever neighbor arrested, tried, and condemned to imprisonment by Judge Rouse, who took that opportunity of reflecting upon the cruelty of some people.

Capital against Mr. Gladstone has been sought from the fact that Archbishop Manning happens to be godfather to his eldest son. From this it has been insinuated that friendliness to Popery lies at the bottom of his present proceedings against the Irish Church. The Archbishop writes an indignant letter of explanation. He says he has known Mr Gladstone very intimately since 1830. Till his conversion to the Roman Catholic faith in 1851, they were fast and endeared friends. In 1840 he did, when a fellow member with Mr. G. of the English Church, become godfather to his son, as alleged; but since the time of his own conversion their intercourse has all but ceased. The Archbishop closes by saying "I cannot conclude this letter without adding that a friendship now of eight and thirty years, close and intimate till 1851 in no common degree, enables me to bear witness that a mind of greater integrity and more transparent truth, less capable of being swayed by faction and party, and more protected from all such baseness—even by the fault of indigant impatience—as insincerity and selfishness in public affairs, than Mr. Gladstone's, I have never known." Party spirit and unscrupulousness must be going great lengths when such a thing could be seriously laid bold of as a ground for accusation, or as a means of weakening an opponent's political influence.

DR. DUFF ON SINGING HYMNS.—The Rev. Alexander Duff, D. D, the distinguished minister and missionary of the Free Church of Scotland, has written a letter to G. H. Stuart, Esq., expressing the "surprise and dumb amazement" with which he heard of his suspension, and assuring him of his entire confidence and sympathy. After expressing himself heartily in favor of singing hymns in the worship of God, he adds: "Such are briefly my own views on the subject; and rather than abandon them, I would cheerfully stand by your side and be rebuked by any or all of the ecclesiastical conclaves of Christendom." He says:—"A church or ecclesiastical body may prohibit hymns from being sung; but such prohibition is not wise. So long as men's souls are spiritually languid, it does not signify much; they will not trouble themselves much about the singing of Psalms or hymns, or singing anything at all. But let the fountains of the great deep of old Nature be broken up in men's souls, as under the earthquake heavings of a mighty revival, and the spiritual instincts, let loose and intensified, will find for themselves vent in sacred song; and cannot be restricted to Old Testament Psalms, however incalculably precious in their own place."

A daughter of Mrs. Robert, sen., of Chatham, in cutting kindling wood, was struck in the face by a sliver, cutting her severely and causing the blood to flow. The sight of her bleeding face so effected her mother, who has been an invalid for some time, that she fell back in her chair and expired.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1868.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO.

On the 11th inst several petitions were presented for the withdrawal of Upper Canada College endowment.

One from C. A. Bloomfield, praying for a charter to construct a wooden railway from Peterboro to Haliburton, and one from the Town Council of Peterboro, praying that a majority of the Town Trust Commissioners be able to decide in matters relating to their Trust.

The municipal and assessment laws is in the hands of a committee with a view to its amendment.

Division court laws are also promised a revision, and the law relating to Sheriffs. Nothing is promised by the Government on the subject of Denominational College, as they have already power of affiliation with the University.

DUTIES OF MAGISTRATES.

Mr. Boyd enquired whether Ministers intended to introduce a measure touching the duties of magistrates in and out of session.

Attorney General Macdonald said the Government had it now in contemplation to bring in a series of resolutions with regard to the power and conduct of magistrates in and out of session. But, as prodeiure in criminal cases belonged to the Queen, all that could be done would be to introduce resolutions, on which an address might be founded, the address to take the shape of a memorial to the Dominion Government. Last Session the Senate had refused to adopt the Acts on the criminal administration of justice sent up from the Commons, on the ground that they had not time to consider them. Now, in considering them next Session, perhaps the Senate might embody in them the views embraced in the memorial, and they would thus, ultimately, come up before the House of Commons. The scheme in connection with the administration of justice which the Government intended to propose, would, he was satisfied, be one to commend itself to the House and country at large, as in furtherance of the administration of justice in a more economical and satisfactory method than at present. (Hear.)

The subject of officials in public service giving security is also under discussion, but it is not calculated to be retrospective, lest some men in limited circumstances who hold office might not be able to comply with the law and thereby loose their position. Some argued that all officials of trust should be required to give security. Attorney General McDonald contended for the contrary, on the ground referred to. Of course the matter will be let in this way to enable ministers to see after their friends.

The Attorney General introduced a Bill relative to Legislative Assembly powers.

Mr. Blake is a very active member of the House and has already introduced several Bills calculated to remove difficulties in obtaining justice. Among them are

A Bill to make provisions for the restitution of the debts of deceased persons out of their lands.

A Bill to make better provisions for the executors or administrators dealing with mortgages.

A Bill to amend the law relative to bills or notes due in the Province of Quebec.

A Bill to do away with attending term, by law students; and also one is the matter of costs for writs of alimony.

He has introduced a Bill to do away with the necessity for jurors in our courts except under certain circumstances. This will prove a very acceptible act to the country. The cost of jurors' attendance is no small item in the administration of justice; while the verdicts of too many juries have been the subject of ridicule rather than satisfaction; and lawyers have reaped no small profit from the fact that they were considered able to darken counsel in too many cases, and get a verdict from an illiterate, unenquiring jury. This Bill of Blakes proposes to do away with juries unless demanded by the party or parties concerned. It is a reform much needed.

Numerous petitions from different parts of the Province here been presented, praying aid for superior education, or in other words for denominational colleges; and not a few against continuing the endowment to Upper Canada College.

A Bill by Mr. Clarke, to repeal the act respecting the protection of sheep from dogs. There is need for something being done in this matter, as under the present law the sums paid for sheep supposed to be killed by dogs, are to often, it is to be feared, obtained contrary to the intentions of the law, and perhaps when the owners' dog had done the evil.

WOODEN RAILWAYS.

Our readers are aware that Mr. Bloomfield, Secretary of the English Land and Emigration Company is just now petitioning the Local Legislature for a charter to construct a wooden railway from this or some point north of us to Haliburton. When Mr. Bloomfield was down here in June he was very sanguine in the matter, expecting ere long to have his wishes realized, of railway communication 70 miles north of us. It is needless for us to say that all such extension of communication must tend to draw into our back country a large number of settlers that otherwise would fear to venture, owing to the difficulty of egress again. It may yet become a matter of enquiry whether wooden railroads or roads of common construction are the cheapest. It is certain that money has been wasted on government roads, and the travellers left to get in and out at the end in the best way they can. The promoters of wooden railroads claim that they are cheap, easily constructed, easily worked and durable. If they have all these qualities they must supersede the present earth roads. Their cost, however, must exceed that of commonly constructed roads, but the advantages of speed and load must be very much in favor of the railway. The cost of a wooden railway at present in projection in the State of New York is somewhat as follows:—

1,760 Ties delivered at 10 cts.	$176 00
21,220 ft B. M. Maple rails deliv'd.	316 00
Wedges delivered, say	40 00
Notching and Track laying	467 00
Total per mile	1000 00

And one of over six miles in length has been in successful operation for eight years.

Mr. Bloomfield thinks that about $4,000 per mile will build and secure rolling stock for the road, and thus about $300,000 would give us 70 miles of railroad northward.—This as we have said would indeed settlement and build up a back country that would add to our trade materially. We know that it is urged by some that extension north must hurt Peterboro, and hence the policy of Peterboro not to encourage such extension. This, to say the least of it, is a selfish policy. The argument also is not conclusive. Peterboro has got too much of a start to be robbed of its trade by places that may spring up north of us, and instead of injuring the merchants of Peterboro they will be found the suppliers of the small traders in the villages. Our favorable position forbids a rival town in the county, unless our citizens prove recreant to their own best interest and drive the business of the county into another channel by some insane policy. We are not prepared to advocate the town taking stock in such a project, but we can encourage it by our good will, throw no obstacles in the way and do all we can to have it start from a spot as near to the town as possible. A grant of wild land will be sought in aid of the road: we want the land settled, and we trust whatever shall be done that this will not be lost sight of. To give away tracts of land to be held on speculation cannot facilitate the increase of population; still, if suitable roads be constructed and settlers placed on all the arable land, without any other expense to the country, we would not lose by a grant of land for a railroad.

Election of a Bishop for Montreal and Metropolitan for Canada.

Last week the Synod of Montreal met for the purpose of electing a Bishop. He would at the same time be the Archbishop of the Dominion. There was such opposition to the nomination of the Bishops that nothing was done, in consequence but a postponement of the matter till May next. The great cause of the trouble appears to be ritualism, or high church tendencies. The mass of the clergy backed by the laity, strenuously opposed the election of a high church Bishop. The Bishops refused to nominate the Bishop of Rupert's Land, who appears to have have had votes at a caucus meeting sufficient to elect him. Strongly remonstrating reports were made and passed, condemning the course the Bishops had taken, and as much as laying the blame of the failure on them. Where there are canons establishing the the order of proceedings it is difficult and unwise to break them, but it could not be much evil to the Church to permit any regular member of the Synod to nominate a candidate, and then, as in other public meetings, take a vote on each. If none of them be successful, to allow new proposals. It is difficult to break through established usages, however. There is cause for gratification even to members of other churches, in the stand taken by the laity and clergy to prevent the growth of ritualism and formalism, and it is a certain sign that there is some vitality still in the establishment. The Montreal Witness says truly that much change cannot be expected until May next, as they will be likely rather to brood over their unfavorable position, and return to the Synod in spring with a yet deeper feeling of grievance. The lay delegates were still more widely opposed to the episcopal principle of selections laid down by the House of Bishops, as the one which should guide them in their nominations; so that in May it is probable that the contest will be for a change in that article of the constitution which has put the Synod and the House of Bishops into their present dilemma. It is well understood that the Synod were prepared to elect, if certain clergymen—one of them already in the episcopate, and the other a dignitary of an inferior order—were proposed. It cannot be denied that the present arrangement does effectually forbid clergymen of this diocese from reaching the highest ecclesiastical preferment, and—what is of much more consequence—excludes from the episcopate men eminently qualified to serve the church and the interests of religion.

The soiree at the Drill Shed was well attended. Knowing ones say over 600 were present after we several speeches—loyal a patriotic, were attentively listened to—mirth and laughter followed in the train. All who remained were satisfied that the evening was spent very pleasantly.

Peterboro, Nov. 18, 1868.

The Committee of the Protestant Home present their thanks to the Orange Lodges of the town of Peterborough, for their generous Donation of Ten Dollars received by the Treasurer, for the benefit of the above *Institution. They also take this opportun*ity of thanking all the Medical men of the town for their regular and gratuitous attendance on the inmates, and to Messrs. Ormond & Walsh, Gilmour, and Kempt, for supplying without charge, and in the most liberal manner, all the medicines required (some of a very expensive kind) and ordered for the sick. And lastly through the medium of their own columns would they offer their sincere thanks to the Proprietors of our local papers for the many insertions, advertisements, etc., they have made from time to time, their making our wants known far and near, and, in many cases awaking the generous feelings of distant friends, who but for the statements of the Peterborough Review and Peterborough Examiner, would not be aware of the existence of the Peterborough Protestant Home.

November, 1868.

Peterboro Protestant Home.

At a meeting held in the Protestant Home on Wednesday, the 16th September, 1868, Judge Dennistoun appeared before the Committee and presented a mortgage for one thousand dollars, that Mr. Manly Pearson, of Smith, wished to convey to Trustees for the benefit of the Home, and it was resolved,—"That the handsome gift be accepted with many thanks; also that Mr. James Frederick Dennistoun be requested to draw an assignment to carry out Mr. Pearson's wishes to Trustees, and that the Trustees be Sheriff Hall, A. W. Kemp, Esq., and Col. Haultain."

Since the establishment of the Peterboro Protestant Home, for the destitute, was first decided upon, the Ladies connected with its management have been desirous of erecting a building as a permanent Home in place of the present temporary one. Mr. Pearson's generous gift has opened to them a prospect of attaining this object, if they can apply the whole amount to its furtherance, By the terms of the mortgage, however, no portion either of the original $1,000 or of the interest to accrue from it, comes into their hands before March, 1870, but by that time it is hoped that, with the assistance of the public who have supported them so well in their work as at present, they may be enabled to take active steps towards carrying out the design.

The subscriptions and donations to be accounted for by the Treasurer, as received since December 8th, 1868, appeared in an issue of this paper in the early part of the current month. Mention has still to be made of a subscription from Mr. Romaine, not though in money, not entered asamongst the cash receipts.

In the statement of accounst furnished as above, Mrs. Calcutt's name is given as a contriculor for the benefit of Mrs. Nelson. This refers only to the monies had from her, but, in addition, she has constantly, since Mrs. Nelson's admission, supplied her with various requisites, as as applied for, of which no previous acknowledgement has been made.

Contributions from other sources of useful second hand clothing or furnitur, provisions, &c., not belonging to the Treasurer's accounts, are duly notified to the public after the close of each month through the two newspapers of the town.

J. P.,
Treasurer, &c.

BRUTAL CONDUCT.—We have been informed that lately four (we will not say men, they do not deserve the appellation), entered the house of a man named Hannah, on Horse Shoe Lake, Minden, and made him a prisoner while two went to his field and taking the bell and straps off his cow, cut off her ears and decamped. Such brutal conduct deserved to be severely punished. It must be galling to the usually quiet people of Minden to have four such animals in their midst.

There was a distressive shock of an Earthquake in the west of England and South Wales, on Friday, the last day of October, at 10.30. A similar shock appeared in 1863.

At last meeting it was carried through the representation of one of the councillors that he had received a letter from Mr. Covert, stating that he wished the Council to repeal the said By-law. South Monaghan Agricultural Ploughing Match.

The annual ploughing match of the above named society took place on Thursday the 5th instant on the farm of Mr. William Rutherford, South Monaghan. The weather which was very threatening early in the morning turned out most favorable for the trial of skill in ploughing. The number of competitors was much smaller than we would liked to have seen, their being only 5 men and 4 boys; we bespeak a much larger turn out in another year. We were pleased to notice the increasing interest taken in these matches manifested by the presence of some of the leading agriculturists from Otonabee, Smith, North Monaghan, Cavan &c.; this is very desirable as well as advantageous to themselves, for seeing what kind of ploughs are the best adapted for the various requirements of the farm, it also acts as a stimulous to have their ploughing better done at home. The field selected for the match was not a good one, especially for the boys, as it is a very stiff clay soil with some stones.

Ploughmen were on the ground at 9 and commenced a little after 10 o'clock. As the work progressed the spectators began to pass their opinions who were to be the first prize ploughmen; there was considerable diversity of opinion as might be expected where there is very close competition as there was in the men's class the ploughing was all very well executed, and would bear favorable comparison with ploughing at the surrounding matches. It is noticed that the favourite plough is the Hill's patent, although Mr. Smithson has for two years ploughed with a Westminster plough. After the prizes had been awarded to the successful competetors by the judges, the ploughers and several officers of the society with a number of other gentlemen sat down to dinner at Mr. William Rutherford's. After ample justice had been done to the good things provided, a vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Rutherford—also to the judges—Messrs. John Walton, James Stewart and James Perrin; the thanks of the society was given to Messrs. Hudson, Post Hope and White, of Peterboro, for their liberality in each giving a plough to the society. A vote of thanks was also presented to Mr. Edward Kerr, President of the society. The days proceedings being then closed we trust to the benefit and satisfaction of all. The following is the prize list:—

MEN.

1st, Alexander Wright; 2nd, Joshua Smithson; 3rd, William Dawson, jr.; 4th, George Nurse.

Professor Fowler and Phrenology.

Imagine a tall, thin, sunk-boned, long-fingered gray-haired Yankee with a strong nasal twang of the genuine Puritanical ring and a peculiar Quaker slaughter, standing before an audience and by the side of a small table covered with skulls of animals and men, and you have some idea of O.S. Fowler, the Phrenologist, to whom for many years has been assigned by popular consent, and by popular consent only, the first place among the followers of Gall and Spurzheim. His appearance is not prepossessing, his English is homely and often inaccurate; his style of speaking, humorous and solemn by turns; his oratory of an inferior order, and his intellect, of the sharp, shrewd, practical, money-making, popular cast. To one who has made a study of Phrenology and subjected the rival systems of mental science to a higher analysis, there is nothing either new or profound in his lectures or books. Twenty years ago he had the same ideas to present to his audience that he has to-day, and yet Phrenology is a new and imperfect science. With the entire devotion of a life to this one subject, he certainly has not accomplished all that might reasonably be expected. He has apparently done nothing for the developement of this new branch of human human knowledge, while most other sciences of recent origin have gone on rapidly towards perfection. Devoid of ability he is not. He has genuine humor and the ~~popular~~ merit of being clear-headed. His audience cannot misunderstand his meaning. He prides himself on being eminently practical and is ever ready to have the merits of the new science tested by his ability to delineate in public the characters of entire strangers. In reading characters from the phrenological organization he makes some "capital hits" and occasional "blunders," but this is the natural result of a system which is a singular compound of truth and error, fact and fancy. He is neither a profound nor an original thinker, though he appears to lay claim to philosophical as well as practical talent. Among Phrenologists there have been men infinitely superior to him in depth and comprehension; and yet every popular phrenological lecturer reads Fowler, repeats his anecdotes, reproduces his arguments and illustrations, and looks up to him as a father. All his leading ideas are borrowed; his facts and illustrations are his own. He is simply a sort of living commentary on the works of Gall, Spurzheim and Combe. His attempts to show Newton's theory of planetary motion to be wrong, is perhaps one of his philosophical efforts, and yet the theory which he substitutes for that proposed by this "priest of nature," is borrowed from Dods, the author of several works on Animal Magnetism and Electrical Psychology. Dods was fairly wild on the electric it theory which asserts that electricity is not only the agent by which God moves and controls all worlds, but also the connecting link between mind and matter, and Fowler has copied his theory without any variation. Some years ago Prof. Fowler promised to give us a "feast of fat things," in the shape of a new and improved system of Phrenology based on Animal Magnetism. He named and located 83 organs for the performance of mental functions. Aided by Le Roy Sanderland he made numerous experiments and arrived at startling conclusions. He promised to do great things for Phrenology and the scientific world with the assistance of Sunderland and Magnetism; but he built his house on a sandy foundation. A Professor in a certain medical college showed Animal Magnetism to be utterly worthless as an agent in discovering the cranial location of mental powers owing to the subject taking on the mental states of the operator. Since that time, Fowler has given up the application of Magnetism to Phrenology; he has gone back to the old system, and now appears to imagine that for it all the favour of his "first love." Gall's Phrenology, as taught by Fowler, is only a rough sketch or meagre outline of the mental powers of man. The leading doctrines of Phrenology, namely that the brain is the organ of the mind and that different mental powers are located in different parts of the brain, have been placed beyond reasonable doubt; but that any Gallian Phrenologist has located correctly one-half the mental powers of man remains to be proved. Fowler has no doubt done much good in directing public attention to Physiology, Phrenology and the reign of Natural Law and for them and other useful labors for the elevation of humanity we thank him and "bid him God speed."

INVESTIGATOR.

CUBAN DIFFICULTIES.

Out of the Spanish revolution has arisen Cuban trouble. This would natural follow—Cuba being a colony belonging to Spain. No small share of Cuba's trouble may be charged to the United States, as they have permitted dilibustering bands openly to enlist with the avowed purpose of going to Cuba. The Herald of the 14th instant, says:—

A private letter from a prominent insurgent in Cuba states that the Revolutionary Junta in Havana has sworn to destroy the property of every individual who shall, over his signature, offer his life or wealth or protection in favour of the Government cause. In no other case shall property be attacked.

Recruiting for the Cuban expedition in this city, it is said, has ceased. Col. Gibbins has already enrolled 6,000 men, which is 1,500 more than he wants. He alleges that she whole command is to devolve upon a wealthy Havanese, who was famous as a military leader under Don Carlos and Maximilian, and who, so far, has furnished all the funds necessary. The intention is to annex Cuba to the Union. A public meeting is to be held in relation to the matter in the Cooper Institute soon.

Lersundi denounces the statement published in the New York journal of his having prohibited the American Consul from sending a de-patch by the Cuban cable, asking the American Government to send a squadron to Cuba, as a base falsehood, and gives the following as the true version of the affair:—

The American Consul wished to telegraph to Washington that Puerto Principe had revolted. I certain that the intelligence was untrue, informed the Consul of that fact, who immediately and voluntarily withdrew the despatch.

Lersundi has received despatches announcing the attempt to organize a filibustering expedition at New York and New Orleans against Cuba, and has taken precautionary measures to receive the invaders.

Spanish war steamers are cruising about the coast.

A NEW METHOD OF STOPPING WAR.—The workingmen of Europe have recently held at Brussels a Congress to consider the labor question. As we have already stated, the members found great difficulty in conducting their sessions, as some spoke in French others in English, and many in German. They, however, passed two resolutions. One declares that a war between France and England would be a civil war for the benefit of Russia. The other is even more remarkable. It advises all working men if war should break out, to cease at once all work, and it counts upon this action of the workmen to put a stop forever to the "scourge of the people, 'as war is denominated. The theory may be right, but the workingmen would find it impracticable.

KINGSTON ELECTIONS.

So far as heard from, on the 17th inst., the Liberals had elected 147 members, a gain of 30. The Conservatives have elected 62. Riots have occurred in Birmingham. The Elections in Belfast had been postponed in consequence of riots. There was a slight disturbance at Manchester.

PETERBORO LITERARY CLUB.—This evening there will be a public debate at the Club Rooms over the Royal Canadian Bank. Subject, "Has the Government of Napoleon III. been beneficial to the French nation." Leaders—Messrs. Dixon and Kidd. Reader—Mr. D. Haggart; Subject, "Tam O'Shanter." Essayist—Mr J. A. Hall. The entertainment will commence at 8 o'clock.

BOX LOST.—On Friday night, during the soiree at the Drill Shed, some person stole a valuable box, and a cloud—having quietly raised a window for that purpose. The owner is on the look out for thegs and he will gladly detect them wherever found. The thief would do well to return them to this office, that they may be given to their rightful possessor.

CURIOUS ITEMS.

There is probably nothing in the Public Accounts of the Province of Ontario more curious than certain items of subscription to a New Brunswick newspaper. In every one of the five departments and in the Executive Council office besides, this newspaper is subscribed for at a cost of $1, $2 per year for each, or $9 in the aggregate. It is not one of the leading papers of our sister Province, such as Ontario Ministers might possibly care to read. The favoured journal is the Union Advocate, a weekly started about a year ago somewhere along the proposed line of the North Shore railway. It is a sort of house organ for the Hon. Peter Mitchell, and fulfils its mission in that respect very painstakingly. But why are six copies of it wanted by the Government of Ontario? The weekly papers of this Province are not taken by the departments of the Local Government at all. Even for the Legislature, they are only taken for three months to cover the sitting of the House; and papers in various parts of the Province are refusing to take such three york-shillings orders from the Provincial Government. Why is the Union Advocate so much more valuable than the country papers of Ontario?

We have no doubt the good look of the New Brunswick paper is in some way a consequence of "the harmony" which is supposed to exist between the Local and Federal Governments. Mr. Mitchell is a member of the Dominion Government; and his claims to consideration are not to be ignored by the Local Governments. Consequently his organ gets $9 a year from the Treasury of Ontario. We wonder whether the indefatigable Minister of Marine came to Toronto, and procured these subscriptions himself, or simply permitted the use of his potent name. What a wonderful man, whom nothing escapes, from a newspaper subscription to the location of the North Shore Railway. We suggest that our Ontario newspapers, which can only get three york-shillings a year from the Ontario Government, employ two or three Dominion Ministers to canvass the Local Government on their behalf.—Globe.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers. 37

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now head it can ever twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (not the community of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25 cts per box.

OUR FORTIFICATIONS.—It is now nearly fifty years since our fortifications have been looked after in any way, we think it is now high time and that it behoves our government to put them in a proper state of defence, and have our Lakes and Rivers well protected, "one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; but while we are protesting ourselves against a foreign enemy we should not forget to fortify ourselves against bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, pains in the back and side, cholic, cholera morbus, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the most effectual medicine. Sold by all Dealers in Medicine, at 25 cents per bottle.

The price of provisions in 1868 is almost double of that of 1861, yet the remuneration of the laboring classes remains as it was in 1861. It is therefore difficult for a laborer to maintain himself and family, when from the same wages he must pay double for clothing—for groceries—for provisions—for everything except the great Shorhanese Remedy, for diseases of the throat, liver, lungs, &c., which the humanity of the Proprietors still keeps at $1 per bottle. For sale by all druggists.

NOT QUITE SO.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Those who will not use it will be the losers, their horse the sufferers, to avoid both use "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," and you will be satisfied with the result.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, expelling everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which the Heaves fills them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural, fine colour, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, invigorating the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Poetry.

DEATH IN THE STREET.

Look at the face, so old, so spare,
Bloodless, haggard, a ghost like face;
There are masses of grey, rough, tangled hair,
Showing he came from a hardy race.
Can it be true he once was young?
Can it be true he once was fair?
That his dark eyes laughed when a mother sang?
That a woman still keeps a lock of his hair.

Yellow as gold, glossy as silk,
Cut in the long, long years ago.
When his forehead was white and smooth as milk,
His thoughts like the sun'rodden snow;
Where he bathed in the brook, raced on the lea,
Caught small trout in the old mill-dam;
Chased the butterfly and the bee,
Played with the squirrel and the lamb.

Away, ye visions that pass! repass
Like clouds reflecting on the sea;
Like shadows over the summer grass,
Grim realities stops at me.
A dead man's face, a brutal crowd,
A roadway full of rain and mire;
Oh, God! let the lark and the summer cloud,
Be over me when I expire.

STIKE AT THE REAL CAUSE.—A wealthy gentleman, who for a long time had been complaining of sickness, sent one day, for his physician, and after detaining him some time with a minute description of his pains, aches, and nervous affections, summed up with these words:

"Now, doctor, you have bamboozled me long enough with your good-for-nothing pills and worthless draughts, they don't touch the real difficulty. I wish you to strike at the real cause of my ailments, if it is in your power to reach it."

"It shall be done" replied the doctor. And at the same moment he lifted his cane and demolished a bottle of brandy that stood on the table.

"Now then" continued the honest physician, "I have struck at the real cause of your ailments; beside the,' bottle,' and you will have far less need of my pills and draughts."

How many thousands are there like this rich invalid, whose fondness for the bottle confines them to their sick-rooms, in spite of the best physicians and remedies! Were all physicians to act as this one did, and banish the' bottle" from the sick-room, there would be far less sickness in the world to-day than there now is.

The use of intoxicating drinks to health produces disease, and their use in sickness, in most cases, prevents recovery.

HOW GOLD PENS ARE MADE.—Not every one who writes with a gold pen knows how they are made. Those which are commonly known as "diamond points" are tipped with iridium. This is found in small grains in platinum, slightly alloyed with this latter metal. In this form it is exceedingly hard, and well adapted to the gold penmaker. The gold for pens is alloyed with silver to about sixteen carats fineness, rooled into thin strips, from which the blanks are struck. The under side of the point is notched by a small circular saw, to receive the iridum doint, which is selected by the aid of a microscope. A flux of borax and a blow pipe secure it to its place. The point is then ground on a copper wheel with emery. The pen blank is next rooled to the requisite thinness by a mill of rollers especially adapted to the purpose, and tempered by blows from a hammer. It is then trimmed round the edges, stamped, and formed in a powerful press. The slit is next cut through the solid iridam point by means of a thin copper wheel, fed with the emery, and a saw extends the aperture along the pen itself.

A gentleman riding came to the edge of a morass which he considered not safe. Seeing a peasant lad he asked whether the bog was hard at bottom, 'O, yes, quite hard, replied the youth. The gentleman rode on but his horse began to sink. 'You rascal, shouted he,' did you not say it was hard at bottom?' 'So it is rejoined the rogue,' but you're not half way to it yet.'

A man with one eye having laid a wager with another of perfect vision, that he (the one-eyed person) saw more than the other, the bet was decided in favour of the first on the ground that he could see two eyes, in the face of his antagonist, whereas the the latter could see but one in the face of the first.

While a country, parson, was preaching the chief of the parishoners, sitting near the pulpit, was fast asleep, whereupon he said,- Now, beloved friends, I am in a great strait; for if I speak too softly those at the farther end of the church cannot hear me, and if I talk too loud I shall wake the chief man in the parish.'

A grief-stricken father in Iowa had the body of his little daughter, who had died and been buried in his absence, exhumed that he might have a last look at her loved face. The body was found turned upon its face in the coffin, with both little hands clutched in the hair—evidently buried alide.

Don't flatter yourself, young man, that a cardamon seed, a kernel of burnt coffee, a bit of flag root or lemon peel, a clove, or anything of that shallow sort, will disguise the nipper that has gone down your throat. The lady at your side suspects the trick and despises the cause of it.

Two distinguished philosophers took shelter under one tree during a heavy shower. After some time one of them complained that he felt the rain. 'Never mind,' replied the other, 'there are plenty of trees; when this one is wet through, we will go to the other.'

A timid gentleman met a bluff, burly doctor, who was more noted for the force than for the polish of his language, when the following colloquy ensued, 'Doctor, what shall I take for the ague?' 'The ague—have you got the ague?' 'No.' 'Well, get the ague first.'

A gentleman accidently stepping upon a lady's trailing dress, the other day, in Broadway, he politely raised his hat, and said, 'I beg your pardon, madam, but I did not suppose I was within a rod of you.

A company is being formed in London and Paris to irrigate the great desert of Sahara and restore it to fertility by means of artesian wells. That's a benificent project, but it will be an awful bore.

An editor, in discoursing upon the turning of a drunken political opponent out of office, says, 'we'll help roll that whiskey barrel out of doors, the third day of November next.

The difference between perseverance and obstinacy: —One is strong will—the other a strong won't.

Conceit in to nature what paint is to beauty: it is not only needless, it impairs what it would improve.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible to the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Nepanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE

CONSUMPTION!

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different remedies, but all without any good effect. Squire Peterman of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottles at once, with the Pills; so soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, chills, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER C. V. MILLER,
Earnestown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman, Peter C.V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

SUGAR-COATED.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

Poetry.

THE CHILDREN.

BY CHARLES DICKENS.

When the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And the school for the day is dismissed,
And the little ones gather around me,
O! the bliss of their merry embrace!
My neck is a tender enclosure,
O! the cushion that are boles of heaven,
Shedding sunshine of love on my face.

And when they are gone I sit dreaming
Of my childhood, too lovely to last:
Of love that my heart will remember,
While it wakes to the pulse of the past,
Ere the world and its wickedness made me
A partner of sorrow and sin;
When the glory of God was about me,
And the glory of gladness within.

O! my heart grows weak as a woman's,
And the fountains of feeling will flow,
When I think of the paths steep and stony,
Where the feet of the dear ones must go;
Of the mountains of sin hanging o'er them,
Of the tempest of fate blowing wild;
O! there's nothing on earth half so holy
As the innocent heart of a child!

They are idols of hearts and households;
They are angels of God in disguise;
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses;
His glory still gleams in their eyes.
O! those truants from home and from heaven,
They have made me more manly and mild!
And I know now, how Jesus could liken
The kingdom of God to a child.

Selections.

The Photographer's Story.

(From Lippincott's for October.)

I have long promised you, my friends, to tell you the story of my strange sitter. I do not think that I will ever have a better opportunity of doing so than to-night—Christmas night—especially as it has a slight flavor of the supernatural about it. So hand me the light, please—for my cigar, I see, has gone out—and draw your chair a little closer.

Five years ago—that is to say, in the Christmas season of 1862—I was not as prosperous as I am now, though I must say that I had every promise of the success which I have since attained. I had commenced business only a few months before, and my establishment was a small one, but it was a good, neighbourhood, No—Twenty Sixth st, and I had fitted it up as prettily and tastefully as my limited means would allow. There was a large and fashionable boarding house next door kept by a Mrs Hyde, a lady who belonged to the "upper ten" by right of birth, but who, having lost her, wealth in some one of the great financial crises, had undertaken to support herself in that manner. Her venture eventually proved successful; her house was always crowded, and I obtained many sitters from among her boarders. I did not take up my quarters there, however convenient as it would have been, for her terms were too high, so I contented myself with a more economical and less pretentious lodging.

In days past I had studied the art of painting in water colours, and though my performances in that line had proved artistic failures, I found that this knowledge would be very useful to me; I could color my pictures myself, and in a style very superior to that attempted in photographic establishments of the cheaper order. I soon had as much work as I could execute, and my customers were of a far better class than I had hoped, to attract. As the Christmas holidays approached, orders of course multiplied, and I was kept very busy, for the resources of my little place were but limited. About ten days before Christmas, a gentleman, who gave his name as "Captain Charles Conway, U.S.A.," called on me for the purpose of having his picture taken as a Christmas present to his wife. He was one of the handsomest men I had ever seen. He was tall and finely formed, with features and complexion of almost feminine perfection, large, expressive, violet eyes, and a moustache, and whiskers soft and golden as their silky luxuriance, as were also the clustering curls around his well shaped head. He wished to have two likenesses of himself—one a half sized head finished in India ink, and the other a small ivory type vignette, colored and finished as a miniature. He was intensely vain, as handsome men usually are, and he worried me so much about the accurate adjustment of his cravat, etc, that I felt like giving up in despair. At last he managed to satisfy himself respecting these important points, and the sittings took place. I had succeeded admirably; even my sitter professed himself satisfied after a long inspection of the negatives, from which however, he could have learned but little. He then made an agreement with me to have both pictures finished by Christmas eve, when he purposed calling for them, and then much to my delight departed.

The 20th of December was a fearful stormy day. A heavy snow storm prevailed all day, accompanied by violent gusts of wind, which tore and howled through the streets, blew down signs, turned umbrellas inside out, drove snow in the eyes of worried and bewildered pedestrians, and put a stop generally to much out-door travel. I was rather glad of the storm, for it kept visitors away, and gave me time to finish some of my holiday orders, which had fallen behind hand. I worked hard, therefore all the morning; and about two o'clock I was in the act of putting the last touches to Capt. Conways miniature, when a low monotonous voice behind me said:

'I wish to sit for a carte de visite.'

I startled and looked around. I was rather startled by the sudden and unexpected interruption, and the appearance of the speaker was not calculated to reassure me. There stood just behind my chair a young girl, seemingly about seventeen years of age, and in dress and general appearance one of the most singular looking beings I ever beheld. Providence had apparently intended her to be pretty, for she had large, clear, blue eyes, small, regular features, and a profusion of very fair hair. But her paleness was something perfectly extraordinary. Her face was as white as marble; there was not a tinge of color even in her lips which were slightly parted, so as to show the glistening teeth beneath. What rendered her pallor still more ghastly was a peculiar bluish tint which pervaded her complexion, and robbed it of every trace of vitality. Nothing about her face seemed alive except her great ghastly blue eyes. Her dress was as singular as her face. She wore neither bonnet nor shawl, and was attired in a long plaited robe of white cashmere, confined around her waist by a broad white ribbon. She had on white kid gloves, and held loosely between her fingers two or three half opened fans made of a single white camelia. Altogether, her appearance was sufficiently startling to half terrify and wholly astound me.

'I am afraid your dress will not take well,' I stammered out at last, 'white seldom does.'

'It is my only one,' was her answer.

I had nothing more to my; so I went to work at once to prepare the plate. When it was ready, I found my sitter already in the necessary attitude. Never had a Photographer a more motionless subject; the sitting was perfectly successful, and as I was carrying the plate into my inner room she spoke:

'When this picture is finished give it to Capt. Conway.'

I bowed hurriedly and said, "certainly," being in haste. When I returned my sitter was gone, and I might have fancied that the whole affair was a dream, had it not been for a crumpled greenback which lay upon the table.

I set to work the next day and painted off the photograph. It came out much better than I had anticipated, and was literally a startling likeness. But it had a most unpleasant effect, looking exactly as if it were the picture of a corpse, taken and propped up in a chair with the eyes open. It was a horrid idea, and to get rid of it I colored one of the pictures as carefully as possible, but without success. I could not banish the death-like look and the fixed stare of the eyes.

The day before Christmas Captain Conway called for his portraits. He was much pleased with them, and displayed them with great satisfaction to a gentleman who accompanied him—a Mr. Wyse, whom I knew slightly, and who appeared to listen with considerable impatience to his companion's self complacent speeches. While they were still examining the miniature, I put the carte de visite ordered by my strange sitter into an envelope, and offered them to Captain Conway.

'What may this be?' he asked, turning the little package over carelessly in his hand.

'A lady ordered these for you a few days ago.'

'A lady? Indeed!' he said, laughing, while he proceeded to draw the photographs from the envelope. The moment he looked at them his laughter ceased suddenly; he turned deadly pale and dashed the pictures violently to the ground.

'Who has dared to play such a trick?' he shrieked in a voice hoarse and almost inarticulate with rage. 'Who told you to give me those cursed photographs?'

'I really do not know, sir. The lady who sat for them did not leave her name.'

He staggered back a pace or two, and grew still paler, if that were possible.

'You do not mean to say that she sat for this picture a few days ago.'

'I do mean to say so. Four days ago—on the 20th of December.'

He gasped out some inarticulate words and fell heavily on the floor in a fainting fit.

'For Heaven's sake, sir,' I said to Mr. Wyse, as we bent together over the prostrate man, 'explain this mystery. Who is this lady?

The answer stunned me:

'Her name was Grace Marshall; she died nearly a year ago!'

Some months later, while I was spending my summer vacation with a friend who lived on Staten Island, I met with a distant relative of Miss Marshall, from whom I learned the following particulars:

Charles Conway was a member of one of the oldest families in New York—a family of English origin, of infinite pretension, and of unquestionable aristocratic descent, but lacking the wealth wherewith to support their dignity in appropriate style.—When the war of the rebellion first broke out young Conway joined the army, and by virtue of some political influence exercised by his family was made a Captain at once. But the hardships and dangers of a soldier's life were not much to his taste, and as the struggle seemed destined to be a protracted one, he took advantage of a slight wound, received in his first skirmish, to quit the service. Shortly after his return to New York he was introduced to a Miss Harwell, the only child and heiress of a wealthy New York merchant, whose already colossal fortune was rapidly expanding under the favorable influence of the war.—Clara Harwell was young and inexperienced; the handsome Captain, with his blue, dreamy eyes, soft voice and winning manner appeared to her to be the very perfection of manhood; while, on the other hand, he found her golden attractions quite irresistable, and wooed her with unfeigned fervor. Her heart was easily won; not so the consent of her father to their marriage. The handsome warrior was not the style of son-in-law which the sturdy old merchant coveted, and he followed up his rejection of Captain Conway's suit by the very decided and sensible step of taking his daughter abroad, to reside there till she should be freed from her infatuation. 'Out of sight, out of mind,' argued the shrewd father. But, unfortunately for the success of his scheme, Charles Conway was fully aware also of the influence exercised by absence and distance; and the next week after the Harwells sailed in the Persia for Liverpool he sailed in the City of London. He succeeded in obtaining an interview with Clara in London, and learning that Mr. Harwell intended to pass the coming winter in Florence, he shaped his plans accordingly.

The Harwells arrived in Florence; he followed them and took up his abode in a small hotel near their lodgings. Here he devoted himself to his pursuit of Clara; and she, fascinated by the romance, the difficulties, the mystery that lent so much charm to their assignation, was, or fancied herself to be more in love than ever. But the stolen interviews and the interchange of letters which made up the sum total of their intercourse, absorbed but a small portion of each day, and Captain Conway found time hang exceedingly heavy on his hands. He had no artistic tastes, and a day spent in the galleries of the Pitti and the Uffizi Palaces had amply sufficed to embrace their attractions. But 'Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do,' and the mischief was not slow in being provided.

At the hotel where he had taken up his quarters, there was staying an American family—a Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, with their eldest daughter, Grace, a lovely, fragile looking girl, about seventeen years of age. They were spending the winter in Italy, in the quiet hope that its warm climate and sunny skies might restore the health of their child, imparted as it was by the sharp winds and piercing cold of Maine, for their home was in Portland. But the malady which had fastened itself upon the poor girl had taken its worst form, and was hopeless from its very commencement, as the physicians who had recommended the European journey well knew. Save to the deluded eyes of her loving and hopeful parents, her days were numbered, so swift and fatal had been the ravages of consumption upon her delicate frame.

When she first met Captain Conway, however, one of the delusive improvements characteristic of that most deceptive disease had taken place, and she was brilliant with hope and happiness, and that hectic bloom which looks so like the flush of returning health. Beautiful, lively and intelligent, she was just the companion that Charles Conway needed to fill up the intervals of time which his courtship of Clara Harwell left vacant. He soon contrived to establish himself on an intimate footing with the Marshalls. He brought Mr. Marshall the American papers and the current magazines; he acted as interpreter for Mrs. Marshall when she sallied forth on some shopping expedition in search of Florentine mosaics, alabaster statuettes and old guipure lace; and he rode with Grace, read to her, sang to her, and talked to her on indifferent subjects, while his large blue eyes were eloquent of love. And she, poor girl, was radiantly happy, and dreamed of a future of restored health and wedded bliss, while her parents smiled approval, and were charmed to see her so well and joyous.

One morning, late in the month of February, he came to the apartments occupied by the Marshalls to announce to them his intention of going to Rome for a short time. He expected to be away about two weeks, he said—left some of Chopin's waltzes, which he wished Grace to learn before his return, and a volume of selections from the modern Italian poets for her perusal. Ten days later Mrs. Marshall received a letter from him, informing them that he was on the eve of departing for America. He hoped that he might soon see them in New York, and trusted that they might be there at the time of his wedding, which was to take place in May. 'Properly,' he wrote, 'you have not yet heard of my engagement to Miss Harwell. Parental opposition separated us for a time, but Mr. Harwell, finding that his daughter's affections were not to be coerced, has at last given his consent to our union, and I am the happiest of men. I know that my charming friend, Miss Grace, will rejoice to hear of my good fortune. Pray present my compliments to her, and tell her that I long to make her acquainted with my Clara, I know that they are destined to be very intimate friends some day. We sail next Saturday from Liverpool in the Scotia, and I will gladly take charge of any letters or parcels you may wish to send home, provided you forward at once.'

Such was the letter which dealt Grace Marshall her coup de grace. At the best she could not have lived long; the deadly malady had fastened itself with too cruel a certainty upon her delicate frame. But she might have been spared for some months longer to her doting parents—might have passed away calmly, peacefully and resigned, had Charles Conway never crossed her path. As it was, a wild desire possessed her to see his face once, more.—Amid the fever and weakness, and violent attacks of coughing which marked this final and fatal relapse of her illness, she made but one request, uttered but one cry: 'Let us go home; let me only see him once, just once again, before I die.' The physicians shook their heads, and predicted the worst effects from a sea voyage undertaken at that season of the year; but they all knew that the poor girl's condition was hopeless, and they finally united in counselling the unhappy parents to accede to her wishes.

They travelled by short stages to Germany, and then to Hamburg, where they embarked on one of the German steamships for America. Grace rallied so much during the first part of the voyage that there was every hope of her living to reach her native shores. But when the vessel was within twelve hours sail of New York, a storm arose; the violent rolling of the ship, was too severe for the enfeebled frame of the invalid, and brought on a fearful spasm of coughing, in which a blood vessel was ruptured, and Grace Marshall expired within sight of the lights of Sandy Hook. She was quiet and resigned at the last, and only mentioned Charley Conway's name to make one request concerning him. 'I want him to come to my funeral,' she whispered almost with her dying breath. 'He will remember me a little longer if he sees me in my coffin.' And Mr. Marshall, with clenched hands and scowling brow, swore that he should come, that he would make him come, did he dare to refuse.

But Captain Conway had no idea of refusing. He was too much a gentleman, too fond of having everything go smoothly and pleasantly, to do anything which might lead to a disagreeable state of affairs. He answered the curt, cold note in which Mr. Marshall requested him with Grace's last request and the wish of her family that it might be granted, with a charming letter of condolence, addressed to Mrs. Marshall, wherein he spoke so feelingly of his beautiful friend, of the pleasant hours he had passed in her society, and the grief that he felt at her loss, that the sorrowing parents would have felt half inclined to forgive him had they not looked upon him as the immediate cause of her death. And on the day of the funeral arrived and Grace Marshall's last wish was realized; Charles Conway came and looked on her as she lay in her coffin, clothed in a loose plaited robe of white cashmere, and with rosebuds and camellias in her waxen hands. He not being wholly marble, was really somewhat moved by the pitiful sight, and the face of the dead girl, whose last hours of life he had wantonly embittered, probably haunted him as the memory of her days of comparative health and beauty had never done. And this was the face which looked on him with such startling effect from the photograph that I had given him.

Now, I might end my story here and leave you all under the impression that a spectre sat to me for its photograph. But my story has a sequel, and I prefer the more real, but less startling denouement.

One day in the following autumn, one of Mrs. Hyde's boarders, a young physician named Dr. Hale, came to my establishment for the purpose of having some old daguerreotypes copied. After settling price, size and other necessary preliminaries, he took up the book of specimens which lay upon the table and commenced to turn over the leaves. At the last he came to the photograph of my mysterious sitter.

'Why, this is Miss Marshall,' he exclaimed in surprise. 'I did not know that she had ever had her photograph taken.'

'Did you know her?' I asked.

'Certainly I did,' was the reply. 'She boarded with Mrs. Hyde all last winter, and I was called in to attend her in two of her attacks, by the maiden aunt who has charge of her.'

'I thought she was dead!' was my involuntary exclamation.

'Her twin sister, Grace, died about a year ago, Julia Marshall, the original of this picture, is alive at present, and as well as she ever will be in this world. She boarded at Mrs. Hyde's all last winter to be under medical treatment, but no physician ever has cured, or ever will cure epilepsy. When she left New York last March to return home, she was not one particle better than when she came.'

Thus simply and naturally was the mystery explained.

During a subsequent conversation with Dr. Hale, I learned the following particulars:—

Julia and Grace Marshall were, as he had before stated, twin sisters, and resembled each other during their childhood, as closely as twins usually do. When Julia was about six years of age, she was seized with convulsive attacks, which proved to be epilepsy in its worst form. All that medical skill could effect was tried, but without avail. The malady remained unchecked, and the paroxysms soon became so frequent and so violent as to necessitate the entire seclusion of the invalid from the world. She was placed under the care of a maiden aunt, Mrs. Marshall's sister, who resided in Gorham, Maine, and there though she was within easy reach of her family, she was entirely withdrawn from observation; so that few save most intimate friends of the Marshall family were aware of the existence of this sorely afflicted daughter.—As years rolled on Julia grew in stature and intellect, but the fearful disease with which she was afflicted her brain, and so warped without destroying her mind that, without being actually insane, she exhibited many of the peculiar traits of insanity. Prominent amongst these was a taste for malicious mischief, joined to a great degree of cunning. She had loved her sister very dearly, had seen and wept over her lifeless form as she lay arrayed for the grave, and had overheard her parents bitter comment on the conduct of Charles Conway, and the last request made by her sister concerning him. She frequently announced her intention of giving him a lesson some day, and certainly she had chosen an effectual method of doing so. But why she had chosen that particular method of course it was impossible to say. Probably from the window of her boarding house she had seen Captain Conway enter my establishment, and had then conceived the idea which she afterward so cleverly carried into execution. Her ghastly appearance and the bluish, corpse-like hue of her complexion, which had so astounded me, and so aided in carrying out the delusion, were due partly to her disease, and partly to a medicine used in its treatment—a preparation of nitrate of silver, which lodges in the tissues of the skin and imparts to it a permanent bluish tint.

I dont know if Captain Conway ever learned the truth respecting my ghostly sitter. I certainly took no trouble whatever to inform him of it. 'Let him,' I thought, imagine that the ghost of Grace Marshall did really thus come back to terrify him. It may do him good; it may learn him a lesson. But I do not think it did, for I hear that Captain Conway is at present one of the most notorious flirts in New York.

HINTS TO FARMERS.

Don't buy a piano for your daughter while your sons need a plow.

Don't let your horses be seen standing much at the tavern door; it don't look right.

Don't give the merchant a chance to due you. Prompt payments make independent men.

Keep your fences, especially line fences; they promote good feelings among neighbors.

A decent, substantial clothing for your children makes them think better of themselves, and keep the doctor away.

Don't starve your land, if you do you will grow poor.

Don't buy patent rights to sell again.

Don't become surety for him who waits for the Sheriff.

THE UNEXPECTED SON.

One Summer afternoon, Mr. Malcom Anderson arrived with his family at his native town. Putting up at the little inn, he proceeded to dress himself in a suit of minor clothes, and then walked out alone. By a by-path he well knew, and then through a shady lane, dear to his young, heart-aching days, all strangely unchanged, he approached his mother's cottage. He stopped for a moment on the lawn outside, to curb down the heart that was bounding to meet that mother, and to clear his eyes of a sudden mist of happy tears. Through the open window he caught a glimpse of her sitting alone at her spinning-wheel, as in the old time. But alas, how changed!—Bowed was the dear form, once so erect, and dimmed the eyes, once so full of tender brightness, like dew-soaked violets.—But the voice, with which she was crooning softly to herself was still sweet and there was on her cheek the same lovely peachbloom of twenty years ago.

At length he knocked, and the door remembered voice called to him in a simple old fashioned way—'Come, ben!' (come in.) The widow rose at the sight of a stranger, and courteously offered him a chair. Thanking her in an assumed voice, somewhat gruff, he sank down as though wearied, saying that he was a wayfarer, strange to the country, and asking the way to the next town. The twilight favored him in his little ruse; he saw that she did not recognize him, even as one she had ever seen. But after giving him the information he desired, she asked him if he was a Scotchman by birth. 'Yes, madam,' he replied; 'but I have been away in foreign parts many years. I doubt if my own mother would know me now, though she was very fond of me before I went to sea.'

'Ah, mon! it's little ye hea about mithers, gin ye think me. I can tell ye there is na mortal memory like theirs,' the widow somewhat warmly replied; then added:—'And whaur hae ye been for me long a time, that ye hae lost a' the Scotch frae your speech?'

'In India—in Calcutta, madam.'

'Ah, then, it's likely ye hea something o' my son, Mr. Malcom Anderson.'

'Anderson,' repeated the visitor, as if striving to remember. 'There may be many of that name in Calcutta; but is your son a rich merchant, and a man of about my size and age, with something such a figure-head?'

'My son is a rich merchant,' she replied proudly, 'but he is younger than you by many a year, and begging your pardon, sir, far handsomer. He is tall and straight, wi' hands and feet like a lassie's, he had brown curley hair, nae think and gloomy! and cheeks like a rose, and a brow like the snow, and the blue een, wi' a glint in them, like the light of the evening star!—Na, na, ye are no like my Malcom though ye are a guid enough by, I dinna doubt, and a decent woman's son.'

Here the masquerading merchant considerable taken down, made a movement as though to leave, but the hospitable dame stayed him, saying: 'Gin ye hae travelled a' the way frae India, ye canna be tired and hungry. Bide a bit and eat and drink wi' us. Marjory! come doon, and let us eat on the supper!'

The two women soon provided quite a tempting repast, and they all three sat down to it—Mrs. Anderson reverently asked a blessing. But the Merchant could not eat. He was only hungry for his mother's kisses—only thirsty for her joyful recognition; yet he could not bring himself to say to her—'I am your son.' He asked himself, half grieved, half amused—'Where are the unerring, natural instincts I have read about in poetry and novels?'

His hostess seeing he did not eat, kindly asked if he could suggest anything he would relish. 'I thank you, madam,' he answered; it does seem to me that I should like some oatmeal porridge, such as mother used to make, if so be you have any.'

'Porridge!' repeated the widow. 'Ah, ye mean parritch. Yes, we hae a little left frae our dinner. Gie it to him, Marjory. But, man, it's cauld.'

'Never mind. I know I shall like it, he rejoined, taking the bowl, and beginning to stir the porridge with the spoon. As he did so, Mrs. Anderson gave a slight start, and bent eagerly towards him. Then she sank back in her chair with a sigh, saying, in answer to his questioning look—'Ye minded me o' my Malcom, then—just in that way he used to stir his parritch—giving it a whirl and a flirt. Ah! gin ye were our Malcom,' my poor laddie!'

'Weel, then, gin I were your Malcom,' said the merchant, speaking for the first time in the Scottish dialect, and in his own voice: 'or gin your braw young Malcom were no brown, and bald, and grey, and bent, and old, as I am, could you welcom him to your arms, and love him as dear auld long syne? Could you, mither?'

All through this touching little speech the widow's eyes had been glistening, and her breath came fast; but at that word, 'mither,' she sprang up with a glad cry, and tottering to her son, fell almost fainting on his breast. He kissed her again and again—kissed her brow, and her lips, and her hands, while the big tears slid down his bronzed cheeks; while she clung about his neck and called him by all the dear old pet names, and cried to me in him all the dear old young looks. By-and-by they came back—or the ghost came back. The form in her embrace grew comelier; love and joy gave to it a second youth, stately and gracious; the first she then and there buried deep in her heart—a sweet, beautiful, peculiar memory. It was a moment of solemn resurrection, in which she gave up the fond maternal illusion she had cherished so long. Then looking up steadily into the face of the middle-aged man' who had taken its place, she asked: 'Where has ye left the wife and bairns?

'At the inn, mother. Have you room for us all at the cottage?'

'Indeed I hae twa good spare rooms, wi' large closets, well stocked wi' linen I hae been spinning an' weaving a' these long years for ye both, and the weans.'

'Well mother dear, now you must rest,' rejoined the merchant, tenderly.

'No, no, I dinna care to rest till ye lay me down to tak' my lang rest. There'll be time enough between that day the re-surrection, to fau'd my hands in idleness.—Now 'twould be unseemhome. But go, my son, and bring me the wife—I hope I will like her; and the bairns—I hope they will like me."

I have only to say, that both the good woman's hopes were realized. A very happy family built down in prayer that night, and many nights after, in the widow's cottage, whose climbing roses and woodbines were but outward signs and types of the sweetness and blessedness of the love and peace within.—Little Pilgrim.

SUICIDE YESTERDAY MORNING—A WOMAN CUTS HER THROAT.—Yesterday morning, about 5 o'clock, a woman named Ellen Murphy, the wife of a shoemaker who resides on Duke street, put an end to her life by cutting her throat with a razor she had slept in the same bed with her husband, and the latter missing her about the hour mentioned, got up to look for her, and on going into the yard found her lying on the floor of the outhouse, with with her head hanging out of the door. A razor was in her hand and she was bleeding profusely from a deep wound in her throat. The husband immediately ran into the street for assistance, when some of the neighbors sent for Dr. Riddell, who, with Drs. DeGrassi and Ross, were soon on hand. On examination the cut was found to have commenced immediately under the left ear, and after completely severing the windpipe and œsophagus terminated just before reaching the carotid artery. The windpipe was also slit perpendicularly and the throat was frightfully gashed. Dr. Riddell, with the assistance of the husband of the unfortunate woman, carried her into the house and sewed up the wound. She was by this time able to speak and in the presence of Father Lee, acknowledged that she had committed the deed herself. Everything that was possible was done to save her life, but in vain, for after a great deal of suffering she expired about nine o'clock. For some time lately she had been in a rather nervous state of mind, and it was feared by her friends that she would do herself some injury. A short time ago her husband was about to sell some of his property, when she threatened to make away with her life.—Globe

A BISHOP DEFIED.—A case of disobedience to episcopal authority has lately occurred in Brighton, England, more glaring than that of Mr. Hubbard, of Westerly. Rev. J. Purchas, director of St. James chapel, has been conducting ritualistic service of an extreme type. The bishop of Chichester at last summoned resolution to inhibit him from officiating. But, instead of meekly submitting to the godly admonition of his bishop, on the next Sabbath he ostentatiously repeated his offence. The services were unusually gorgeous and histrionic. A procession of cassocked boys, carrying lighted candles in their hands, filed into the choir, followed by a long line of choristers and other assistants—"acolytes, thurifer, crucifer, banner-bearer, ceremoniarius," etc.,—the two officiating priests, Rev. J. Purchas and his curate, bringing up the rear. Mr. Purchas was vested in light colors, and wore a cap, on which gems, probably crystals, seemed to glitter." The incense was kindled, and presently clouds of scented smoke, which shut out Mr. Purchas and curate from the gaze of the curious, began to ascend. Then the service began, not with "When the wicked man turneth," or any other passage of Scripture appointed to be read, but with a procession in which the aforesaid cassocked boys—acolytes, thurifer, etc.,—marched round the aisles, the incense-bearer swinging his censer and the choristers chanting a hymn. The procession having reached the chancel, "matins" commenced, and there were usual genuflexions, vestment-changings, genuflexions, and incense customary in ritualistic churches. When the matins were brought to a close, "high celebration" followed, and this service was most elaborately performed.

The O'Donoghue met his constituents at Tralee on the 28th ult. He defended his opposition to Fenianism, as being a conspiracy of a wild and mischievous character. He declared that he shrank from the Fenian programme, and abhorred many of its views as anti-Irish, and would resist them to the last drop of his blood. He proclaimed his full approval of Mr. Gladstone's policy. O'Neil, on the other hand, condemns Gladstone and supports Fenianism. Which loves Ireland most, the Irish-Yankee swindler who lives at his ease in New York, or the true Irishman who remaining at home, fights the battles of his country in the field where alone victory can be won and with the only weapons that can succeed?

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—On saturday evening an accident of an unusual character occured on the Grand Trunk Railway. As the train coming east was nearing Guelph, one of the lamps in a passenger car fell to the floor, and was broken, and in a moment the car was in flames. A scene of terrible consternation ensued among the passengers, who, however, were fortunate enough to escape into the other car without injury. As quickly as possible the train was stopped, and the flames extinguished' though not before the car was completely gutted. The accident delayed the train nearly an hour.—Guelph paper

Within four hour's ride of Montreal, by rail, is a colony of from twenty thousand to twenty-five thousand Highlanders. The county of Glengarry, on the eastern frontier of Upper Canada, is full of them. In back settlements they retain their ancient language, sing their Gaelic songs, and have their Gaelic preaching. About half of them are Catholics and half Protestants. The Glengarry men are renowned for their size and strength. It is said that the townships of Kenyon and Lochiel alone could turn out a thousand Highlanders—not a man of them under six feet in his stockings.

A remarkable subsidence of the waters of the Baltic took place recently. In sixteen hours the sea sank over three feet below its normal point; and then, rising rapidly, exceeded its ordinary level by a foot. As to the cause of the phenomenon, nothing is known; but the supposition is that a strong north-east wind drove the waters towards the Swedish, Danish, and Prussian coasts.

PARLIAMENT OF ONTARIO.

SECOND SESSION.

Several bills of great importance to the country are being prepared and discussed in the present session of Parliament.

The Jury Laws, Assessment and Municipal Laws, the holding of County Courts and Courts of Quarter Sessions, Registration of Births, Education, and a number of other matters are all receiving some attention.—A bonus to the Ontario Ship Canal is asked for in the way of a grant of land. Another grant of land is asked for towards aiding in constructing the Peterboro and Haliburton Wooden Railway. The subject of grants to Denominational Colleges is also revived.

Mr. Richards, in his mineral bill, proposes that royalties, taxes and duties on ores and minerals be abolished; that the proprietors of private lands may mine for gold and silver for their own benefit; that the unoccupied Crown Lands shall be free for explorations for minerals and for mining purposes.

The Grammar Schools are likely to undergo some change in their working at the recommendation of Dr. Ryerson, but no bill has yet been introduced on this subject. One proposition is to establish high Schools in some places where Grammar Schools now are, and a change in the preliminary examinations previous to promotions to those high Schools. This the Chief Supt. considers necessary to prevent the funds intended for Grammar School work being applied to Common School work. The Grammar School Inspector's report shows that in not a few of the rural Grammar Schools, pupils have been admitted who should still be in the Common School. But surely this is no argument that they should be exchanged for high Schools in which the very same evil might exist, unless the Inspectors exercise carefulness in admitting pupils. The subject of county Superintendents has also been discussed, and the committee on education have agreed to make this a feature in the new Bill. Girls will no doubt be allowed to resume their places in the Grammar Schools. There appears to be entire unanimity among the representatives from every section of the country on this subject, and properly so. Let girls as well as boys have the advantages of attending the principals' classes, and if it be thought unwise for girls to study Latin and Greek, let the Grammar School regulations be formed to suit the wants of the Province and not to suit some effete theory. Dr. Ryerson has recommended that a department of Instruction be instituted, but the difficulty of this will be the entrance of political squabbles into matters of education and appointments.

The nomination of Superintendents is to be vested in County Councils, but the appointment in the Governor in Council.

We referred before to the act to do away with certain holdings of County Courts and Quarter Sessions, and the attendance of Jurors. It is proposed to dispense with two of the Quarter Sessions Courts, and it is also proposed that any case that may be tried as any County Court may also be tried in a Superior Court, without any additional expense, so that suitors may go from one court to the other at the same costs. Jurors, too, are not to be necessary in civil cases unless demanded in the pleadings, and even when a jury has been summoned in a particular case, the parties thereto can afterwards agree to have it tried by the Judge.

There is also to be a law for registration of births, imposing penalties for neglecting to do so. The notice to be given to the Township Clerk. There is an infinite number of private bills, those concerning this County have already been mentioned.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.—We have been requested to state that the annual sermon will be delivered on Sabbath, 29th November, 1868, at 6.30, P. M., by Rev. J. M. Roger, one of the Society's Chaplains.

DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGES.

The advocates of Sectarian Colleges have not been idle during the interim of the first and second sessions of the Legislature of Ontario. They have resorted to the somewhat Jesuitical plan of completing their workings, until it would be next to impossible to meet them in their entrenchments. Not until about two days before the meeting of the House, was there the least activity in the matter. So quiet were they that the public generally were given up to the idea that the sects would accept their position and go to work and endow their Colleges by subscription. But all at once petitions are carried round by the Ministers of those churches. Of course, who could deny the ministers, who could refuse his name to a glib oily-tongued clerician, and then giving his name costs nothing. We can point to names on the petitions from Peterboro in favor of Denominational College support from the public chest, obtained in this way: could not refuse. And then they are so cunningly worded that the aid is for "superior education," really, as if all education out of those sectarian colleges is inferior. We are glad to learn that men were found who would not please even the ministers to put their names to those petitions; Methodists and Presbyterians, too, who believe in every denomination supporting its own free and educating its own clergy; men who have honesty and pluck enough to say, we are able and willing to educate our own ministers; let other denominations do the same.

The advocates of sectarian grants never lose time to consider the position they wish to retain or continue. For many years the cry of Upper Canada was that their revenue was being eaten up in support of colleges to which they would not send their sons or their daughters. Lower Canada Colleges that taught doctrines which the majority of Upper Canadians held to be false. Now that they want a little for their own purposes, they are willing to grant those whom they despise, and whose teachings they detest, some also. O, it's no harm to give one-half of our money for the propagation of error; the other half will be put to counteract it, and no evil will follow.

Just as well might the people of Britain give their half million of pounds sterling to get idols manufactured for the pagans of the Cannibal Islands, and console themselves with the idea that they gave another half million to send missionaries to the same Cannibals. It is perfectly astounding to think that men are so blind to inconsistencies that they do not see whither their acts lead them.

There is a marked change, however, in the mode of asking; the plea formerly was, for a certain college; now it is for "superior education." O, no, not for a college, not for Queen's or Regeopolis or Victoria or St. Michael's. Those names would not take with the people, and hence the plea is for "superior education." From whom does the cry come? from the small sects who might reasonably put forth their pleas of inability; nay, verily, but from the wealthy denominations, and those that can boast of their tens of thousands of members and hundreds of thousands of adherents. What do they ask? That Roman Catholics shall give of their money to support Protestant sectarian colleges—a direct acknowledgement that Protestantism cannot or will not support itself. They cannot see that this is the position to which they have reduced themselves.

There is, however, good grounds to believe that their efforts will prove ineffectual.—John Sandfield McDonald and Colleagues have already given their views of the matter in the act of last session, and they will not stultify themselves by withdrawing their acts of last year. Petitions should be sent in from every section of the country to strengthen their hands, and to show that the people of Canada are willing to support just and wise Legislation.

No Military Display for the Lieut.-Governors.

The Duke of Buckingham and Chandos is fast rendering himself a subject of contempt to Canadians. Our readers will remember his dabbling in Canadians titles and order of precedence so uncalled for and so little respected that the Ontario Legislature completely ignores—and so will the entire Dominion, ere long, except a few of the snobocracy who would ape anything that proceeds from a Duke or an Earl.

This disrespect of the Dukes' orders has led to his procuring an order from the Horse Guards, "that no military display will be allowed in connection with Lieut. Governors. If they retain "Excellency" as a title there will be no "military" present on State occasions." Poor Duke, what aplees a Duke can manifest. Will such creatures never learn that in Canada people have a right to settle their own local matters, and will call their public servants what names to them seem best. The Duke also sought to establish spiritual as well as temporal titles. The clergy of the Church of England must rank above other clergymen. The Toronto Telegraph wisely claims no more for them than for the ministers of any other denomination, they deserve no less as a body; but the apostle Paul set the example "respect for their work." The Duke thought we had Church and State here. It will soon go in Britain too. The Duke of Chandos will not long be in his present position; a wiser man will take his place ere long, and he will have to retire to reconsider some scheme whereby he can establish titles in the next world, we suppose.

SHERIFF'S FEES.

The Judges lately changed the tariff of Sheriff's fees, in almost every instance increasing them. The Judges based their action on the grounds of strong complaints throughout the Province that Sheriff's were inadequately paid. The Government, however had taken the matter out of the Judges' hands and returned to the old rates, and are also about to establish the fees by act of parliament. There is no doubt that the wisdom of the people of late years in keeping out of litigation has so materially lessened the income of the Sheriffs, that at present the office does not afford sufficient income to support their position, and therefore the action of the Judges may be necessary. It is better for the people to have an act of parliament settling those matters and then there will be less room for fault-finding. Lawyers require to be placed under legal restraints in the matter of fees, as well as other men.

The city of Toronto is about to re-unite with the County of York. An act is being passed this session to enable them to do so. There should be a clause in the Municipal Act to permit re-unions whenever desired by the Councils of Towns and cities and counties.

FIREMEN'S ANNUAL DINNER.

The newly elected officers of Protection Company No. 1, gave their annual supper to the members thereof and friends on Friday evening last in the Commercial House. "Mine host" Capon, as usual, spread in his best style, and did all in his power to render the evening pleasant. About forty were present; O'Donnell presided; Capt. Gibbs, of the Hose, occupied the 1st vice chair, and Mr. B. Hall the 2nd vice chair. It is enough to say that ample justice was done to the good things provided—then toast, speeches, songs and mirthfulness followed.

Capt. O'Donnell gave the usual loyal and patriotic toasts: "The Queen," "The Prince and Princess of Wales, &c.," "The Administrator of the Dominion" and "The Lieut.-Governor of Ontario," were duly given and received with a right good will.

Between which were sung the "National Anthem," "Heigh ho tantivy" and the "Milking Pail," by Messrs. Henderson, F. Hall and Metheral, in turn.

Then followed the "Army and Navy" and and "Volunteers of Canada," to which Col. Poole responded. He referred to the change in the Militia law of the country, remarking that the system had undergone considerable change; the volunteering principle was about to be done away with in a great degree, and if the necessary number of men could not be induced to volunteer they would be drafted. He, (Col. Poole) however, thought there would be no need for a resort to the draft, as he believed there was loyalty and patriotism enough in Canadians to make them ready and willing to enrol themselves for the defence of their country.

Dr. Kincaid also responded, and thanked them cordially on behalf of the volunteers, —and as one of them—for the manner in which the toast had been given and received.

Capt. Gibbs then gave the "Mayor and and Corporation of the Town of Peterboro." In the absence of the Mayor, who was unable to be present, Councillor Doherty returned thanks. He paid a well merited tribute to the zeal and energy of the Firemen in doing their duty and to the general spirit of satisfaction that was expressed in regard to the way the Fire Company acted when necessity called them out.

"The Corporation of Ashburnham" also received a due share of attention, and in the absence of any of the honorable body, Mr. Stratton, as a citizen, answered for them, in few words.

Mr. R. Hall gave "Our Guests." Mr. Metheral sung "Britannia Rules the Waves." Dr. Kincaid in responce, said: He thanked them for the kind manner in which the toast had been proposed and the hearty reception given to it. Few annual festivals he so willingly and gladly availed himself of the invitation to attend. He was proud to be present at their annual dinner, and would have been glad to see more of the citizens present to cheer and encourage the Firemen. The Firemen deserved the respect of the people of Peterboro, for the willing, courageous and perilous discharge of their duties at all times; and they deserve the respect of all the people as citizens. A finer set of men it would be difficult to get together, and he hoped that Protection Company No. 1, would long remain in its present efficient state. He, (Dr. K.) regretted that more was not done to encourage the Company, but he hoped that the people would be aroused to do their duty to the Firemen, and to make sufficient provisions to enable them to discharge their onerous duties for the common weal.

Councillor Doherty followed: He endorsed all the Dr. and other speakers had said of the Firemen, and concluded by thanking them, as a guest, for the manner in which the toast had been received.

The "Medical Profession" being given from the chair

Dr. Kincaid was again loudly called for. He regretted that no other gentleman of the profession was present to do the toast more justice. He believed they were truly sincere in giving the toast, and he was glad, too, that the profession occupied an honourable position; but he thought more could be done if there was union amongst its members; they could then properly protect themselves against the introduction of humbugs and quacks, who now take no small portion of their practice. He was sorry to say that the profession, in town, was in a dilapidated condition; there was no organization; if united, there would be less slander and back-biting—it would be frowned down; if there was union, humbuggery would have to cease, and quacks leave the Dominion for the more genial soil of "Uncle Sam's" territory. The Doctor sat down amidst great applause.

"The Mercantile and Mechanical Interest" being given by Dr. Kincaid, was responded to by Mr. R. Hall, Mr. P. Hamilton, Mr. Doherty and Lieut.-Col. Poole.

Mr. Hamilton remarked that the Mechanics were doers, not speakers, and from this arose their great success; it was by doing that they had come to occupy a place second to none in the world. Without mechanics where would be our railroads, telegraphs, steamboats, and the mighty ships that protect the British Empire? In Peterboro, too the mechanic held an honorable place, and by continuing to do it, would become more honorable still.

Lieut.-Col. Poole was proud to belong to the class of Mechanics, and a poor world it would be without them; it would stand still; Canada would not be what it is, nor Peterboro so prosperous.

The "Press" and the "Ladies" were next duly honored, when, after a few Volunteer toasts, the party broke up, very much pleased with the Firemen, with each other, and with everybody, we trust. It is worthy of remark that cold water was quite a favorite beverage during the evening, and very little strong drink indulged in.

Almost a Crisis.

The Globe of the 24th instant, says that there is such strong pressure being brought to bear on the Ministry, on the Sectarian Grants, that there is almost a crisis in the Government. J. Sandfield, however, remains firm.

The member for west Peterboro took a flying trip home on Saturday last, during which he was boasting loudly that John Sandfield would be defeated on this question. This is the attachment to the ministry—a readiness and a willingness to vote them out of office unless the sects get satisfied. We cannot look on the combination, on any combination of opposite principles, in a favorable light, and little incidents are cropping out now and then that show the lack of prudence in entering into them. But on what ever subject J. Sandfield and his placemen friends fall out, let us hope that on this he will prove true and firm. He must see now that he has chosen bad company indeed. Had he formed a one party cabinet, it would have been something like honorable and manly, but boys fought and ended with uncleanness.

The Effect of Calumny and Arithmetic.

It gibes us much pleasure to compare from the announcements made in our columns, today, that the St. Andrew's Society of Peterborough is still in flourishing existence. It may be said that in our cosmopolitan Dominion a Society should be formed, to include all our people, and that all traces of our English, Scotch and Irish origin should be obliterated as speedily as possible.

We reply to those who hold this view, that our interests tie us to the land of our adoption and the danger is that we will too soon forget those hallowed associations of the past that cause us to cherish as Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotchmen, the land of our birth and of our fathers. The direct object of the St. Andrew's Society is one of benevolence towards the destitute—a sufficient reason alone for its continuance; but there are other benefits of an indirect kind arising from the association of countrymen in a society of this character. We trust to see the Peterboro St. Andrews Society receive a liberal addition to its membership this year, and hope that under the efficient presidency of its chief officer, its annual dinner may be—as that such gatherings have always been—thoroughly successful. We hoped to have seen St. Andrews day celebrated by a "sociable" of some kind to which ladies might have been invited, but we are informed that after making every effort to accomplish this end the Committee were obliged to abandon the project, and it became at last a question of a dinner or no gathering at all. Under these circumstances it is not surprising that the dinner was resolved upon. The abandonment of the festival celebration would certainly be disastrous to the Society.

We chronicle with gratification the Society's donation of $20 to the Home.

The Grammar Schools and Upper Canada College.

The discussion of this question has extended to every portion of the Province, and excepting Toronto, the universal cry is—return the College funds to their rightful owners—the Grammar Schools. The College, therefore, is doomed to take its place among the Grammar Schools and receive its portion in proportion to the work it does—that is, according to the average attendance. That is what should be done. It has long enough enjoyed its unjust gains.

Whelan was taken to Toronto on Monday, on a writ of error, and brought before the Judges of the Court of Queen's Bench, in Toronto, to see whether there is sufficient reason to grant a new trial. John Hilliard Cameron appeared for the condemned man. There were great crowds outside trying to get a sight at him, but many of them missed it. He appeared quite easy during the investigation; he is now in the care of the Sheriff of the County of York; a Turnkey stops with him all the time, and great care taken that he does not escape nor be allowed means of depriving the cord of its due. The case will be argued on Monday. Our readers no doubt remember the cause of the application for a new trial. During the empannelling of the Jury for the trial, John Hilliard Cameron challenged ten Jurors peremptorily, that is, merely objected to them. He then challenged one Benjamin Sparks for "cause," alleging that Mr. Sparks had expressed himself against the prisoner, Whalen. This arose from Mr. Sparks having at some time said, "that from what he had read in the newspapers he believed him guilty." The Counsel for the Crown denied the right of prisoner's Counsel to challenge "for cause" until the panel was exhausted, and the presiding Judge—Justice Richards, ruled against John Hilliard Cameron. On this slender hope that the Judges will grant a new trial because of this ruling, Whalen is now in Toronto. It is perfectly right that Mr. Cameron should do all in his power to legally acquit Whelan, but if on such a quibble, a murderer should be allowed to escape the punishment due to his crime, we can only say that it should be beneath the dignity of the Judges to grant the petition of the writ.

The Commercial Bank, N. B., suspended payment about two weeks ago. The Cashier, Mr. Geo. P. Sancton, having left suddenly and at the time left liabilities to the amount of $90,000. Since that the St. John's Bank has suspended payment. Mr. Scovil, an agent of the St. Stephen's Bank, has failed and in consequence the Bank is in trouble, the Dominion Government has offered to advance money to the New Brunswick Government to prevent embarrisment growing out of the failure of the Commercial Bank.

In to-days issue the Trustee of S. S. No. 12, Otonabee, offer a reward of $50 for the conviction of parties who threw down a new School House in course of erection in that section. The offering of such a reward casts a suspicion that some party is considered guilty of throwing down the building. We could hardly suppose this possible, but as there has been considerable ill feelings generated over the "Site" of the House. Suspicions are to the effect that it was helped down.

DENOMINATIONAL GRANTS.—A few days ago we posted some copies of a petition against Denominational Grants, to a few friends, we solicit their attention to them and hope that they will get a number of names in each case, and forward as soon as possible to Mr. Blake, M. P. P., Toronto, or to this office.

PHOTOGRAPHY.—We have received some very finely executed Photographs from Mr. Sproule's gallery. Mr. Sproule has gone to considerable expense in fitting up his Studio, and is prepared to produce life like pictures of all who may favour him with a sitting.—His gallery is on Hunter street, formerly "Ewings," Give him a call.

The Toronto Telegraph says that the Bank of Montreal issues provincial notes in Toronto, payable at Halifax, and then will not receive them unless at four per cent discount. Farmers and others would, therefore, do well to see where their bills are made payable, and not take any payable at Halifax unless they intend sending them there.

LADY'S MAGAZINE.—Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine for December has been received. It contains a very nice colored Fashion Plate besides numerous other plates of interest to the Ladies. This magazine is one of the best of its class, and is largely patronized. The literary part is generally very readable and this number is fully equal to any of them.

The "Irish Canadian" and the Member for Peterboro West.

We invite attention of the Catholic electors of [illegible] to the following extract from the Irish Canadian of the 18th inst., in reference to the member for West Peterboro. They will remember that he made a speech [illegible] and that he made a remark [illegible] that he would probably to pass [illegible] that the government should amend with a stroke of the pen the amount due for Lands. He could not allow this to pass. Such speeches were calculated to foster the life of the expense of the hard-working man. All the people in this country lived under the same [illegible] if cash became poor and the other rich, it would be no consequence of their own and on the one hand, and of idleness on the other. Now, if that was to be the rule, and if that was to be the way settlers were to be encouraged, then all he had to say was that the bona settlers were encouraged the better. In Peterborough, he was proud to say, the same notices had been issued to settlers at his own solicitation, as in other Counties, and the course adopted had been cheerfully received. He advocated the forfeiture of lands owing taxes, at once for he was able to pay the amount, but would not do so unless [illegible]. It was startling to see the complacency with which gentlemen took to themselves the credit of advocating the Mining Bill, but he could not remain any gentleman on either side doing so. He concluded by stating his determination to support the Government."

Monaghan side of the river, and if this Council would be justified in leasing said road as any other public road in the Municipality, or whether reserved for other purposes.

Burnham, Esq., with respect to By-law No. 115, of the Corporation of North Monaghan being asked to report, proposed that they had obtained Mr. Burnham's opinion of said By-law and thought it not to take action on the matter until they should lay his statement before the Council, as it stated the Clerk is in the default in not doing his duty and is liable. The opinion of Mr. Burnham was read and ordered to be entered on the minute book, and the said committee authorized to employ E. Burnham, Esq., to take legal steps to recover the amount of tavern license dee to this Corporation.

The Clerk was directed to notify the Treasurer to pay the Trustees' orders to the several school sections.

The Council adjourned till Monday, the 28th day of December, at 10 o'clock, a. m.—Con.

The time for payment of arrears due the Government, on the purchase of Government and Clergy Reserve Lands is extended to the 2nd of March next.

MR. EDITOR.—It is now about two months since our Town Fathers in their wisdom and solicitude for the well being of their constituents, passed a By-law allowing the P. H. L. & B. R. R. Co. to use Bethune street in any way they chose, without reference to the injury that this would do to the unfortunate owners of property thereon, or to their convenience or convenience. During that time the street has been and still is completely blockaded up, no passage for even an empty waggon being left, and how long this state of things is to continue it is impossible to predict, as our Councillors seem to care little how much their neighbors may suffer so long as they are safe. The sufferers seem to have no redress, and must just put up with the inconvenience and loss, since those who were placed in their present position to protect their rights and interests keep so far forget their duty and oath of office as to sacrifice them to the interests of a company which has already received a large amount of the money of the town and still making large sums out of our towns people. That a grave injustice [illegible] the part of sufferers were not compensated, was admitted when the Council passed the first By law, by which it was understood that before the R. R. C. took up the street, ample compensation should be secured to sufferers, but I dare say your readers are aware of the after proceedings of a minority [illegible], when taking advantage of the absence of two of the Councillors they rescinded the By-law and altered it so that all the property holders were completely sacrificed, notwithstanding all the remonstrances of the sufferers. The inducements held out by the railway company proved too strong for the principles of the Council, and hence the opposite of both principles and principles.

That a great many are asking for what was such a sacrifice of principle and justice made especially by men who still consider they have [illegible] to the matter, I will state given him by the business on make him a Director, that forthwith he was appointed [illegible] having been placed in his position by the Lessees, he was consequently bound to pass they directed him, and he did this easily. It is further reported that besides a free passage the road has himself and his family, he has many advantages in the shape of reduced freight, drawbacks, the use of storehouses, cars, &c., that his neighbors cannot obtain. Others who voted, fought for the unjust By-law are in some way or other receiving substantial favors or employment from the Company, and consequently they were bound to vote as required by the Company.

Whether these statements are correct or not, I am not prepared to say, but the natural conclusion is that men who boast of their integrity, uprightness and consistency, must have had some very substantial considerations before they could be induced to do what they admitted would be a great injustice and injury to so many of their friends and neighbours, which as their representatives, or agents, they were bound to prevent.

Many promises have been given that compensation would be made, but up to date there is no appearance of any thing in that shape, and until something more than promises is received, it is hard to make the sufferers believe there may be any sincerity in those promises. It is now full time that something should be done to prove their sincerity. Let us have deeds and not words. But, Mr. Editor, though I have more to say, I have, I fear, made this rather too long already and must stop.

I am, Sir, &c.,

Death from Procured Abortion.

The Halton Herald of the 12th inst., says that a Mrs. Vance of Georgetown, died on the 10th inst., just while one Dr. McConnell of Cheltenham, was in the act of forcing an abortion.—From the evidence given, the wife sought her husband to obtain medicine for that purpose, but it failed to produce the result. Advice then brought the Dr. to the House, and by his drunken state he killed the woman. She died in their hands as will be seen from the following evidence taken from the Herald:—

John Vance sworn, said—I am the husband of deceased; my wife was in good health yesterday; she performed her ordinary household duties; I got a horse from Jarvis' stable to go for Dr. McConnell, of Cheltenham; she often wanted me to get medicine for an improper purpose; she did not want to have the child; I went and got such a prescription as she desired from Dr. McConnell about two weeks ago; it was made up by the druggist in Georgetown; the medicine made her sick as she described; she did not have the effect she had looked for; the prescription produced in Court is the one I received from the doctor; on Sunday last the doctor said the prescription had not been properly mixed by the druggist; the doctor came down with me last night in a buggy I had brought for him; we were drinking in Cheltenham, in Glenwilliam, and on the road in Georgetown; we arrived at Chase's hotel, Georgetown, about 11 o'clock; cannot say how many drinks we had; we afterwards went to the druggist's for medicine; the doctor got what he wanted and I paid for it; we then proceeded to my house; found my wife [illegible] ready; he went into the bedroom and the doctor followed her and partly closed the door; he shortly after closed the door, and my wife called me to take our three children into another room; while I was removing them I heard her call out "Oh, doctor!" and moan; in a few moments she called out "Johnny, Johnny!" and I rushed into the room, and seeing that my wife was in great suffering, I called out, "my God, doctor, what have you done?" He said she was all right, or would be shortly; the doctor then told me to go for a pint of brandy, which I procured at Clark's hotel, and brought home; he gave some of it mixed with water, and said she was getting better; he afterwards took several drinks of the brandy himself, using nearly all of it; the doctor soon after said she was dying, and stepped her and breathed into her mouth; I told him to go after Dr. Wright or Rooney; while he was away my wife died in my arms, and for some time I could not believe that she was dead; the doctor was away considerable time and returned, stating that Dr. Wright was coming; I then awakened Mr Brown and Mr. Wilson who came in about the same time as Dr. Wright; Dr. McConnell was drunk, or considerably the worse of liquor.

A Juror—Who put the basin in the back room containing the womb and entrails?

Witness—The doctor handed it to me and I put it there.

A Juror—Did the doctor come with you for the purpose of procuring an abortion?

Witness—Yes.

A Juror—Was the doctor drunk when he first went to your house?

Witness—Yes. Dr. McConnell was in the room about five minutes before my wife cried out; she was dead before any of the neighbors came in.

Dr. Starr, who held a post mortem examination of the body, made a statement that the organs were all in a sound and healthy condition, but that the womb and intestines were entirely removed; he found them in a basin in the house; it was clear that they had been torn from their position by force, thus causing the death of the woman.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of manslaughter against the Doctor, and they declared Vance an accessory. They are both in jail to await their trial.

Of the Doctor it is said that he recently commenced practice in Cheltenham. He is a graduate of Toronto University, and is one of the most brilliant scholars that ever graduated at that institution. He there obtained the degree of "A. M.," carried off high honors every year of his course, and won a gold medal in graduating. His course was considered an honour to himself and his alma mater; and on graduating he was most highly complimented, the professors being unanimously of the opinion that he was one of the most promising men that turned out of the University of Toronto. Since graduating, however, McConnell appears to have become a lover of that curse—whiskey—which has destroyed so many great minds, and shattered the prospects and hopes of its thousands of victims. Through it he is now an inmate of a prison, charged with a crime so awful that one shudders to think of it.

There has been an abortive attempt at insurrection in Fort de France. The malcontents are now roaming the mountains for fear of the "powers that be."

The Governor General of Canada is expected here on Friday or Saturday.

Four hundred and ninety ounces of bar gold have been received in Halifax between the 23rd Oct. and 5th Nov.

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when time'y used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Helping Sorrow.

A young wedded lady, well place near Montgomery, Alabama, at once the noble person thus writes:

"There is a woman who lives called out to [illegible] to the head of the lady beside [illegible] early, and with her working all [illegible] left her thing could done, some the very kind speak now; if not let them hold their peace; take and further store. I would every ear to hear and every heart to enjoy.

Mister Jim Thompson, whenever stands flatly by your left side, do you take her for your lawful wife to wait on her through sickness and [illegible] health, safe and be safe, holy and be holy, loving and be loving; do do you love her mother; do you love her father; do you love her husband; do you love her calmly, do you love her mother; do you love her mistress; but do you love God the best?"

Answer—"I do."

"Miss Mary Johnston, whenever stands flatly by your left side, do you take to be your lawful wedded husband, to wait on him through health and [illegible] sickness, safe and be safe, holy and be holy, so you love his mother; do you love his father; do you love his brothers; do you love his sisters; do you love God the best?"

Answer—"I will."

"I shall pronounce Mister Jim to [illegible] Miss Mary flatly by the right hand, and I shall pronounce you both to be man and wife, by the commandments of God. We shall hope and trusting through God that you may live right—that you may die right, now and forevermore. Now, Mister Jim, [illegible] your bride.

Let us sing a hine

"plunged in a gulf of dark despair," etc

ALL A SETTING.

Old farmer Gruff was one morning tugging away with all his might and main at a barrel of apples which he was endeavouring to get up the cellar stairs, and calling at the top of his voice for one of his boys to lend a helping hand, but in vain. When he had, after an infinite amount of puffing and sweating, accomplished the task, and just when they were not needed, of course, the boys made their appearance.

"Where have you been, and what have you been about, I'd like to know; couldn't you hear me call?" inquired the farmer in an angry tone, addressing the eldest.

"Out in the shop setting the saw," replied the youth.

"And you, Dick?"

"Out in the barn fitting the hen."

"I was up in Granny's room setting the old clock."

"And you, Tom?"

"In the garret setting the trap."

"Now, I'm-d, where were you setting?" he asked of his youngest progeny, the asperity of his temper being somewhat softened by this amusing catalogue of answers.

"Come let's hear?"

"On the door-step, setting still," replied the young hopeful, seriously.

"A remarkable set, I must confess," added the amused sire, dispersing the grinning group with a wave of his hand.

The following story was told about the Turkish troubles, just before the outbreak of the Crimean war. A Russian General arrived at Constantinople to have an interview with a Turkish Pasha. Entering the apartment, he found the Pasha seated on the divan, engaged in the habit of a Turk; but the two had no conversant eyes upon each other than the following dialogue ensued:

"Ha! General—What!! is that you, Russian [illegible] Turkish Pasha,—Sandy Mac[illegible]? who'd has thought to meeting you here!"

A ROLAND FOR AN OLIVER.—A tavern keeper in Newark when given a New Year's present to his help, told one of his porters, a smart Irishman, that he should give him the most costly present. 'Sure,' said Patrick, rubbing his hands with delight, 'I always mane to do my duty.' 'I believe you,' replied his employer, 'and therefore I shall make you a present of all you have stolen from me during the year!' 'Thank your honor,' replied Pat, 'and may all your friends and acquaintance treat you as liberally.'

An Englishman had heard of the Yankee habit of bragging, and thought he would cut the spunk of that propensity. He saw some huge water-melons on a market woman's stand, and walking up to her, and pointing to them with a look of dissatisfaction said, "What! don't you raise bigger apples than these in America?" The woman looked at him a moment, and retorted—"Apples! Anybody might know you was an Englishman. There's huckleberries!"

DOUBLE A CERTAIN.—A creditor, whom he was anxious to avoid, met Sheridan coming out of Pall Mall. There was no possibility of avoiding him, but he did not loose his presence of mind. "That's a beautiful mare you are on," said Sheridan. "Do you think so?" The creditor, highly flattered, put her into full trot. Sheridan bolted round the corner and was out of sight in a moment!

A stranger visiting one of the dockyards, conversing with some seamen who had been engaged in the navy during the war, asked one of them, an Irishman, if they had received any prize money? "Oh, indade, yer honor, yis, a little; it was sifted through a father, and all that fell through went to the officers—all that stuck to the steps was left to the men."

"Employment so certainly produces cheerfulness" says Bishop Hall' "that I have known a man to come home in high spirits from a funeral' because he had the management of it."

A few days ago somebody sold a roll of butter containing four or five lbs. to a merchant at Mount Forest, that is to say, the casing was butter and the inside was mashed potatoes.

It is said that when a Russian husband neglects to beat his wife for a month or two, she begins to get alarmed at his indifference.

An indignant orator at a recent meeting in replying to his opponent, exclaimed, "I scorn the allegation and I defy the allegator."

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now acquirable in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Keenetown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Canseeca, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Hepanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞ Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Gilmour, Gessler, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

OF
CONSUMPTION!
IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform yourself how much wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I complied a great deal day and night, experiencing great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I could scarcely sleep day, and on every night awoke every half hour, with the resulting cough and great exhaustion. I was almost deprived of sleep; my appetite was all one the loss of appetite. I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a couple of time, but finding no relief, I tried different remedies, but all without any good effect. Seeing Testimonials of both, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy. I procured these Remedies at once, with the Pills; as soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this compliment, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lungs, chest, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing to use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been blessed with better and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER C. V. MILLER,
Keenetown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman, Peter C. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

Rev. W. F. S. HARRIS,

ANE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

THE ORGAN QUESTION.

BY ALEXANDER CLERGHORN.

Oh Organ! No, it cannot work
Within a Presbyterian Kirk,
If once you hear a single note
From out its deeply sonorous throat;
The Kirk is there, the time and place,
But Presbyterianism's gone;

Our Fathers thought the human voice
Was of all instruments the choice;
That simple melody of heart
Waves little of the pomp of art
But that's all changed, the moderns say,
'Tis cheaper, better every way.
To praise (if such it seem to be)
Their Maker by machinery.

An Organ—why if all are willing,
Let every man put in a shilling,
There may come out an instrument
To play on to their heart's content.
And keep their voices wholly to praise
The Queen, and shout on holidays
Instead fleeing for their glittering shoes,
And forth there come a golden coal!
And then in honor of the day,
They ate and drank, and rose to play!
A happy people, dancing, drinking,
Ain't them the tall of paltar thinking?
The auld arch enemy of man,
The Devil, he tries every plan,
And tries his crookest night and day
To draw men off the good old way!
Worship, he knows, he cannot stop it;
He only chances it to corrupt it,
There's nothing plan him into total ruinins
Like hearing converts singing Psalms.

He whispers "Try a Paraphrase,
'Twill answer better now-a-days,
They're sung on Sunday by your Preachers,
You'll surely follow your own teachers;
But your weak voices, couch'd and rives,
Can never reach the ear of Heaven;
Good music—the best medium found—
The Organ has a pleasing sound."

An organ's but an instrument,—
There's neither soul nor spirit in't,—
A tinkling cymbal, sounding brass,
Its highest treble, deepest bass,
Amounts to notes, and notes alone,—
Most praise for gods of wood and stone,

An Organ, what would John Knox
Have said to such a whistle-box;
Could Henderson and Rutherford
Have seen the Popish tool raster'd
They'd pested up on each Kirk road,
A board, and written "Ichabod."
The Scottish Worthies well withstood
Corruption striving unto blood;
Theirs was a barbarous age, 'tis true
We manage matters smoothly now;
Our modern watchmen, easy going,
Against the current faintly rowing,
Meet and discuss the Organ question,
With pro and con, hint and suggestion,
The end 'tis easy to foresee,—
Touch, taste not, he who on his knee
Dandles a Babylonish lady,
His virtue's well nigh gone already.
An Organ, yes. It will be here
Through 'n our Kirk in two, three year,
Unless some wife like Jenny Geddes,
(The heroine of Scottish ladies),
Wi' three leg cuttie, fire a shot
And knock the squeaking thing to pot.

Selections.

A MIRROR FOR YOUNG WIVES.

'I must have it, Charles,' said the handsome little wife of Mr. Whitman; 'so don't put on that sober face.'

'Did I put on a sober face?' asked the husband, with an attempt to smile that was anything but a success.

'Yes, sober as a man on trial for his life. Why, its as long as the moral law. There, dear, clear it up, as if you had at least one friend in the world. What money lovers you men are!'

'How much will it cost?' inquired Mr. Whitman. There was quite another effort to look cheerful and acquiescent.

'About forty dollars,' was answered with just a little faltering in the lady's voice; for she knew the sum would sound extravagant.

'Forty dollars! Why Ada, do you think I am made of money?' Mr. Whitman's countenance underwent a remarkable change of expression.

'I declare, Charles,' said his wife, a little impatiently, 'you look at me as though I were an object of fear instead of affection. I don't think this is kind of you. I've only had three silk dresses since I was married, while Amy Blight has had six or seven during the same period, and every one of hers cost more than mine. I know you think me extravagant; but I wish you had a wife like some women I could name. I rather think you'd find out the difference before long.'

'There, there, pet; don't talk to me after this fashion, I'll bring the money at dinner time, that is,—if—if—'

'Not ifs or buts, if you please. The sentence is complete without them. Thank you dear. 'I'll go this afternoon and buy the silk; so don't fail to bring the money I was in at Silkskin's yesterday, and saw one of the sweetest patterns I ever laid my eyes on; just suits my style and complexion. You won't disappoint me?'

And Mrs. Whitman laid her soft, white head on the arm of her husband, and smiled with a sweet persuasion in her face.

'Oh, no. You shall have the money,' said Mr. Whitman, turning off from his wife, as she thought a little abruptly, and hurrying from her presence. In his precipitation he forgot the usual parting kiss.

'That's the way always,' said Mrs. Whitman, her whole manner changing as the sound of the closing street door came jarring upon her ears. 'Just my money to Charles and at once there is a cloud in the sky.'

She sat down pettingly and half angry.

'Forty dollars for a new silk dress!' ejaculated the husband of the vain, pretty, thoughtless Mrs. Whitman, as he shut the door after him. I promised to settle Thompson's bill to-day—three dollars—but I don't know where they money is to come from.—The coal is burnt up, and more must be ordered. Oh, dear! I am discouraged.—Every year I fall behind. This winter I did hope to get a head, but if forty dollar silk dresses are the order of the day, there is no end to that dressstil to be washed for consummation. Debt! debt! debt! How have I shrunk from it; but steadily now it is closing its Briareus arms around me, and my constricting chest labours in respiration. Oh! if I could but disentangle myself now, while I have the strength of early manhood, and the hands that hold me are weak. If Ada could see as I see—if I could make her understand rightly my position. And then suspicion, I fear.'

Mr. Whitman hurried his steps be- his thoughts were unduly excited.

About a long time after Mr. Whitman left home, the city postman delivered a letter to his address. The wife examined the writing on the envelope, which was in a bold, masculine hand, and she said to herself as she did so:—

'I wonder who this can be from?'

Something more than curiosity moved her. There intruded on her mind a vague feeling disquiet, as if the missive bore unpleasant news for her husband. The stamp showed it to be a city letter. A few times of late, such letters had come to his address, and she had noticed that he had read them hurriedly and thrust them without remark into his pocket, and become silent.

If the thoughts of Mrs. Whitman recurred as was natural, to the elegant silk dress of which she was to become the owner that day, she did not feel the proud satisfaction her vain heart experienced a little while before. Something of its beauty had faded

'If I only knew what the letter contained,' she said half an hour after the letter came in, her mind still feeling the pressure which had come down upon it so strangely, as it seemed to her. She went to the mantle-piece, and examined the superscription. It gave her no light. Steadily it kept growing upon her that its contents were of a nature to trouble her husband.

Mrs. Whitman turned the letter over and over again in her hand, in a thoughtful way, as she did so, the image of her husband sober-faced and silent, as he had become for most of the time of late, presented itself with usual vividness. Sympathy stole into her heart.

"Poor Charles!" she said as the feeling increased, "I am afraid something is going wrong with him."

Placing the letter on the mantlepiece, where he could see it when he came in, Mrs. Whitman entered upon some household duties, but a strange impression, as of weight, lay upon her heart—a sense of impending evil—a vague feeling that all was not going well with her husband.

'He has been a little mysterious of late, she said to herself. The idea affected her very unpleasantly. 'He grows more silent and reserved,' she added, as though her mind under a kind of feverish excitement, became active in a new direction; 'more indrawn, as it were, and less interested in what is going on around him. His coldness chills me at times, and his irritation hurts me.'

She drew a long deep sigh. Then with almost startling vividness, came before her mind, in contrast, her tender, loving husband of three years before, and of her quiet, silent sober-faced husband of to day.

'Something is going wrong with him!' she said aloud as the feeling grew stronger. What can it be?

The letter was in her hand.

'This may give me light.' And with careful fingers she opened the envelope, not breaking the paper, so that she could seal it again if required to do so. There was a bill of sixty dollars, and a communication from the person sending the bill. He was a jeweller.

'If this account is not settled at once,' he wrote,' I shall put the account in suit. It has been standing for over a year, and I am tired of getting excuses instead of my money.'

The bill was the lady's watch, which Mrs. Whitman had almost compelled her husband to purchase. 'Not paid for? Is it possible!' exclaimed the little woman in blank astonishment, while blood mounted to her forhead.

Then she sat down to think. Light began to come into her mind. As she sat thus thinking, a second letter came for her husband. She opened it without hesitation. Another bill and another dunning letter.

'Not paid? is it possible!' she repeated the ejaculation. It was a bill for twenty-five dollars for gaiters and slippers, which had been standing for three months.

'This will never do!' said the awakening wife—'any never!' and she thrust the two letters into her pockets in a resolute way. From that hour until the return of her husband at dinner time, Mrs. Whitman did an unusual amount of thinking for her little brain. She saw the moment he entered, that the morning cloud had not passed from his brow.

'Here's the money for the new dress,' he said, taking a small roll of bills from his vest pocket and handing them to Ada as he came in. He did not kiss her, nor smile in the old bright way. But his voice was calm if not cheerful. A kiss and a smile just then would have been more precious to the young wife than a hundred silk dresses. She took the money, saying, "Thank you dear. It is kind of you to regard my wishes.'

Something in Ada's voice and manner caused Mr. Whitman to lift his eyes with a look of inquiry to her face. But she turned aside, so that he could not read its expression.

He was graver and more silent than usual, and ate with scarcely an appearance of appetite.

'Come home early, dear,' said Mrs. Whitman, as she walked to the door with her husband after dinner.

'Are you impatient to have me admire your new silk dress?'

'Yes, it will be something splendid,' she answered.

He turned away from her quickly, and he left the house. A moment she stood with a thoughtful face; her mind indrawn and her manner completely changed. Then she went to her room and commenced dressing to go out.

Two hours later and we find her in a jewellery store on Broadway.

'Can I say a word to you?' she addressed the owner of the store who knew her very well,

'Certainly,' he replied, and they removed to the lower end of one of the long show cases.

Mrs. Whitman drew from her pocket a lady's watch and chain, and laying them on the show case, said, at the same time holding out the bill she had taken from the envelope addressed to her husband—'I cannot afford to wear this watch; my husband's circumstances are too limited, I tell you frankly. It should not have been purchased, but a too indulgent husband yielded to the importunities of a selfish wife. I say this to take blame from him. Now sir, most the case if you can do so in fairness to yourself. Take back the watch, and say how much I shall pay you besides.'

The jeweller dropped his eyes to think. The case took him a little by surprise. He stood for nearly a minute, and taking the bill and watch, said:

'Wait a moment,' and went to the desk near by.

'Will that do?' He came forward again; and now presented her with a receipted bill. His face wore a pleased expression.

'How much shall I pay you?' asked Mrs. Whitman, drawing out her purse.

'Nothing. The watch is not defaced.'

'You have done a kind act, sir," said Mrs. Whitman, with a trembling voice. 'I hope you will not think unfavorably of my husband; it is no fault of his that the bill has not been paid. Good afternoon, sir."

Mrs. Whitman drew her veil over her face, and went with a light heart from the store. The pleasure she had experienced on receiving her watch was not to be compared with that now felt in parting with it. From the jeweller's she went to the bootmaker and paid the bill of twenty-five dollars, and thence to the milliner's and settled for her last bonnet.

'I know you are dying to see my new dress, said Mrs. Whitman, gaily, and she drew her arm within that of her husband, on his appearance that evening. 'Come into the parlor, and let me show it. Come along; don't hang back, Charles, as if you were afraid.'

Charles Whitman went with his wife passively, looking more like a man on his way to receive sentence than in expectation of a beautiful sight. His thoughts were bitter.

'Shall my Ada become lost to me?' he said in heart—'lost to me in a world of fashion, folly and extravagance?'

'Sit down, Charles.'

She led him to a large cushioned chair. Her manner had undergone a change; the brightness of her countenance had departed. She took something in a hurried way from the drawer and taking up a stool placed it on the floor near him, and looked tenderly and lovingly in his face, then handed him the jeweller's bill.

'It is receipted you see.' Her voice fluttered a little.

'Ada! how is this, what does it mean?' He flushed and grew eager.

'I returned the watch, and R—— receipted the bill. I would have paid the damage but he said it was uninjured, and asked nothing.'

'Oh! Ada.'

'And this is receipted also, and this;' handing him the other bills which she had paid.

'And now, dear,' she added quickly, 'how do you like my new dress—isn't it beautiful. We leave the explanation and scenes that follow to the reader's imagination. If any fair lady, who like Ada, has been drawing too heavily on her husband's slender income, for silks or jewels, is at a loss to relize the scene, let her try Ada's experiment. Our word, she will find a new and happy experiment in life. Costly silks and jewels may be very pleasant things but they are too dear when they come at the price of a husband's embarrassment, mental disquietude, and alienation. Too often the gay young wife wears them as a sign of these unhappy conditions. Tranquil hearts and sunny homes are precious things—too precious to be burdened and clouded by weak vanity and love of show. Keep this in mind, ye fair ones who have husbands in moderate circumstance. Do not let your pride and pleasure oppress them. Rich clothing, costly laces and gems, are poor substitutes for smiling faces and hearts unshadowed by care. Take the lesson and live by it, rather than offer another illustration in your experience of folly we have been trying to expose and rebuke.

SAVE THE DEAD LEAVES.

—If every horticulturist and farmer would think for a moment on the nature of fallen leaves—which contain not only the vegetable matter, but the earthy salts, lime potash, etc, needed for the next season's growth and fertility,—and that, too exactly in the proportion required by the tree or plant from which they fall; nay, more, if they would consider that it is exactly in this way, by the decomposition of these very fallen leaves that nature enriches the soil, year after year in her great forests, it would hardly be possible for such a reflecting horticulturist or farmer to allow these leaves to be swept away by every wind that blows and finally lost altogether. Nor would he give them away, as many now do. He would rather collect, from week to week, leaves that fall under each tree and by digging them under the soil about the roots, where they will decay, provide in the cheapest manner the best possible food for the tree. If this plan should be tried we should not see our old orchards dying out for want of nourishment they required. Pear trees, and doubtless the peach, would be greatly benefitted by this procedure. In certain vineyards in France and Italy, the vines are kept in the highest condition by simple burying at their roots every leaf and branch that is pruned off or falls from the vines at the close of the season.—

Will not some of our farmers of enquiring minds give this simple process a trial this season? It is a well known fact that no manure is more eagerly sought for by the florist than leaf mould. It enters largely into the compost prepared for potting. Leaves collected and mixed with barnyard manure, greatly enhance its value. Therefore gather up the leaves that nothing shall be lost.

How Mr. Keith Managed.

'Man's work is from sun to sun,' quoted Mrs. Keith. She had just finished her work for the day, everything was tidied, and she was taking up her sewing, when Mr. Keith upset a vinegar bottle and a bowl of gravy in the kitchen cupboard, rummaging after a knife that was in his pocket all the time. Mrs. Keith relinquished her idea of a little season of quiet and went on to set matters in order again. Mr. Keith followed to oversee her—a habit some men have.

'I wish you would be a little more careful. Henry; you do not realize how many little things I have to see to.'

'Humph!' said Mr. Keith, setting down in a basket of freshly ironed clothes, 'I never would complain of such a trifle as that. If I did'nt know I should think all the women were in slavery.'

'And you would be right, Henry. You haven't the slightest idea.'

'Nonsense, Mary! Why I could do all your work and three times as much more, and get all through by ten o'clock,'

'Could you, indeed?'

'To be sure, if you would only give me the chance of it.'

'You shall have it,' said Mrs. Keith quietly. 'I have long wanted to visit Aunt Susan. I will do so now and you may keep house. I shall have to cook up something—'

'As if I could'nt cook! you do nothing of the kind, Mary. I shall live like a prince, and you will see how nice I will keep everything. You will not know the house when you come home.'

'I dare say,' remarked Mrs. Keith, 'but when can I go.'

'To-morrow, if you like.'

'Are you sure you can manage?'

'Sure,' what a look he gave her 'You shall see.'

Mrs. Keith laughed a little to herself when her husband left her at the depot, and he turned his steps homeward to clear the breakfast things, and prepare dinner. She only wished she could be there invisible, and see him manage.

'Let me see,' soliloquized Keith, entering the kitchen. 'I'll wash the dishes, first, and I'll put on one of Mary's dresses to keep me clean.'

He fastened it around his waist with a pin, rolled up his sleeves and looked about him. The fire was out, but after much trouble he succeeded in relighting it, and then began the dishes. He took them to the sink, dipped up the spout, and put them in with a tub of cold water.

'There they're washed,' said he to himself, 'Now for something to wipe them on I'll take the table cloth. Such a fuss as women do make about work. Why I could wash all the dishes in the neighbourhood in a half a day. This stew pan smells of grease; I wonder what's the matter with it; There I've got some meat on my hand, there it goes on that China saucer, does take it, I wish there was no meat, hello, there's one plate gone to smash! Oh there goes the cream pitcher! And I've stepped into the potatoe dish that I set on the floor to dry, and that's gone to the shades! never mind! accidents will happen! I guess I'll trim the lamps next! mother always trimmed the lamps in the morning! Confound 'em how black the chimneys are!'

Thus conversing with himself, Mr. Keith put the chimneys into the basin and cogitated a moment. He had heard it said that hot water was cleansing. So he scalded the chimneys, and the result was about a hundred different pieces in each chimney.

'Good gracious!' cried he, 'who would have thought it! There's somebody to the door! I'll just step in as I am. It can't be anybody that I care for so early at this.'

A small boy presented himself, eyeing Keith with ill suppressed mirth.

'Be you the mistress of the house?'

'You—that is, I am the master said Mr. Keith, with dignity. 'What can I do for you?'

'Nothing, I guess. Marm sent me over to see if you—that is, if the mistress of the house would take care of the baby while she goes shopping.'

'No!' roared Keith, 'I've other fish to fry.' The boy put his thumb to his nose, and Mr. Keith, after slamming the door, as men always do when they are out of humor—returned to the kitchen. The fire was out and the room decidedly smoky.

'I'll go down cellar and bring up some coal, said he. And he started briskly down stairs. On the second step he put his foot through a rip in his dress, skirt and stumbled and fell down to the bottom of the cellar, smashing a basket of eggs, and knocked over a shell loaded with pans of milk.

'Deuce take it!' said he, scrambling to his feet and scratching his head. 'How do women manage with these infernal long dresses! I shall break my neck with this yet!'

The fire made again, Mr. Keith bethought himself of dinner. He looked at the time piece; it was one o'clock. Almost time for dinner! What would he have for dinner? He had heard his wife say that a rice pudding was easily made; he would have rice pudding, broiled potatoes and broiled steak.

He filled a basin with rice, stirred a little sugar in, dropped in an egg, and set the vessel in the oven. The potatoes he washed in the soap suds, that they might certainly be clean, and put them in the tea-kettle because they would boil quicker.

The steak was frizzing in the frying pan; he was proceeding to set the table when the bell rung. He caught the pan from the fire to keep it from burning, and made haste to the front door. Then he remembered it would not be just the thing to go to the door with the frying pan in his hand, so he deposited it on the parlor sofa, and answered the ring.

Mrs. Mudge was on the steps dressed in her best.

'Yah—I—there my!' stammered Mr. Keith 'my wife is absent and I am the Bridget.

Mrs. Mudge sailed into the parlour, which was darkened to exclude the sun; without stopping to look at her seat, sank into the frying pan on the sofa.

'Jupiter,' cried Mr. Keith, 'you've done it now.' Mrs. M. sprang up, the grease dripping from her silk on the carpet. Her face grew dark. She was tempted to say something cutting but managed to control herself; bowed haughtily and left the house.

Keith returned to the kitchen a little crestfallen, for Mrs. Mudge was a lady before whom he desired to appear particularly well.

There was a tremendous crackling in the oven. He thought of the pudding and looked in. The burst rice had topped all over the oven; the basin had melted apart and the pudding was not done. He shut the door upon the ruins in disgust, and looked after his potatoes only to find them boiled to a perfect jelly. And just as he had made this discovery there was a sharp peal at the door bell. 'Creation! there's that abominable door bell again. I wish folks would stay at home. I'll look all the doors, and cut all the bell wire after today.'

At the door he found Mr. and Mrs. Fidget, and their children.

'My dear Mr. Keith! how do you do?' cried Mrs. Fidget. 'We were in town, and thought we'd step in to dinner. Where's Mrs. Keith?'

'She's gone away, said Keith, ruefully wondering what he should feed them on. 'Walk in, do; I am housekeeper today.'

'Yes,'as I should judge. But of course you make a splendid one, I remember you used frequently to be telling Mrs. Keith and myself how very easy housekeeping must be. It must be more play to you. Don't put yourself out, I beg.'

'Put myself out, indeed!' cried Mr. Keith, retreating to the kitchen. 'My good gracious, what shall I do? I'd give a hundred dollars if Mary was only here. Where shall I begin?'

He drew out the table and set it without any cloth; then took off the plates and put on the cloth—the very one he had wiped the dishes on. The task completed, he put on some more potatoes, and some more eggs; burned his steak to a cinder; took off his potatoes when he did the meat, and put them all on the table. There was a loaf of baker's bread in the cupboard; he paraded that, and then called his guests to dinner.

A quizzical smile spread over Mrs. Fidgets face at the sight of the repast. Keith was in cold perspiration.

'Ma, my plate's all greasy, and my knife is so; I can't eat on dirty dishes,' cried little Johnny Fidget.

'And my fork is wet all over with water that's dropping from the table cloth, and my tater ain't half biled,' cried little Sea Fidget.

A slight noise in the kitchen drew the attention of Mr. Keith.

'Jupiter!' cried he; if Mrs. O'Flaherty's dog ain't making off with my steak!'

He jumped from the table and ran in hot pursuit. The dog made the best of it; Keith's unaccustomed attire was a sad drawback, and he made but little headway.

'Kill him!' he yelled to the crowd that joined in the pursuit. 'I'll give fifteen dollars for his hide.'

Mrs. O'Flaherty herself appeared on the scene, with a skillet of hot water.

'Tich him if yo dare!' she cried, 'I'll break the bones of every mother's son of yees. Stand from from forninst, or you'll rue the day.'

Keith took a step forward; stepped on his shirt and pitched head first into a wine cellar, where half a dozen men were playing cards.

The d——l in petticoats, exclaimed the gamesters, and the place was emptied quicker than a wink.

The police picked up Mr. Keith considerably bruised, and carried him home. His company had taken their departure, and somebody not having the fear of the law upon them, had entered and stolen a hundred dollars worth of property.

Then Mr. Keith sent the following note:

'Dear Mary!—Come home. I give up, beat. A woman does have great deal to do. I confess myself incompetent to manage.—Come home and you shall have a new silk dress and a daughter of Erin to divide your labours.

Yours disconsolately,
H. KEITH.

A LADY POLITICIAN.—At a local election "Out West," crinoline had a good deal to do with the business. The contest turned wholly upon personal popularity, and the successful candidate brought his wife to help him. "His wife," says the country paper," would have made the fortune of any candidate. A fine, dashing woman, she rode about with him in a carriage upon the canvassing tours, and when, one day, he stopped in a public house to see a committee, while she sat without in the barouche waiting his return, the 'frowsy cents' gathered round the wheels, and giving 'three cheers for her hyness,' called on her for a speech. Prompt, as lightning, she responded, 'I will sing you a song, which an Irishman with music in his soul would say day prefer to a speech;' and sang, in a clear, sweet voice one of Moore's melodies. The 'frizzy cents' listened entranced. From that moment until the election took place, the beautiful politician could never appear in public without being implored for a song." That is the kind of wife needed just now.

A TOUGH MEAL.—The clerk of a church in the country recently made the following announcement to the countrymen: "You are desired to attend a meeting in the vestry at four o'clock, to consider on the best means of 'eating the church, and to digest other matters."

OPINIONS VALUED.—A sporting quaker put his bets thus: "Friend Edward, dear thinks thy horse is faster than mine. I value my opinion at $20. Now, if thee values thy opinion at the same rate, we will put the money together and ask our learned what they think of it, and leave the conclusion to them."

The Sectarian College Grants Petition

THE material value of the right of petition consists in the being an unmistakeable indication of the will of the people. Petitions circulated or carried round by eminent orthodox and divines in the immediate neighborhood of their local habitations can command a certain number of signatures, though the names of very few distinguished persons are spontaneously offered. In the case of the flood of petitions just poured upon the House, praying for aid to superior education, they are generally stated to be signed by model ratepayers. This is questionable; indeed; we know for a fact, that some of the petitions have been signed by boys whose fathers could not be induced to favor the fulsomes of the sectaries. Take them, however, to be what they profess. We have given to the trouble of analysing and tabulating the signatures, and herewith present them to a wondering world:—

Take the names, good, bad and indifferent as they are, there are only some 18,800 persons in Ontario out of 231,540 assessed ratepayers, and population of over a million and a quarter, who have asked the Legislature to aid the sectarian colleges. Were this request a spontaneous one, even then there would be nothing very formidable in so many people as we have in two wards of the city of Toronto asking aid for any particular object from the Legislature. When we call to mind the efforts which have been made to concentrate public opinion upon this subject, we cannot but feel surprise that the mountain should have labored so violently and brought forth so little. From the number of these petitions which have been laid before the House we really began to think they were assuming a formidable appearance. The number of them shows how widely they have been circulated. That they are not very formidable arises from the simple fact that some of them have as few as five names attached and many no more than from 10 to 20. Do these figures warrant the Legislature in deliberately altering what the people though their representatives, who were then fresh from them, only last session agreed to? Granted "Vox Populi vox Dei." The people pay the piper. If they unmistakably show their wish, let their representatives yield.—Ed.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Mr. Mayor Irwin, of Prescott, on behalf of the corporation, presented to Sir John Young on his arrival, last Friday, the following ADDRESS.

To his Excellency, the Right Honorable Sir John Young, K. C. B., G. C. M. G.

We, the Mayor and Town Council of Prescott, on behalf of the inhabitants thereof, approach your Excellency with profound respect, and beg to render our sincere congratulations to your Excellency on your arrival in this our Dominion of Canada; and we are happy that the route for your journey to the Capital has been so selected that is Prescott you first set your foot on Canadian soil. We greet you and Lady Young, and bid you both a hearty welcome.

From the manner in which you discharged your duties as Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands, and in all the other exalted positions in which you have been placed by our most Gracious Sovereign, we have the fullest confidence that your administration of the Government of this country will be attended with prosperity, happiness and contentment. Aware of the long voyage which you have just undergone, and the fatigue incident thereto, we do not desire to weary you with a lengthy address; we wish, however, to express to your Excellency the strongest assurance of our loyalty to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and again bid your Excellency and Lady Young a real and cordial welcome to Canada.

REPLY.

His Excellency replied substantially, as follows:

I regret very much that I am unable to give you a written reply to your address. I thank you for the very cordial welcome you have given myself and Lady Young. It is very gratifying to receive the encouragement of such a hearty welcome, when first touching the threshold of Canada. I am pleased to hear your expressions of loyalty to Her Majesty. I am pleased to find that the institutions of the country are supported so heartily by the people. For your expressions of regard for Lady Young and myself, I have to thank you on her behalf and on my own. Again, gentlemen, I thank you cordially for your enthusiastic welcome.

Some of the newspapers have not been accurately informed as to the course pursued by the British Wesleyan Conference toward the Rev. William Morley Punshon, for marrying his deceased wife's sister. They indeed (as has been stated) declined to appoint Mr. Punshon president of the next Canadian Conference; but gave the election to that office into the hands of the Canadian Conference, fully aware on whom the choice would fall. As to the dropping of Mr. Punshon's name from the Legal Hundred, not a word was said on the subject. Many such marriages exist among Wesleyans, who are almost universally favorable to their being legalised. Thos. Wesley and Dr. Adam Clarke distinctly pronounced in favor of the scriptural lawfulness of such marriages. Our Judgement is, that, if a man wishes to marry his deceased wife's sister, and the lady herself is willing, nobody else has any right to intermeddle in the matter.—N. Y. Independent.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1868.

St. Andrew's Society Dinner.

On the anniversary of St. Andrew's day, the sons of Auld Scotia in Peterboro remembered their patron saint by treating themselves and their friends to a dinner.

Mine host, Turver, of Calsee's Hotel, got up the spread in excellent style. Every good thing of the season was provided, and what was of more consequence to Scotchmen abundance of their national dish, Haggis. About 70 brither Scots, and a goodly number of English, Irish and Canadian friends sat down. A. H. Campbell, Esq., of St. Leonard's Hall, President, occupied the chief place, and T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., Barrister, and A. Smith, Esq., of the Bank of Toronto, the vice chairs. On each side of the President were seated Rev. V. Clementi, Capt. Wallis, D. Sutherland, Esq., the Mayor, R. Richardson, Esq., of Bank of Montreal, and John Walton, Esq. The remaining guests were arranged near the vice chairs.

After ample justice had been done to the feast of fat things the great work of the night commenced—bumpers, toasts and responses. As leal Scots, "The Queen," "The Prince" and "Royal Family" were first remembered and right heartily received. Mr. Jas. Millar sung the National Anthem. Then followed the Governor General and Lieut.-Governor of Ontario. In introducing this toast the President said that although the Governor General had just arrived amongst us, was a stranger and not yet sworn in; yet he was representative of our beloved Queen deserved our highest respect and honor, and hoped that he would fill the high position in a manner that would reflect honor to himself and would be satisfactory to those over whom he was coming to preside.

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers of Canada" was next in order, and was as warmly received as any that had gone before, Mr. Campbell remarking, that as the Army had fought its hundred of battles, and aye victorious; as the Navy had carried the flag that had braved a thousand years into every water of the world, ready to protect the weak and uphold the right, so he knew the Volunteers of Canada were ready to leave their hopes and families to drive the invader from our soil and to protect and defend our families, hearth and homes.

Song by Mr. Henderson.

Lieut.-Col. Poole responded on behalf of the Volunteers. He (Col. P.) had not expected to be called upon to respond, but did not hesitate when called on. The deeds of the Army and Navy, he remarked, required no praise, they were written on pages of unperishable history. The Volunteers, however, had done very little yet, but what they had done, the had done willingly, and they were ready still, if occasion required it, to go again to do their duty and protect their country from any foil invader. He also referred to a company, during the Fenian raid, that had come from Uxbridge or Reach, every man of whom was Scotch. Clad in mostly arrayt they were, having hurried from their homes to join in driving Fenians from our land, and with their brawny arms were prepared to face and put to flight three times their numbers. With these remarks he begged to return them his sincere thanks for the honor done to the Volunteers in this toast.

Major Kennedy also begged to return thanks as a Volunteer. They, he knew, had done nothing but their duty, which England expects of them. He felt proud to be a Volunteer, as he had been for many years, and he trusted that they would continue to do their duty at their country's call.

Capt. Sutherland, being loudly called on, remarked that Capt. Wallis had come at his solicitation to respond to the Navy, and he, Capt. Warlis, would now do so.

Capt. Wallis, on rising said, that he did not certainly come to respond, for he had never made a speech in his life, besides he had never belonged to to the Navy and could not reasonably speak for it. He was connected with the navigation of our back lakes in a skipper of a cockle shell, the only sections with the Navy that he could boast of. He, however, would beg to return them his grateful thanks for the way in which the toast had been promoted and received.

Dr. Kincaid also returned thanks on behalf of the Volunteers.

The President then proposed the Army and Navy and was honor it. Mr. Campbell said that this was the watchword of Scotchmen. It brought to their memory the country they had left, the dear old glens and streams and mountains; it brought to recollection the living and the dead, it tells us that we are Scots—sons of the mountain and the flood, bringing to memory days of the past, of childhood, of sports and friendship not soon to be forgotten. Meeting on this night caused many kindly greetings, greetings of former friends and Scotsmen. It tells us wherever we meet a Scot—and where can we go that they are not? that we will be received kindly, generously dealt with, and if in need our wants supplied. For this we are called clannish, but this very trait of a Scotsman goes to comprise one of the very best features of humanity, and benevolence. Without it we would not be what we as Scotsmen are. I might tell you of our countrymen who have been patriots; of their numerous benevolent societies. I might tell you why this saint was chosen for his benevolence, being willing to give up his five barley loaves and two small fishes to feed the 5,000 who were hungry. It is enough to know that the object of the society is to look after the sick, provide for those in need and to be ready to give advice and welcome to brither Scots coming amongst them. He then referred to the increase in the members, there being now over 80. The funds, too are all spent in objects of benevolence, together with a small gift to that excellent institution, the Protestant Home; and he concluded a very able and excellent speech by giving, "The day and a' who honor it."

Song by Mr. Walker.

Mayor Scott responded in a very happy and effective style, regretting that it had not fallen to other and abler speakers to do so. The sentiments were those of thousands in this land—in every land; and associated with are the names of heroes that shed a lustre, a brilliancy, a glory around the name of Scot, that the sons of any land would be proud of. Her sons had contributed largely to the glory of England's navy and army, and to blot out their deeds of heroism and bravery from the annals of English history would rob it of a glory and a fame it can ill afford to part with. The gallant Highlanders at Waterloo, at Alma, Inkerman and Balaclava, in India, and everywhere, have left behind them a name and glory worthy the sons of any land. In letters and in poetry, too, she had excelled. The unrivalled songs of Burns can never be equalled for truthfulness of representation of Scottish character and poetic energy; as also Scott in his writings of world-wide renown. In Philosophy they had their Stewarts and their McIntosh; and in Geology the author of the Old Red Sand Stone. Take these away from the names famous in history and where can their equals be found. This day if therefore rightly honored by the sons of auld Scotland the wide world over. (Great applause.)

T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., 1st Vice-President, then gave "The Heroes and Bards of Scotland."

Mr. Fairbairn, after referring to the fact that the preceding speaker had somewhat forestalled him, said: It could be no depreciation of Englishmen or Irishmen to admit that Scotland had many Heroes and Bards of which she might justly be proud. Heroes were indigenous to Scotland, as her memorial cairns fully attested, and as the Romans were forced to acknowledge. Kenneth McAlpin, whose history ran far into the almost forgotten past, was the first of a line of heroes whose fame will remain while history remains to record their noble deeds of valor and courage. The speaker made reference to Malcom Canmore, his son David, Wallace and Bruce. Through the noble daring and manly defence of justice and right of the Scottish heroes, their poets were enabled to sing—

"The foot of slave her heather never stained, Nor rocks that battlement her sons profaned."

Before the Union many a well contested struggle is recorded as witnesses of Scottish pluck and endurance. Since it Scots have done much to raise the name and fame of England. At Waterloo the noble Scotch Greys were foremost to maintain her superiority, and on every battle field of the world they have fought till death to maintain the name and honor of Great Britain unsullied. Her Bards, too, no less claim our attention and admiration. They have proclaimed to all lands the deeds of Scotland's heroes, they have done much to dissipate superstition, and have sung of every mountain, glen or loch of their native land, and have taught Scotsmen to cherish their native country as

"The land of every land the pride, Beloved of Heaven o'er every land beside."

He then concluded one of the best speeches of the night by giving the "Heroes and Bards of Scotland."

Song by Mr. Millar—"Scot's wha' has."

Jas. A. Hall, Esq., also responded to this toast. He spoke in high terms of Burns as a poet, equalling if not surpassing Milton or Shakespeare in his national strains. They were being sung where Milton was not read or Shakespeare more than heard of; and while her poets hold such a place in the hearts of the people, her heroes hold no mean place among the heroes of the world. The speaker referred to a host of worthies, but especially to Lord Cochrane and others who had done more than any other men to raise the name of England's navy.

Mr. Smith then gave, "The Land o' Cakes." This name made it dear, he said, to Scots; it was the land of hospitality; every house was open to the needy, and all ready to bestow of their goods if it did not interfere with their pockets.

Song, "Scottish Kail Brose," by Mr. Renfrew.

J. F. Dennistoun, Esq., replied to this toast, referring to the state of Scotland once when it raised nought but oats, and now when it was considered the garden of Europe, and when its waters contained ships from every quarter of the world.

Mr. Wm. Telford, the Bard of St. Andrew, then read his address to the Society. We give it in another bottmn.

"Canada our Home" then followed from the chair, but as our report has already exceeded the space at our disposal we can only mention the remaining toasts and responses.

Rev. V. Clementi responded to this toast paying no small tribute at praise to Canada as a country, and to her citizens of Scotch, English and Irish descent.

"The House of Commons of Canada and Legislative Assembly of Ontario" was given by Mr. Smith, and among the names of those who occupied places in these Houses he thought the name of Scotia occupied a prominent place.

Mr. Fairbairn gave "The Municipal Corporation of Peterboro" to which Mr. Gifford responded.

The President gave "The Charitable Societies—St. George's Society, Toronto," Responded to by Mr. Harvey, Mr. Hatton and Mr. Walker.

Mr. Clementi regretted that there was no St. George's Society in existence, as he knew that at one time it had done much good.

Mr. Walker thought it would fit to call him to sit still after the great kindness and respect bestowed on him as a guest and he would be loth to leave this Scotsmen [illegible] their country; but he could not help telling them Canada had done much for them. It had removed some of their asperities and materially improved them. He liked Canada, however, and would like to see a Canadian society, as he was satisfied Canada must yet take her place among the nations.

"Commerce and Industry" was responded to by Mr. Bertram in an excellent speech.

"The Ladies," "The Bar," and "The Press" were all remembered in due form, and the assembly broke up about the "wee sma' hour" singing—"Happy to meet—sorry to part, and happy to meet again." The evening was a very pleasing one—the speeches excellent, and to Scotchmen, especially—very complimentary; and we have no hesitation in saying that such nights—the speeches, the thoughts of home brought to remembrance again, and the deeds and songs of her heroes and bards are well calculated to increase that love for Scotland for which her sons are so remarkable.

THE MAYORALITY.

A rumor having gone abroad that the friends of the Railway were desirous of getting some one to occupy the Mayor's chair next year whom they would try to make a cats paw of, and having applied to Mr. D. G. Hatton to become their nominee—aroused the citizens—who feel sore on account of present management of Railway affairs, that they determined not to let a Railway nominee get elected, no matter how respectable he might otherwise be, and the result of this movement is a very largely signed requisition to the Mayor to allow himself to be put in nomination. It is due, however, to Mr. Hatton to say that he was not a party to his name being brought before the public; and he called on us yesterday desiring us to say that he did not intend and will not be a candidate for the Mayorality.

With every respect for Mr. Hatton, we trust if ever he becomes a candidate for that or any other municipal office, that he will have the good sense to steer clear of all cliques and parties. The Mayor should be an independent member of the Council, ready to do justice to all and without fear favor or affection.

A meeting of the electors of the Town of Peterborough favorable to the election of W. H. Scott, Esq., was held at the Hotel of H. Uins', on Saturday evening November 28.

On motion of R. Hamilton, Esq., seconded by Councillor Toole,—D. Hopkins, Esq., took the chair.

Mr. John O'Donnell was appointed Secretary, on motion of Councillor Toole, seconded by Mr. T. G. Haslitt.

D. Hopkins, Esq., was elected Chairman of the Central Committee and Mr. O'Donnell Secretary.

The following were appointed a committee with power to add to their numbers: Councillor Toole, Helm, J. H. Dixon, Doherty, Messrs. T. G. Haslitt, C. Stapleton, W. A. Scott, W. Waddell, L. McGregor, C. Robinson, B. Hamilton, E. Shaver, Geo. Mills, John Kerr, H. T. Strickland, C. Cameron, John Marshall, Andrew Thompson, T. Bradburn and Albert Hall.

The duty of the committee is to canvass the different Wards and do all in their power for the re-election of W. H. Scott, Esq.

The following were appointed a committee to present Mr. Scott with the requisition, viz: Messrs. D. Hopkins, W. Toole, W. Helm, R. Hamilton, T. G. Hazlitt, C. Stapleton, J. H. Dixon, J. O'Donnell, W. A. Scott, J. Doherty and Chas. Cameron, award that it be presented at o'clock on Monday.

CURLIANA—KEENE.—At a meeting of the Otonabee Curling Club, held at the American House, Keene, on Tuesday evening, the first of December, the following officers were elected:—

Alexander Campbell, Esq., President.
Jas. Lang, Vice President.
Dr. Dean, Secretary.
Thos. Campbell, Treasurer (re-elected.)

CORRECTION.—In our report of the Smith Council, last week, a trifling error crept in. In the matter of Reeve communicating about the method of detecting the side lines of the lots adjoining the river Otonabee. It should read "as the Council was of the opinion that the method was sufficiently defined by the present statute."

SERMON.—The Rev. J. M. Roger preached the annual sermon to the St. Andrew's Society, on Sunday evening, in St. Andrew's church, to a very large congregation, from Heb. 12th chapter and 1st verse. The words were very appropriate, and the sermon for the occasion was very suitable and well applied.

PRESBYTERIAN—LAKEFIELD.—We learn that the Anniversary Soiree of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church will be held on New-years day. Our readers who are fond of a pleasant sleigh ride, cheerful company and an opportunity to visit this pretty village, keep the Soiree on New-years' day in mind.

A very large and influential meeting was held on the 4th line, Smith, on Friday evening last, against Denominational Grants. John Walton, Esq., in the chair. Messrs. Fairbairn, Edwards, Walton and others addressed the meeting, and a petition numerously signed was forwarded, praying the Government to adhere to the wise and just measure of last session. The petition had over 100 names attached. Other matter forbids our giving particulars.

A man named Murry was shot by the guards in the Penitentiary, last week, while trying to make his escape. He had intended, assisted by others, to overpower the watch and get away, but was shot in the attempt.

PARLIAMENTARY.—Denominational grants were voted down yesterday by a vote of 64 to 4.

To try it is to like it, Hunt's Empire Hair Gloss.

The Telegraph of the 1st inst., in its ever [illegible] on the subject of Education, and on the [illegible] Common School system, has an article [illegible] "the system is [illegible] and [illegible] the people of Canada, who are above farm work, and above everything else like real work." Such assertions should be very easily capable of proof, and should not be carelessly made, under any circumstances; and that, more especially so, by a Journal that [illegible] the only newspaper in Ontario worth the perusal. That our Common School system is infidel, or infidel in tendency is entirely false; the Telegraph to the contrary, notwithstanding, every reasonable provision desirable for the moral and religious education of those children who attend our Common Schools has been made; at the same time there is sufficient protection against the infidel, ignorant, bigoted tendencies of false teaching. There are provisions for ministers visiting all our public schools and for imparting such religious instruction as they may desire—and this without respect to any particular creed or sect or nationality. There are also very excellent and appropriate forms of prayer provided for opening and dismissing. In the selection of Teacher, none can receive certificates of qualification "until satisfactory proof of good moral character" is furnished. The great majority of Local Superintendents, and members of examining Board, are ministers of religion. The people of Ontario, and the parents and guardians of the pupils are just as zealous to promote true and undefiled religion among those committed to their care as the Telegraph is. Our Teachers, too, are in general as law abiding, respectable and moral a class of citizens as the Teachers of any other country in the world—being, generally, members of the different denominations that obtain amongst us. From a somewhat intimate connection with our Common School system from its introduction, from an intimate knowledge of the character of about 400 Common School Teachers—during a period of twenty-five years connected with them, together with the generally accepted growth of the people of Canada in intelligence in morality, wealth and respectability—we have no hesitation in saying that the charge of the Telegraph is a wilful slander on our school system, on our Teachers, on our ministers of religion and on the people of Canada, who are strongly attached to the present Common School system, and are only afraid lest our legislators may, through wicked advisers, return to the system of the past, or introduce anything into the system that would tend to impair it. The assertion, therefore, that the system is utterly infidel, is as wicked as it is false.

We have no sympathy with Mr. Ryerson's "compulsory attendance" scheme; it is uncalled for, despotic in its tendencies, and will, if carried into effect, be the cause of much heart burning and ill-feeling among the people; and we sincerely hope that our Legislators will utterly reject it—as incompatible with the liberal principles of a free people, and we would willingly unite with the Telegraph to prevent its becoming law; but in doing so, it is wrong, it is dishonorable, and it is wicked to brand the whole system as "infidel," unless it can be proved to be infidel. But how can the Telegraph so unceremoniously condemn our Common School system as infidel and yet uphold the Toronto University versus Denominations? If our Common School system is infidel because not under the control of the sects, what must the University be, which is under no religious control? But why follow this any further? The fact is, if our Common School system must be cried down because infidel, let the Telegraph set to work honestly to erase the University also, and let us have education—common and superior—under the control of the religious element, from which good Lord deliver us; for just as sure as this ever takes place, ignorance, bigotry, fanaticism, infidelity and persecution will follow, and all the consequences as seen in those lands where priestly power prevails.

Our Legislators should be careful how they deal with this great question; it will effect more than the character or office of Dr. Ryerson; it will effect the prosperity and happiness of Canadians in the future. Let them, therefore, see that our noble national system for educating and elevating the mass shall not be destroyed by the introductions of bigotry, which is as bad as infidelity—by educating our children from their very infancy to look upon their playmates and companions as irreligious and heretic because their parents may differ in their choice of the religion of a Teacher. It is very remarkable that those seats that now make the out cry about an infidel Common School system scarcely ever availed themselves of the provisions of the School Law to go to the schools and spend an hour in imparting religious instructions. Teachers can be found by the hundreds to testify that the visits of ministers to their schools to see after the religious training of the children have been few and far between; in too many cases not an average of one visit in every few years, and we doubt not but that those "scores" of families of the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church, who are so pious (?) that they "would as soon send their children to jail as to the Common Schools" are a class with whom Catechisms are preferable to Bibles, and to whom bigotry is more palatable than the great Commandments on which "hang the Law and the Prophets."

The Telegraph has fought manfully against Denominational plunder of the public purse, and for this it deserves praise, but it is painful to find it now slandering the system of Common School education in order to give vent to some personal ill-will against its founder.

The Protestant Home Committee beg to thank the undermentioned friels for donations in November: Mrs. Paxter, two loaves of bread, turnips and pork; Mrs. Edwards, apples and six bushels turnips; Mrs. White, (Monaghan) quarter mutton and 3 beef hearts; Mrs. Tighe, bag of apples; Miss Roger, grapes, lemons, cakes, &c., for invalids; Mrs. Brooks, barl of soft soap; Mrs. Best, shoes and boots; A Friend in the country, load of turnips; A Friend, quarter of lamb; Theodore Clementi, Esq., 4 fore quarters venison.

Whelan will be brought up to-morrow to see whether or not he should stand a new trial. The Toronto Telegraph says that a number of "roughs" have left Montreal with the intent of rescuing him.

UNION SCHOOL.

The Board met on Tuesday evening. Present:—Mr. Strickland and Messrs. Clarke, Dumble, Cameron, Coulter, Cluxton and Coulter.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. The Secretary reported donations from the Governor and the Mechanics' Institute, consisting the use of the school library on condition of allowing the boys in the Senior Division the free use of the Institute library.

On motion of Mr. Dumble, the request of the Institute was granted.

A communication from Miss Curtis was read, in reference to re-appointment and also asking an increase of salary of forty dollars for the next year. Also, from Miss Borrowman, requesting the Board to consider her salary and to grant her an increase. Her salary at present being only $240.

A communication from the Janitor was also read, asking the Board to appoint a committee to consider the labor of the Janitor and the salary at present allowed to him, as the increased labor of cleaning, repairing, heating and other duties were occupying the time of his whole family as well as a great portion of his own.

Moved by Mr. Clarke, and seconded by Mr. Toole—It was agreed to give an increase of $40 to Miss Borrowman and Miss Curtis. Their salary to be $280 each.

On motion of Mr. Dumble, and seconded by Mr. Cluxton—The communication of the Janitor was referred to a committee consisting of Messrs. Helm, Coulter, Cameron and the mover, with directions to report next meeting of Board.

Accounts of Mr. Keegan for $13.12½, and and of Mr. Dumble, for wood, of $25.25, were passed.

The Principal then read his monthly report for November, showing the school to be in a very satisfactory state. The attendance being—

In N. W. School, 37; average 29.
Mrs. Charlier's, 51; average 45.
Mrs. Flavelle's, 57; average 53.
Miss Curtis', 61; average 58.
Mr. Taylor's, 55; average 50.
Mr. McFaul's, 26; average 26.
Miss Borrowman's, 35; average 33.
Miss Beatty's, 45; average 42.
Miss Hardie's, 35; average 33.
Miss Hatton's, 42; average 38.
Principal's, 25; average 21.

A total attendance of 596; average 464. Boys, 251; girls, 255—and showing an increase in the past month of an average of 21.

The Principal also reported the state of the School as on the whole progressing, and requested attention to the room in which the Infant Department was kept—it being too small and not otherwise suitable. After some discussion it was agreed to fix the room for temporary occupation and to set to work and get a Ward School in a desirable place to meet the wants of the South and Centre Wards.

Mr. Cluxton spoke in favor of Ward Schools, if each Ward should be made to bear its own expense.

Mr. Dumble thought it would be unjust to ask such a thing. The Schools were a necessity, and were for the Town and the Town should bear the expense.

After considerable discussion a committee was appointed to investigate the matter—in regard to site and estimated cost, and to report.

The Secretary was directed to tender for 100 cords of wood for the use of the School.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Dr. Adam Clark, in his writings on "Moral Law," says: "There are busy-bodies, impertinent meddlers with other people's business; prying into other people's circumstances and affairs; magnifying or minifying, mistaking or understating everything; newsmongers and tell-tales; an abominable race, the curse of every neighborhood where they live, and a pest to society. These are human devils; they may be the means of making you angry, even without any sinful pretence."

I was struck with the force of the Doctor's language on reading a letter in your last issue signed Another Ratepayer. Passing over his palpable misstatement as to the condition of Bethune street, and his indelicate remarks about the Town Council, I will endeavor, briefly, to reply to his personal attack upon myself. I do this the more readily, because, notwithstanding he refuses to allow you to give me his name, you say that he is a person of some standing in the town.

Ratepayer says: "But a great many are asking for what was such a sacrifice of principle and justice made especially by men who still consider they have some to be guided by. The answer is given that one of the Councillors, and the chief mover in the matter, had stock given him by the Lessees to make him a Director, that forthwith he was appointed Vice-President, (I was elected President) and having been placed in this position by the Lessees, he was consequently bound to do as they directed him, and he did this only. It is further reported that besides a free pass on the road for himself and his friends, he has many advantages in the shape of reduced freight, drawbacks, the use of store houses, cars, &c., that his neighbors cannot obtain." And, his authority for these accusations, as well as others not quoted, is simply, "a great many are asking." It is further reported," and he winds up the whole by saying "whether these statements are correct or not I am not prepared to say." Should this writer not be ashamed to make such statements, in a public newspaper, of such a nature, upon such a foundation, and anonymously too!

His principal charge, and the only one of moment, is, that I have many advantages in the shape of reduced freight, drawbacks, &c. This falsehood will be best answered by asking him to study the letters on this point published in your paper of this week. I have frequently declared before large audiences that I had no advantages in this respect; but if I had sworn to it each men as Another Ratepayer would not be convinced. Men who are a little lax themselves, cannot understand how others can be honest when self interest can be promoted by an opposite course.

With regard to the Company's store houses, I may be allowed to state, that, I own two large store houses on the railway in Lindsay, and I also own another at the station here, and my allotment of the store houses at Millbrook is so small, I have to pay rent for a private one there, and I am the only buyer of grain on the line who pays rent for store houses. At Omemee, where there is room, both the railway and myself have endeavored to establish a market by inducing other buyers to go there, but without success. The Company has only another small storehouse at Bethany, which although small, is also equally divided. Although I was the first to establish grain markets on the line, I have in this respect no preference over others. Ratepayer shows his ignorance again when he says, I have "the use of cars that my neighbors cannot obtain." Mr. Vindon, General Shipping Agent, in Port Hope, is the only receiver and shipper of produce for the buyers on the line; and to enable him to carry out his arrangements, he has the distribution of the cars; this is done to facilitate the business so that when a schooner arrives for any buyer, all the [illegible] his vessel and so on, each buyer having his turn. But even in this [illegible] generally on the [illegible] that I, a dissenter, had the preference. I have [illegible] to speak at times, that I thought, [illegible] my own [illegible] and my friends." It would be a new thing in railway government, if a director was changed for his passage on the Road. The only authority which can grant passes, according to a resolution of the Board of the Directors, rests with the Superintendent, consequently I have no power to grant passes.

With regard to the [illegible] question, I [illegible] reply that these are no such persons as "Lessees." The Road is managed by a Board of five directors, two of whom reside in Cobourg, one in Toronto, and two in Peterborough. The town has surely nothing to complain of on this head. In a future letter I may refer to some of the advantages the town derives from this arrangement. The stock of the Company, in my opinion, [illegible] not worth what was given to any one he would not be much enriched thereby. But I shall be interested to watch the stock, and I have paid the same in cash, much against my will, and with £20 in law costs added. I have never received any return from this very valuable investment.

Now, sir, I think I have answered the paltry accusations, and in conclusion, I will say a word about the right of way on Bethune street.

I have always been opposed to the construction of any railway running to Lakefield. I freely admit the charge of selfishness in this matter. I was satisfied it would build up Lakefield and injure Peterborough; and there are gentlemen in town who heard me boldly and warmly argue against it at a general meeting when the question was first brought up. [illegible] and while Cobourg was making such strenuous exertions in that direction, the Company was compelled to extend the road, otherwise the dislike to spend more money this year. Then the question came up unmistakably would Peterborough give the right of way through the town, or would the Company be compelled to remove their station from Peterborough to Ashburnham—the former route through Mr. Dickson's property having been declared impracticable. The Chemong road was then laid [illegible] and it would cost the Company no more, if so much, to connect there than by the present route. A bridge had to be built across the river in either case. Ashburnham was also anxious to assist, and the bondholders felt annoyed at the continued opposition of the town, and I, therefore, had mind of the Company, that if we did not work hard we should have to travel to Ashburnham if we wished to transact business with the road. It [illegible] that this would not improve the condition of Peterboro, and I and others fought hard and we succeeded in preventing such a calamity. No Councillor ever refused to pay the owners of property on Bethune street for the damages sustained by them. We all felt that the minority in such cases must suffer for the benefit of the majority, and this being the case, the majority should pay for the injury sustained.

Notwithstanding the continued and violent opposition that has on all occasions been offered to the railway, the bondholders have never retaliated, but have gone on steadily doing all in their power to help the town. They have paid the interest punctually, and this much-abused road has made Peterborough what it is to-day—one of the most flourishing and prosperous towns in the Dominion.

W. CLUXTON.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner

SIR,—Will you kindly insert the following correspondence, and oblige,

Yours truly,
W. CLUXTON.

Peterboro, 1st December, 1868.

Peterborough, Nov. 28, 1868.

A. T. WILLIAMS, Esq.,
Superintendent P. H. L. & B. R. R. Co.

DEAR SIR,—Now that our railway discussion, are apparently over, I wish to place myself right with my fellow townsmen who may have had their minds some what disturbed by the insinuations and slanders of our opponents. In every discussion and movement connected with the Port Hope Railway, I have taken an active part. I invariably found that the interests of the Town and the interests of the Railway were identical; and I considered that I could not advocate the one without benefitting the other nor could I oppose one without injuring the other, as the success of the one entailed the prosperity of the other; I am satisfied that for the very favorable position of the Town, to-day, we are in an exceedingly great degree indebted to the Port Hope Railway.

During these discussions, when less powerful arguments were wanting, our opponents have not failed to make use of one which is generally well received, and found, at the moment, not easily met, viz:—uninterrupted motives.

Now, the object of this and other letters which I am writing, is to dispose of these insinuations and slanders. Will you therefore oblige me by stating in reply,—

1st,—Have any of my goods been carried on the road at a less rate of freight than others paid for the same class?

2nd,—Have I at any time had my grain carried at a less rate than the published tariff, or for less than others paid? and,

3rdly,—Have I had any advantages in the shape of allowances, drawbacks, or otherwise, beyond those granted to other merchants doing business with the road?

Yours faithfully,
W. CLUXTON

SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE,
Port Hope, Nov. 27, 1868.

W. CLUXTON, Esq.,

DEAR SIR,—

...ertain extent.—Suppose it a blessing to the virtuous, and a great curse to the vicious. To suppose that leisure means a chance to do nothing, or next to nothing, would be a very dangerous blunder. It means only the substitution of a chosen employment for an involuntary one. The evening party, the singing-school, the sleigh-drive, the neighborly visit, are things our families are all the better of; but for real enjoyment, without alloy, give us the quiet evening at home. The family that loves home is almost certain to have a happy future before its members, and the parent who succeeds in getting his family to love home, does more than he thinks. To this end a provision of wholesome reading is now-a-days indispensable, and better reading we could not recommend than the various publications of John Dougall & Son, Montreal, the prospectus of which, for 1869, will be found in another column.

The Right Honourable Sir John Young, of Bailieborough Castle, County Cavan, P.C., K.C.B, G.C.M.G., formerly M.P. for Cavan; successively Joint Secretary of the Treasury from 1841 to 1844; Chief Secretary for Ireland from 1852 to 1855; Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Isles; lately Governor of New South Wales, and now appointed Governor-General of Canada, was born 21st August, 1807, and succeeded his father as second Baronet, 15th March, 1848, having married 5th April, 1836, Adelaide Amelia, daughter of the late Marchioness of Bute, by her first husband, Edward Tufte Dalton, Esq. The following details of his lineage are condensed from Burke's Peerage and Baronetage, from which it will be seen that, like many of his fellow-countrymen of the north of Ireland, he is of Scottish extraction. He is a descendant of John Young, Provost of Edinburgh in 1541, who married Margaret Scrimgeour, of the ancient and noble family of Scrimgeour, and sister of Henry Scrimgeour, the celebrated scholar, Professor of Philosophy and of Civil Law, at Geneva. Their father was Scrimgeour, of Glaswell, the descendant of an immediate branch of the Scrimgeours of Dudhope, who were created hereditary standard-bearers of the Kings of Scotland, in 1567, by Alexander I., and became afterwards Earls of Dundee. His second son, Sir Peter Young, was assistant tutor with George Buchanan, to King James IV. He was three times sent by James as Ambassador to Denmark, besides going elsewhere, and filled other important offices of State. He was knighted in 1606, by James, then King of England, and is said to have enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his royal master till His Majesty's death. Sir Peter Young was a man of distinguished abilities and finished education. His uncle, Henry Scrimgeour, bequeathed him his valuable library, rich in Greek M.S.S. Some of the descendants of this family went to Ireland and settled in Ulster; of these, the ancestor of Sir John Young, Bart, the Governor-General, was the Rev John Young, a Clergyman of the Established Church, whose mother was a sister of Sir Peter Young. This clergyman married in Scotland, a daughter of the Earl of Douglas, and afterwards went to the North of Ireland. He obtained considerable landed property through the lady's father, by the exchange of lands in the Counties of Donegal and Derry with Lord Abercorn, for an equivalent in Scotland, as a settlement on his daughter and her family. His eldest son, James Young, resided in the County of Donegal, was an active partisan at the siege of Derry, and attainted in consequence by James II. John Young, of Coolkeiragh, the great grandson of this James Young, married a grand daughter of the Rt.Rev. Andrew Knox, Bishop of Raphoe. By this marriage the estate of Lough Esk, County of Donegal, came into the possession of Thomas, a younger son of John Young, to whom it was willed by his uncle, Thomas Knox. This second son was the Rev. John Young, of Eden, County of Armagh, who had several children. The second of these, William Young, Esq., of Bailieborough Castle, the father of the new Governor General, was, for a time an East Indian Director, and was created a Baronet on the 28th of August, 1821.

Dastardly Attempt to Upset a Railway Train.—A fiendish attempt was made on Friday afternoon, to throw a train on the Hamilton and Toronto branch of the Great Western Railway off the track. The train left Toronto for this city, at 2 o'clock, loaded with passengers, and at a point between Port Credit and Oakville, where there is a high embankment on each side, the engine driver descried a heavy iron rail laid across the track. He immediately reversed the steam, but not in sufficient time to prevent the cow-catcher striking the rail. Happily an accident was averted, and no harm was done to the train. There is a piece of woods at the spot, and along the edge, a considerable distance from the track, two men were seen sitting, but immediately on seeing that the diabolical deed was not accomplished, they ran off, and no attempt was made to follow them. There seems to be little doubt that the fellows seen had placed the obstruction on the track, and that plunder was the object of the hellish act. It is much to be deplored that the scoundrels should escape their just dues, but we hope they will yet be caught. The only injury done was the breaking of a part of the cow-catcher.—Spectator Crimes of Women.—The criminal statistics of England and Wales for the year ending at Michaelmas, 1867, shows that 3,786 women were committed for trial charged with indictable offences, and 15,549 men—one woman to every four men. An appreciable number of offences against the person must be acts of men only, and the large number of crimes requiring physical strength—great daring, or special knowledge or opportunity, are commonly the work of men; but the returns show that women have their part in deeds of violence. In England and Wales 139 persons were committed for trial for murder in this year, and as many as 58, considerably more than a third were women. In the absence of fuller returns we can only guess that most of those were mothers desirous to hide their shame or rid themselves of a burden, which was bringing them to want and despair. Seven women were sentenced to death in the year—four servants, a charwoman, a candlewoman and a factory worker.

The Pope offending the Roman Nobles.—The Pope has conferred the dignity of Prince Assistant of the Throne on the son of the Duke of Gallaie, a boy six years old. Mlle Hedouin, was sergeant in the army of General Oudinot when it marched into Rome. On that occasion he was seen from a window by the Duchess of Gallese, who, attracted by his fine appearance, bestowed on him her hand and fortune, together with a Roman dukedom. Soon after the Duchess died, when the Duke married the pretty daughter of a shopkeeper, and the boy is the offspring of the second marriage. There have hitherto been but two Prince Assistants of the Throne, Colonna and Orsini, who, held the dignitary by hereditary right, and its bestowal on a child of foreign extract—and plebeian blood has given offence not only to the Roman nobility. By such acts the Pope alienates all classes, and while the people regard him as a despot, the aristocracy denounces him as a revolutionist.—Pall Mall Gazette.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygiene by the Great Obstruent Remedy, which has so often checked the torrent of those fatal diseases of the throat which impenitence and exposure have united to make so common.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, doubtful disease, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

In complying with your request to again become a candidate I have only to state that if elected I will endeavour to discharge the duties of the office to the best of my ability.

Your obedient servant,

Enlargement and Improvement
OF
THE WEEKLY GLOBE.

Programme for 1869.

THE GLOBE PRINTING COMPANY respectfully announce that, in addition to the great improvements which have recently been made on THE WEEKLY GLOBE—and which have been so warmly acknowledged by the readers of the paper and by the public press—very extensive and most valuable further improvements will be made on the paper for the coming year. A spacious new Press-room and Despatch-office has recently been erected in connection with THE GLOBE buildings; a new font of type from the foundry of Messrs. Miller & Richard, Edinburgh, has been imported from Scotland; one of Messrs. Hoe & Co's celebrated Lightning Presses, capable of throwing off 5,000 impressions per hour of THE DAILY GLOBE, is now in operation; and a second new Press, especially constructed for printing THE WEEKLY GLOBE with great rapidity and in the highest style of workmanship, will shortly be added to the Machinery of the Establishment. The sheet on which the paper is printed will be somewhat of a very superior quality. The staff of Editors, Reporters, Contributors and Correspondents has been recently greatly strengthened, and nothing will be left undone, in the year 1869 to maintain the fame of THE WEEKLY GLOBE, as beyond comparison, the best conducted and most attractive weekly journal in the Dominion.

But, in addition to the general improvements now being effected in the conduct of the paper, several SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS are about to be added for the coming year that will greatly enhance its value and interest to all classes of readers throughout the country. Foremost among these, is the addition of

AN AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Not a collection of mere clippings from Agricultural Journals—but a full and well prepared weekly compendium of Agricultural, Horticultural and Floral WEEKLY GLOBE by a regular staff of competent and intelligence and information—written for THE practised writers, and quite up to the best light of the day. Everything affecting the farming interest—such as the management of field crops, the bare-yard, the stable, the dairy, the orchard, the poultry-yard, the vineyard, the apiary, the kitchen-garden and the flower-garden—will come within the weekly review of this department. The improvements in machinery, the best breed of cattle, the best systems of feeding, the most approved processes of cheese and butter-making, the best mode of packing, and the best markets to sell in, will all form subjects of profitable discussion. The sheep and wool interests will also receive special attention; and the doings at agricultural fairs, shows, auctions and society meeting will be carefully and fully chronicled. The Markets for Canadian produce, at home and abroad, will receive an amount of careful attention that has not been heretofore accorded to them in any Journal. The quantity of agricultural matter thus proposed to be published annually in THE WEEKLY GLOBE will exceed the contents of any purely agricultural now circulated, and will be worth the whole annual subscriptions of the paper!

Another new and valuable improvement proposed to be made in 1869, is the increased space devoted to Literary Matter. In past years it has been usual to publish in THE WEEKLY GLOBE one tale, continued in successive numbers for months together. For the coming year, it is proposed to devote a much larger space than heretofore to the publication of Racy and Cleverly-Written Tales, and to give in each week's issue a much greater diversity than ever before.

It is also proposed to publish every week a full summary of Religious and Ecclesiastical Intelligence from all parts of the world. This summary will embrace the operations of all the churches, and will be conducted in a spirit entirely free from sectarian exclusiveness.

Very great pains will hereafter be taken to place before the readers of THE WEEKLY GLOBE a full and clear summary of the Debates in the Provincial and Federal Parliaments. The speeches will be condensed from the full Reports of THE DAILY GLOBE, and the several measures before Parliament will be carefully explained.

The British, American and other Foreign News will continue to be published fully and promptly. The Commercial Intelligence from all parts of the world, will be culled from the most reliable sources and kept up to the latest dates.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE SHEET!

To make room for all these improvements, THE GLOBE PRINTING COMPANY have resolved greatly to enlarge the size of THE WEEKLY GLOBE. Fourteen Columns of Reading Matter will hereafter be added to the paper—making this journal without exception THE LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER IN THE WORLD! And notwithstanding the heavy additional expenses entailed by these improvements, it has been resolved to offer the paper for the coming year at the same Low Price as formerly—Two Dollars per Annum.

CLUB RATES FOR 1869.

It has also been resolved to continue the same inducements for the Formation of Clubs as were offered last year. These were, and will be for 1869, as follows:—

Six Copies, one year	$10 00
Ten " "	15 00
Twenty Copies, one year	30 00

And a copy of the DAILY GLOBE to the person who gets up the Club of Eighty.

Payment must always be in advance.

Each paper is addressed separately, and may be sent to any Post Office.

When additional names are added to any Club during the year, they must be sent to THE GLOBE Office by the person who made up the Club; and the money sent with such additional names must be such a proportion of the year's subscription at the Club rate as will pay up in the expiration of the Club.

Clergymen and Teachers of Common Schools are entitled to receive THE WEEKLY GLOBE for one dollar per annum payable in advance.

Orders and remittances should be addressed to "THE GLOBE PRINTING COMPANY," TORONTO.

☞ All subscriptions, (including clubs,) sent in before the 1st of January, will entitle the parties to receive the paper until the 31st December, 1869

PROSPECTUS FOR 1869
OF THE
Publications of John Dougall & Son,
MONTREAL.

THE phrase "Get the Best" has passed into a proverb, and all will agree that the best Family Paper is one that has something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not excluding the children, and which includes within its scope all the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal.—Such a paper the MONTREAL WITNESS has aimed to be from its commencement, 23 years ago; and that the country was prepared for such an enterprise is shown by its success. The WITNESS in its three editions—"Daily," "Semi-Weekly," and "Weekly"—issues about 16,000 copies; and, consequently, reaches probably Eighty Thousand readers; but what are they out of a population of four millions, all of whom we desire to reach?

Our publications are as follows, and we respectfully call attention to their cheapness as well as quality, and ask all the friends of interesting and wholesome literature everywhere to aid us in extending their circulation. Nor will their circulation interfere with that of local papers, which are a necessity in their respective localities, and which are generally speaking, very meritorious:—

1.—The DAILY WITNESS contains as much reading matter as the ordinary Dailies, and of a choice quantity, at about half the price, viz., $3 per annum. Besides being a first-class Family Paper, it is especially valuable to business men on account of its abundant commercial intelligence, prices current, &c.

2.—The MONTREAL WITNESS, Eight Pages, Semi-Weekly, $2 per annum, contains all that appears in the Daily, except part of the purely city matter and advertisements.

3.—The WEEKLY WITNESS, Eight Pages, $1 per annum, contains the greater part of the News, Contemporary Press, and Editorials of the SEMI-WEEKLY, with a portion of the Family-Reading and Prices Current.

4.—The

Kort Kobb on Lacrosse.

I flatter myself I understand something about athletic sports. I have had a passion for that sort of thing ever since I was old enough to toll him. In any game in which physical superiority asserts itself I am (so to speak) there. I have at about seven up, base ball, blind man's buff, pitch and toss tent, cricket, boat the slipper, and other games, the practice of which has developed the Anglo-Saxon into the finest specimen of manhood that ever drank bitter beer or took the benefit of the Bankruptcy act. Among all the recreations, however, Lacrosse stands pre-eminent.—There is more exercise to be got out of it for the money, than any other game I know of, except running away from the police.—It is not quite so fatiguing as walking out of a fourth-story window, or playing first fiddle to a railroad collision, but it is very much ahead of sawing wood in a penitentiary. It combines all the pleasing characteristics of an election row, with the rush of a charge of cavalry. It toughens the sinews and developes an appetite for whisky equal. It agitates the chest and quakes muscles or the governor bowl when you go home with your shirt in ribbons and a most embarrassing rent in your trousers. Lacrosse is the national game of Canada. It was taken handed down to us by the noble red men of the forest, being about the only thing we have left them to hand down.—The Indian word for the game is Wahegh-hoocaghaisaorghwaogwoeee, which has never been pronounced by any white man yet, save one, who was immediately carried away with a chicken jay and a complicated structure in his face. Wahegh—that is to say Lacrosse—is played by twenty-four men, twelve against twelve. Each player is armed with a long stick, bent at one end like a fish hook, with pieces of string drawn across it and, up and down it, giving it the appearance of a semi-circle township laid out in concessions. With this instrument you pick up the ball and run with it (as if you were running from your creditors), or throw it towards the goal—two upright sticks placed about five feet apart—at one end of the field. If you don't succeed in putting it through the goal you can pitch into the umpire, who is placed there to see fair play, and be abused by both sides.—When the ball is not in your part of the field you may improve your time and keep yourself in practice by wheeling your nearest partner over the shins, arms or any other part of the body that is exposed.—This serves a two-fold purpose—it demoralizes the enemy and saves catching cold.—Remember one thing, hit hard and hit often. A broken arm or two among your opponents towards the end of a hotly contested game may very often change defeat into victory.

I have a vivid recollection of my first game of Lacrosse. I was one of the first to get the ball, and with an exultant whoop I bore down on the goal at a pace that would give Dexter the heaves. Victory was almost certain when half-a-dozen of the other side made a rush at me, and——Well, two weeks afterwards I came to my senses, with my left leg in a wooden box, all my front teeth gone and six inches of hickory stick and an ounce of catgut diffused through my system. This was my first game at Lacrosse, and—my last.

Lacrosse is a very fine game for bachelors and outcasts, but a married man, with his life insured, and a family depending upon him, has no business there. It puts one too much in mind of earthquakes and threshing machines, and that sort of thing. If I had no alternative to-morrow but to play a game of Lacrosse or participate in a steamboat explosion. It's a very excellent game, but it's not homœopathic enough to be taken in large quantities.

KORN KOBB, Jun.

DIAMOND CUT DIMOND.—A young lady was engaged to a man who, though aggreeable to her, was disliked by her father. Of course he would not consent to their union, and she determined to elope. The man placed a ladder to the window, and in a few minutes she was in his arms. They mounted a horse, and were soon at some distance from the house. After a while the lady broke silence by saying—"Well, you see what proof I have given you of my affection; I hope you will make a good husband." He was a surly fellow, and gruffly answered—"Perhaps I may, and perhaps not." She made him no reply, but after a silence of some minutes, she suddenly exclaimed—"Oh, what shall we do? I have left my money behind!" "Then," said he, "we must go back and fetch it." They were soon again at the house; the ladder was placed; the lady remounted; while the illnatured lover remained below. But she delayed coming, and so he gently called—"Are you coming?" She looked out of the window, and said—"Perhaps I may, and perhaps not;" then shut down the window, and left him to return alone.

The Rev. Dr. Blank once told a little anecdote of Mr. James Harper, the N. Y. publisher. 'I asked the Mayor,' said Dr. Blank, 'what he did?' I said to him, 'I know that Mr. John Harper attends to the business; Mr. Wesley Harper looks after the literary correspondence; Mr. Fletcher Harper receives authors and looks after new books and the Magazines—but you, Mr. Mayor, I have never been able to discover what you do?' 'I'll tell you,' answered the Mayor, in a whisper, 'but you must not let it out. I entertain the boys.'

A Southern exchange says: An old deformed negro woman was passing the street. A fashionable Miss, troubled considerably with the 'Grecian bend,' turned around and looked after the poor old negro woman, and was rather disposed to make fun of her deformity. The old negro woman stopped and looked at her a minute or two, and very truthfully remarked: 'Lor Miss, you needn't be pokin fun at me, kase de Lor a'might knows you's a bigger courosity to look at dan I is.' The young lady 'humped' herself.

Soon after Pitt became Chancellor of the Exchequer, Paley preached a sermon to a congregation composed of the young statesman and a crowd of place-hunters. He took for his text—"There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes;" then, looking round the church, he added, "But what are they among so many?"

A telegraphic message passing through the hands of an operator lately, addressed to "A Gillespie, Clerk, Steamer Magnolia," was ingeniously written off as follows:

A Gilles,
Pie Clerk,
Steamer Magnolia.

An actor, on his benefit night, having a very limited audience, when he came to the oft-quoted passage—"'Tis not in mortals to command success; we'll do more, Sempronius—we'll deserve it," heaved a deep sigh, and substituted for the last line, "We'll do more, Sempronius—we'll do without it."

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canadian Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and inconvertable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Evenstown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Canseom, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Nepanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

MOTHERS! MOTHERS!

IF your children are suffering with worms, use Dr. B. MORRIS'S VEGETABLE WORM LOZENGES, the best and safest medicine ever offered to the public. They are pleasant to the taste and will be taken readily by the youngest child. Good for either children or adults, and are recommended by thousands who have used them. Ask for Dr. B. Morris's Worm Lozenges, and take no others. Sold everywhere at 25 cents per box.

Peterboro, Sept. 2, 1868. 36

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS!

THE undersigned wishes to caution the public against purchasing medicines from B. Morris, a brother of Dr. B. Morris. The said B. Morris having imposed on the public in several instances, this is to inform them that my medicines have the name of Dr B. Morris on them. All others are spurious.

OF

CONSUMPTION!

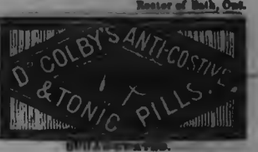
IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonee Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, experiencing great quantities of matter, and had a great cold about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the coughing enough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different remedies, but all without any good effect. Squire Patterson of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonee Remedy; I procured three bottle, at once, with the Pills; no sooner did I commence using it, I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, chills, sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I would gladly make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER C. V. MILLER,
Earnestown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman, Peter C. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

Rev. W. F. S. HARPER,
Rector of Bath, Ont.



ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

Poetry.

ON TOBACCO.

Drinking whiskey is a curse,
Smoking is as bad, or worse;
Neither habit is required,
Both are vile and un-refined.
Drinking leads the way to death,
Smoking taints the sweetest breath;
Wastes your money, wastes your time,
Injures health, and leads to crime.
See those sallow visag'd wretches
With tobacco, pipes and matches;
Enter not their filthy rooms,
Stifled with tobacco fumes;
There they sit intently smoking,
Spitting, grinning, laughing, jocking.
In affliction or enjoyment
Smoking seems their whole employment,
Smokers in the gay saloons
Sometimes spit in the spittoons;
But among the filthy poor,
Spitting often stains the floor.
Viler habit still you'll trace
In that sickly pallid face—
In that vile tobacco chewer,
Filthy called saliva brewer—
Draining off his juicy matter,
Spurting out tobacco water!
Oft the dirty fluid flows
Down his chin, and stains his clothes.
Say, can such a man have piety?
Is he fit for your society?
If I take a walk abroad,
Through the streets, along the road,
Half the people whom I meet,
On the road or in the street,
Twist their mouths like hare or rabbit,
Practising the filthy habbit;
Smoking, spitting, sucking, puffing,
Chewing, spurting, sneezing, snuffing—
Thus in every clime and nation,
Smoking seems their occupation.
Smokers of the higher classes,
Who spend hours at their glasses,
Strut along with dandy airs,
Pulling their perfum'd cigars.
Yes, and newly'p'd naughty boys
Lay aside their childish toys,
Play the swell and ape his airs,
With their meerschaums and cigars.
Little urchin, mean and tatter'd,
Shoeless, and with mud bespatter'd,
Sneak about and gather up
Cigar ends which dandies drop;
There they smoke, and twist their faces
Into all sort of grimaces.
O! ye smokers, one and all,
Young and aged, great and small,
Quit this habit, so pernicious,
Tho' to you it seems delicious;
Give it up, and show your sense,
Guard your morals, save your pence,
Can it be you're so lour'd
That you can't, or won't be cured?
Tell me is it not a crime,
Wasting money, wasting time?
Precious money thrown away—
Often twenty cents per day—
Smoking, while the needy poor,
Hungry, shiver at your door.
Ye who to your habits pander,
Far more on Tobacco squander
Than there to mission given
To enlist the world for heaven,
Ye who say ye are forgiven,
And who hope to enter heaven.

"John Anderson My Jo."

AN ACCIDENT IN THE LIFE OF A BACKWOODSMAN.

(From the Kilmarnock Standard.)

The following story, which shows in some measure the influence of Scottish Song, was related some years ago to a friend of mine by an old gentleman named Massey, as they sat together, one evening, on the trunk of a fallen tree, in the wilds of Missouri, talking of Scotland and the heart-touching strains of her immortal bards:—

In an iron-smelting work, which belonged to the said Mr. Massey, and which was situated on the banks of the Merrimack River, a Scotchman of the name of Jamie was employed. He was an active, industrious man, a sweet singer, and delighted to chant the songs of his native land. One of his favorite ditties was the well-known "John Anderson my Jo," which he sung so frequently, when engaged at his occupation, that his fellow workmen became also enamored of it, and like him, kept singing it almost every day from morning till night. Indeed, it was so often repeated that it became a sort of annoyance, and Mr. Massey, though fond of music, got sick of it, as he said, and determined to be rid of Jamie, whom he looked upon as the sole cause of the evil. One pay night, therefore, after receiving his wages, he was told by his employer that his services were no longer required.

'What's wrang?' said Jamie, in a tone of surprise, 'does my wark no gie ye satisfaction?'

'I have no fault to find with your work,' was the reply.

'Well, then, wad ye like me to do mair o't?'

'I have no complaint to make regarding the quantity.'

'Something maun be amiss, then,' returned Jamie, 'for I'm sure ye're seadin' men, and I would tak it as a great obligation if ye wad let me ken your reason for dismissin' me.'

'Well,' said Mr. Massey, somewhat impatiently, 'the fact is, you're perpetually singing "John Anderson my Jo"—the other men have caught the infection, and keep chanting it along with you till the thing has become perfectly intolerable; indeed, go where I will, in or around the district, I hear nothing but the same tune ringing in my ears.'

'O, is that a' that's wrang, sir?' exclaimed Jamie, 'I'm glad it's nae waur, and as ye hae aye been a kind and discreet master, ye'll perhaps aloo me to wark for you another month, and I'll promise to keep frae singin it during that time.'

Mr. Massey, who esteemed Jamie as a man and a steady worker, agreed to his proposal, and he continued to labor day after day, keeping his word most religiously. But when the setting sun of the last day of the month told that his probationary period had expired, his eye sparkled with joy, and hurrying to his employer, he said: 'The month's out, sir, and the tune is done.' Then, as if his whole soul longed to burst forth in a stream of melody, he instantly sang 'John Anderson my Jo' from beginning to end with the greatest enthusiasm. Again addressing Mr. Massey, he said:—

'I wadna, sir, engage wi' you or ony ither body on the same terms as I did last, though a' the wealth o' the world was laid at my feet. What man wad be compelled to keep frae singing the blithesome songs o' his native land? A man miserable mouth never gaed owre my head, but God be praised it is now ended.

Mr. Massey laughed heartily at his earnest enthusiastic manner, and, seeing he derived so much real enjoyment from chanting the ballads of his country, said he would not ask him to give it up altogether, provided he would keep within the bounds of moderation. Jamie acquiesced, and continued for a considerable time in the same work, warbling occasionally his favorite song with true Caledonian feeling.

But, although naturally of a cheerful disposition, his happiness was as yet incomplete, for he had then a wife and children residing in a distant part of the country, and he longed to enjoy with them that domestic felicity which is to be found only in the circle of a virtuous and affectionate family. For the purpose of joining them he therefore left the iron work, where in the lapse of time he was almost forgotten, except in connection with the song of 'John Anderson my Jo,' which continued to be a favorite one in the locality.

Some years after his departure, Mr Massey, happened to go on business to a place where a detachment of the United States Army was stationed. On his arrival there, amongst other news, he was informed that one of the said detachment was under sentence of death for desertion—a crime, according to my informant, which had been so frequent about the time spoken of that awful punishment was deemed necessary to prevent its further occurrance. He was also told that the unhappy man was to suffer on the following day, and though he had often heard of persons being in similar circumstances, he felt he knew not why, an unusual anxiety to visit and converse with the illfated soldier; and acting under the immediate impulse of his feelings he hastened to the prison in which he was confined. After much solicitation he was admitted into his presence, but guess Mr. Massey's astonishment and agony of soul when he discovered that the condemned soldier was no other than his old esteemed workman, Jamie, Nor was Jamie less amazed at such a time and in such a place by his old employer. Alas! poor fellow, he was in no humor, as he used to be for singing 'John Anderson my Jo. The most gloomy thoughts occupied his mind, and his condition was one of intense misery.

At Mr. Massey's request he briefly related all that had happened to him since they parted. After leaving the iron work he had failed in procuring employment, and, as a means of support, was under the necessity of enlisting as a soldier. He had been for sometime on the frontier service, but coming to the place where he now was, and finding that he was within two hundred miles of his wife and family—a distance, it would seem, which is thought no great matter in that country—he was induced, from strong paternal affection, from the idea of visiting them, and for this purpose he left, without permission, his military duties, though he was conscious, at the same time, that by so doing he was placing his own life in the most imminent danger. Unfortunately for himself, however, he was captured before he got far on the way—tried by a court-martial, and sentenced, as already mentioned, to suffer death. Having stated these particulars, he pled with an earnest supplicating voice upon his old master to use his influence in getting his sentence mitigated. He wished it, he said not altogether for himself, but the sake of his poor wife and children, whose hearts, he believed, would be crushed with anguish at the news of his untimely end, and the disgraceful circumstances that would attend it.

At these statements a tear of sympathy glistened in the eye of the old man. He spoke in tones of comfort to him, and said whatever he could do would be cheerfully and instantly done; but he cautioned him not to be too sanguine in his expectations, as his influence was very slight, though at a former period he had the honor of having several interviews with the colonel of the regiment.

Bidding Jamie, in the meantime an affectionate farewell, Mr. Massey now left the prison and repaired to his hotel, where the Colonel happened also to be lodged. In the course of the evening they fortunately met, and spent some time together over a social glass. During the conversation Mr. Massey contrived to introduce the subject of Scotland and her thrilling songs, and in true Yankee style, took occasion to relate the humorous anecdote of Jamie and 'John Anderson my Jo.' The Colonel, who was an ardent admirer of the minstrelsy of the 'Land of the Mountain and Flood,' enjoyed the story very much; indeed, he was completely electrified by the recital of it, and in the excitement of the moment he expressed a wish to know something more respecting the individual who had shown himself to be so zealously devoted to his country and its music.

'Then,' said Mr. Massey, 'you have the same man in your regiment; nay, more, he is at this moment in confinement under sentence of death, and——'

'You surprise me!' interrupted the Colonel.

'Oh! if you could save him,' continued the other, 'what an amount of gratitude would I owe you! He, is a real good fellow. It was his strong attachment to his wife and family that tempted him to leave his duty: and my heart-felt conviction is that, after having seen them he would have proved his honesty by returning to the ranks for a more honorable and upright man I never had the pleasure of knowing in any sphere of life.'

The Colonel, apparently moved, by these words, sat for a few minutes in silent thoughtfulness, at length he thus expressed himself—

'The military law, my dear sir, must necessarily be severe; the safety of the commonwealth demands it.'

Mr. Massey heaved an involuntary sigh, and a cloud of despair, if I may so speak, darkened his countenance.

'But something,' resumed the Colonel, 'may yet be done in the case of your friend Up to the hour of his desertion his conduct as a soldier was always praise-worthy in the highest degree; and this, together with what you related of him, speak greatly in his behalf.'

'Would that I could be the means of arresting the melancholy fate that awaits him, ejaculated Mr. Massey, in a desponding account.

'Keep yourself easy, sir,' said the generous commander; 'your account of the man has prepossessed me in his favor, and the probability is that he will not suffer, at least I pledge my word of honor that all the influence I possess shall be exerted to save him.'

At these words the hopes of Mr. Massey somewhat revived. He grasped the hand of the Colonel—proffered him a thousand thanks, and wished him God-speed in his errand of mercy. They then parted for the night.

But to be brief, the consequence of the interview was all that could be desired, for on the following morning Mr. Massey received a note from his military friend containing the much-wished for intelligence that the pardon of Jamie had been granted. The feelings of joy which were awakened in the heart of Mr. Massey by the perusal of that letter need not be described. He felt all that inward satisfaction which invariably arises from the performance of humane actions. He immediately returned a note to the Colonel, expressive of his deepest gratitude; then, like an angel on some heavenly mission, he flew to the prison, where Jamie still lay, and communicated to him the happy result of his exertions. The poor fellow, it need scarcely be said, was overwhelmed with joy, and breathed forth the most grateful acknowledgements to his old master for being the chief instrument, under Providence, of working out his deliverance in so brief a space and so singular a manner. I may add that shortly afterwards, in the hotel, in company with the Colonel, Mr. Massey had again the pleasure of hearing Jamie sing 'John Anderson my Jo' in his usual happy manner.

Poor Jamie! I cannot quit the subject without expressing a hope that he still lives and is happy; for, like the gallant Colonel, I love the man whose heart is devoted to the ballads of his fatherland. I also trust that he now enjoys the society of his beloved wife and family, and feels all that conjugal felicity for the attainment of which he had ventured his life. Long may they be spared together, so that 'When life's day draws near the gloamin',' his fair partner may be enabled to address him in sentiments similar to those which the 'canty auld wife' of the hero of his favorite song gave utterance to when she sang the following touching words:—

'John Anderson, my Jo, John,
We clamb the hill thegither,
And mony a canty day John,
We've had wi' ane anither;
Now, we mann totter doon, John,
But hand in hand we'll go,
And sleep thegither at the fit,
John Anderson, my Jo'. M——

Physiognomy.

The science of physiognomy is not a new thing. Aristotle anticipated it to quite an extent. Some of his observations in regard to it, which are curious if not especially valuable, may be thus summarized. A thick neck indicates a strong character; a thin one a weak character. A well sized neck, not too thick, shows high mindedness; a long slender neck, cowardice; a short one cunning. The animal types these follow are respectively the lion, the stag and the wolf. Thin lips, loose at the ends, and the upper one overlapping, also shows high mindedness; and this, too, belongs to the leonine type, and to that of high spirited dogs. Thick lips, the upper projecting show folly, and belong to the type of the ass and monkey. People with projecting upper lips and prominent gums are apt to be abusive. A nose with thick extremity shows indolence—the bovine type. An aequiline nose, well cleared from the forehead, shows high-mindedness. The same indication is afforded by a round nose flattened at the end. A nose turning rapidly up from the forehead shows impudence. Nostrils wide open show a passionate character.

Fleshy faces show indolence and cowardice; lean faces, diligence; little faces small mindedness; large faces, slowness and stupidity. The middle size is the best. If there are baggy formations about the eyes the subject is fond of drink.—Little eyes are a sign of little mind; great or prominent eyes of stupidity; concave eyes of a mischievous disposition. As to their color, very black eyes shows cowardice as also gray and pale colored eyes; those of the blonde type, and of bright gleaming eyes, indicate courage; glittering eyes, a sensual character. The forehead, if little, shows inaptitude to learning; if very large stupidity; if round, insensibility; if square and symmetrical high mindedness; if heavy and projecting, self-will.

A large head shows insensibility; a little head, lively perception; a peaked head, impudence. Little ears belong to the the monkey tribe, and great ears to the donkey. Even the best kind of dogs have moderate sized ears. As to complexion very dark persons are cowardly. The blonde complexion shows courage; the red, cunning; the sanguine a passionate character; the color resembling that of honey coldness of disposition. Eyebrows drawn down towards the nose, and up to the forehead, indicate silliness; hair rising straight from the head, cowardice (arguing from the effect of extreme fear in causing the hair to bristle) so too, does very crisp hair. Prominence of the forehead, generosity, (the leonine type;) hair growing on the forehead, near the nose, shows meanness.

If you have a yoke of oxen don't be ashamed of them, and give your note for a span of horses.

Don't run for a constable if you may get it, and let the plow stand.

The Salt Wells of Goderich.

AMERICAN VERSUS CANADIAN SALT—THE COMMERCIAL VIEW OF THE QUESTION.

(From the London Free Press.)

The public are aware that an enterprise of much interest to the good people of Goderich has been developed in that town—we refer to the success of the salt wells which have been sunk there during the past eighteen months. The discovery of the brine was quite unlooked for, the result following the search for oil. A well having been sunk there with the expectation of getting petroleum, turned out a blank, no "show" of the greasy fluid rewarding the enterprise of those who bored the rock.—It was then suggested that, by going deeper, salt might possibly be reached, especially as the water obtained at a depth of 500 feet was rather salty in flavour. The drilling was resumed, and at the depth of between one thousand and eleven hundred feet heavy brine was reached, which, it was thought, would yield salt in paying quantities. Before going further a chemical analysis of the brine was obtained, to discover if the properties contained would render the salt valuable for pickling purposes, and also to see if a sufficient percentage of solid salt could be obtained from a given quantity of brine to render the industry profitable. The samples were referred to competent chemists, and their reports being highly satisfactory, it was determined by the Goderich Salt and Petroleum Company—the enterprising pioneers of the salt interest—to erect the necessary works for the manufacture of salt. These works have for about a year been in active operation, and so far have proved a financial success, and notwithstanding the competition offered by the Americans, who seek to swamp the infant enterprise, the works run to a profit. Other companies, following the example of this company, have gone to work and sunk wells and there is no question that Goderich is now in a position to supply all the salt required by Ontario. The wells finished and partly in operation number eight, as follows:—

	Capital.
Goderich Salt and Petroleum Co.	$15,000
Tecumseh	5,000
Dominion	20,000
Huron (in operation)	10,000
Victoria (do)	10,000
Maitland	10,000
Prince Well (new boring)	10,000
Ontario	15,000

Of the above, the first named is the largest, operating with 104 kettles; the Tecumseh is waiting till spring; the Ontario commenced in July, making 60 kettles; Dominion 60 kettles, and Huron 120 kettles, in full operation; Victoria, 60 kettles; Maitland, drilled to salt, operations for the present suspended, with a view to experiment on some cheaper method of evaporation; Prince well down 600 or 700 feet.—We will now attempt to describe the process of salt making. The pumping machinery is precisely the same as that used by oil wells; the "well" is a round hole of from four to five inches in diameter, drilled perfectly straight down over a thousand feet into mother earth, and lined or cased with iron casing to prevent the surrounding earth from "caving in" and filling it up.—Down this well is fixed the pump tubing, about three inches in diameter, which descends to about 600 feet. At the end or bottom of the tubing is fixed the pump, and inside the pump tubing are wooden rods, connected by iron couplings which work the pump valves and force the brine up the tubing to the surface. In the "Goderich Company" they use a 20 horse steam engine, which, by the aid of connecting machinery, works the pump. The brine, which is pumped out at the rate of 500 barrels in 24 hours, flows to a large vat, where it is held till wanted, and connected with the vat are pipes leading to the salt kettles. In the "Goderich Company's" works there are four rows of these kettles, to the number of 104, each holding 140 gallons of brine. They occupy a space of 120 feet long and 64 wide, and are, of course, built in brick-work, and underneath are the furnaces to heat the brine and carry off the vapour. One long furnace runs under each row of kettles, so that four furnaces are employed, each using about four cords of wood per day. When the furnaces are in full blast, the kettles are 'drawn' or emptied every four hours, and then the yield is generally a bushel and a half of salt to each charge. The kettles require cleaning once a day, the process being the clipping off the calcined salt which adheres to the sides, and is only valuable for manure and is sold to the farmers for $2 a ton. The quality of the salt depends much upon the cooking of the brine, as the faster it boils the finer becomes the salt. Another plan of absorbing the water is by evaporation by solar heat; but this process requires extensive work, produces a coarse salt, and has not yet been introduced into Canada. The cost of cordwood at the wells is about $2 to $2.50, and some of the works are about to try coal as a more economical fuel, as it can be laid down at Goderich for $4.50 per ton. The number of men employed at the "Goderich Company's" works comprise fourteen, including engineer and packers. The workmen state that the action of the salt has a singular effect upon their clothes, quickly rotting all cotton garments, rendering it necessary for them to wear woollen clothes, which are not affected by the action of the brine.

Taking the experience of the "Goderich Company," the manufacture of salt costs about $1 per barrell, including the package, which is made for about 30c at the factory. The cartage to the station or warf is 4½ per barrel, and freight to Toronto $24 per car load, and to London $17. The amount turned out by the Company named is about from 90 to 100 barrels per day, 280 lbs. of salt comprising a barrel. For purety and freedom from foreign substances, the Goderich salt is unrivalled: for dairy and pork packing it is pronounced to be all that is needed, its preserving properties ranking high in the estimation of those who have used it. As an illustration of this fact, it may be stated that a shipment of from 400 to 500 barrels has already been made to Chicago, altho' a duty of 70c in gold per barrel is placed upon its importation to the United States.

The American salt-posters of Onondaga Valley and Syracuse are already extremely jealous of the growing industry of our Goderich salt works. They fear not only that they may ultimately lose the Canada market, but that our well may become rivals even to the American product in the States. With a view to crush out the infant enterprise, a combination had been made among the Oswego salt men to run down the Ontario market by placing the salt at different points in the Province at a very low figure. Last year American salt was sold at $1.60 per barrel in our market, and now it is sold at $1.50, evidently with a view of closing up the various works at Goderich. This statement is supported by the fact that Saginaw and Onandago salt is laid down at Detroit at $2.65 American currency or $1.80 in gold, while in London it is placed on the market table, and railway charges paid, at $1.50 in gold; a difference of 30 cents per barrel! American salt is laid down and sold at Port Stanley for $1 40, London $1.50, Toronto $1.50, Stratford $1.40, and at Goderich at $1.20 per barrel! It is not surprising, however, that the Americans, who have for so long a period enjoyed the monopoly of our market, should seek to maintain it by this reduction in price; commercial instinct naturally prompts such a course. It is gratifying, however to state that even this reckless competition has failed in its effect, and the salt companies already in operation in Goderich have all the orders they can fill at present. Of course the competition lessens the legitimate profits which would otherwise naturally begong to our Goderich friends, and the further development of the enterprise is checked. So far, then, the policy of the Oswego trade has been annoying.—The inquiry may be made by some, why not put a duty on American salt, and thus foster our own manufactures? If the Americans are so illiberal as to put a duty of 70 cents per barrel against our salt, why should we not put a simple duty against them, and consume our own products? This, at first sight, appears to be the only course, but the answer is that by so doing we should tax every Ontario farmer, dairyman, and porkpackers 70 cents per barrel for the benefit of the owners of the Goderich salt works. It is just the question of protection or free trade again. It is argued also, that if the Americans can lay down their salt in London at $1.50 per barrel, carrying it all the way from Syracuse, the Goderich makers ought to be able to compete at equal terms; this objection is apparently well enough, but it must be remembered that it is only the surplus that is shipped here at these rates by the Americans, and that in order to arrest the development of the new Canadian industry and retain the market themselves. Should they succeed in so doing, they would as soon as possible raise the rates again. It is a question whether an incidental protection of say 30cts per barrel against foreign salt coming into the Dominion would not be judicious, thus enabling the salt makers of Goderich to make fair living profit on their enterprise. Such a duty would hardly be felt, as it would be only about one cent on every nine pounds of salt consumed, an insignificant item truly. Only last session of Parliament a duty of 1c per pound was placed upon the importation of American sulphuric acid, in order to foster the two acid works established in London. On the establishment of these works, the Americans tried the crushing-out game, and, had no duty been imposed to adjust the difference, and afford a slight protection to the manufacture of the sulphuric acid, the consequence would have been that works which had cost about $20,000 to erect, would have had to be closed, and the trade abandoned to the Americans. It is clear that if, as a community, we are ever to develope our own natural resources, we must adopt such legislation as will prevent our markets being swamped by the importation of the surplus of the American factories thrown in upon us at and under cost. The Goderich salt makers very fairly argue that, as the government has placed a duty of 6 cents per gallon on the importation of American crude oil, and 15c per gallon against American refined oil—thus conceding the theory of protection—it is but fair that the growing salt interests should also receive a helping hand. Nor could objection be taken by the Provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick or Nova Scotia to such a course, for American salt does not reach those places, the cheap rate at which Liverpool salt is offered excluding the American article.—No Goderich salt could, with profit, be sent further east than Kingston.

But what the Goderich manufacturers desire is not Protection, but Free Trade in its fullest extent. All they wish is that the American government should admit Canadian salt to their markets, and then they would be perfectly willing the American salt should be imported here on the same terms. The duty of 70 cents per barrel, exacted against our salt, is a heavy barrier to contend against; but for that, fifty Goderich salt wells would be inadequate to supply the wants of the Western States. The question of freight is easily got over; grain vessels leaving Chicago for the ports of Buffalo or Oswego require a return cargo, and they take salt at a cheap rate, rather than go back in ballast, and that is one reason why American salt can be laid down here so cheaply. Were the trade between the two countries thrown open, Chicago vessels, bearing Chicago spring wheat and corn, would land their freight at Goderich, and take salt as a return cargo. We understand that, at the next meeting of the Dominion Parliament, an effort will be made either to get a slight protection for our salt or to secure a reciprocal trade with the States, which would be far more advantageous to the Provinces. The quantity of American salt imported into Canada in 1867, was 80,576 barrels, all of which might be raised and consumed at home, affording employment to thousands of workmen, wood choppers, barrel-makers, and giving freights to our lake vessels and our railways.

In closing this review of the Goderich

salt on crystals, some remarks on the quality of the salt manufactured will be interesting. The brine, from which the salt is made is of a very high gravity, averaging from 90° to 100° in strength, as tested by the salometer. It is free from gypsum and any bitter flavour, and possesses in a strong degree the peculiar properties which preserve meat from decay. Some salts, it may not be generally known, are destitute of this, and cannot be used in the dairy or for pork packing. When the brine reaches the density of 100°, by the salometer (the fluid being heated to 60° Fah. to make the fair test) the water can absorb no more salt, the highest standard of absorption having been reached if more salt is added to brine which possesses the strength of 100°, it will not be taken up, but falls to the bottom of the vessel. With this explanation the reader can readily understand how rich in salt the Goderich brine is. We have received a sample from the "Dominion Salt Works," which is remarkable for its strong purity, and excellence of flavour; in fact, all the Goderich salt possesses the same qualifications. In order to foster this new enterprise the public can do much; the self-interest of dealers still prompts them to import the American Oswego salt because a few cents per barrel additional profits is to be made on a sale. If the public wish to help the salt-works of Ontario, let every one who is a consumer ASK FOR GODERICH SALT, and accept no other. Directly a healthy and persistent demand springs up for the product, storekeepers will provide themselves with it, and the American article, imported at an annual cost of about $130,000, will be excluded, and the money annually paid out for its purchase will be spent at home, and give employment to thousands willing workers. We hope that the patriotic citizens of Ontario will sustain "home manufactures," without which we should be a poor miserable country indeed!

BURNED TO DEATH.—The Owen Sound Comet of the 26th ult., says:—On Monday night the hotel known as Ekin's Tavern, and situated about nine miles from Owen Sound, upon the Saugeen road, was entirely consumed and two of the inmates fearfully burned, have since died. From all we can learn, so surely had the flames envelo, ed the lower story, and so soundly was the family sleeping, that not till escape was next to impossible, did the survivors become aware of their danger, and rush out, to find that all had not escaped,—a young man and woman were still in the burning building. We have as yet been unable to learn the names of these. The young woman had but lately arrived there with her father, and they were making but a temporary stay. She, it is supposed, slept unconscious of danger, and probably never realised her situation till too late for aid. From the statement of one of the survivors, it appears that the young man burned, was sleeping with him, and they were awakened simultaneously, by the roar and crackle of the fire. Leaping out of bed, they rushed out, when deceased, seized by a mad impulse, said he must get his clothes, and regardless of the hurried expostulation of his companion, dashed back again to the room. Before, however, he could return the floor gave way, precipitating him into the vortex of flame beneath. We learn later, that four of the family are in a precarious state from burns received, and it is doubtful whether any of these will recover.

The following fact, reported by La Gazette de Sorel, of a child saved by a Newfoundland dog, is worthy of being reproduced as demonstrative of the sagacity of that faithful animal;

"Last Tuesday, at a place called the Little River of Berthier, a little boy seven years old, son of Mr. Hercule Peviguse, was amusing himself sliding from the top of the river bank on to the river which had just only been frozen. The ice being too weak to bear him, gave way. The poor little fellow being alone would certainly have perished but for the timely assistance of the faithful dog of the house, who happened to be near his young master at the time of the accident.

"On seeing that the child was in imminent danger, the brave dog made a bound towards him and succeeded in seizing him by the arm and dragging him out of the water, just as he was beginning to disappear.

"No one had witnessed the accident, and the parents were only made aware of these exciting details by the child itself, who, notwithstanding the cold which benumbed his limbs, succeeded in reaching his father's residence, where the sagacious dog had already arrived to get assistance as it were."

Mrs. Crane, whose husband is a bookkeeper in Fleming & Co.'s drug store on Magazine st., New Orleans, died very suddenly last July, of what was pronounced sunstroke. She was a school teacher in one of our most popular public schools.—Her body was interred the next day at 10 o'clock, and her mother went home almost broken-hearted. One night recently the mother, after passing most distressing day, fell asleep late at night and dreamed that her daughter had been buried alive. She jumped up in a frantic state and rushed to her son-in-law's chamber, crying "My daughter is buried alive! Oh, my daughter is buried alive! What shall I do?" To sleep any more that night was out of the question. At length the proposition was made to have the body disinterred, just to satisfy her. So early, the next morning the grave was opened and the coffin raised. The body, which had been placed in a metallic coffin, was turned over, the glass covering the face was broken to atoms, the ends of the fingers being beaten and bettered all to pieces, the hair torn out in handfuls, and the shroud torn in many places.

The immense speed of sea waves is astonishing. The subject has attracted attention since the recent earthquakes. Commodore Wilkes of the United States exploring expedition, in vol. iv., page 226, of his report, relates that in November, 1837 a wave passed from Tutuila in the Samoan group, to Oahu, Hawaii, in two hours and thirty minutes—the distance being 2,250 miles—the waves proceeding from south to north at the rate of 900 miles an hour.

THE GRAND TRUNK.—The Portland argus says:—Those people who are so nervous about the condition of the Grand Trunk railway, will be surprised to learn that the road does not run over the bones of dead men, but on the contrary there was only one person killed on a passenger train between Portland and Island Pond since the road came into existence, some eighteen or nineteen years ago. The distance is 149 miles. How many roads can show as good a record?

Five hundred and sixteen ladies of Madrid have presented an address to the President of the Council, requesting the preservation of the churches which have been ordered to be pulled down, and also the maintenance of other religious establishments.

EDUCATIONAL BILL.

The Committee on Education have agreed to certain changes in the School law, as recommended by Dr. Ryerson. But from appearances the bill founded thereon will not be discussed before the holidays, and hence not likely this year. It will thus be before the country a year. The Bill has not been introduced, or it so has not been given to the public; this should be done without delay in order that those interested in our Common School system may have an opportunity of discussing and offering such advice as they may deem advisable. Compulsory education is a strong feature of the Doctor's scheme and we would not object to it for the cities and towns, but it is not needed in the rural districts. A Free School system is the natural consequence of compulsion, and then must follow the power to clothe and board those poor children that have no means of doing so or no parents in a position to do so. Otherwise a law must be provided to remove the curse that swallows up both the food and clothing of the poor "Arabs" that are so much talked of.

It is truly painful to see the government of a country providing the means to compel the drunken and careless to educate their children, while they are licensing and encouraging the system that renders parents callous to all suffering, ignorance and ignominy of themselves and children. The curse of all the cities is "strong drink." Witness the police reports of our dailies, and yet the government licenses this bane of society. The country is spending its thousands of dollars to educate and elevate the mass, and its tens of thousands to degrade and destroy. If parents are to be compelled to send their children to school, why not compel them to abstain from what is robbing those very children of their daily bread? We trust that this will follow. If compulsion be admissible in the one case, it will surely be in the other.

If the state can interfere between parent and child in educational matters it surely can interfere in matters of as great importance—the child's daily bread, of which it is too often deprived, unless it steals or receives it from some charitable person. If a compulsory educational system leads to compulsory temperance, Dr. Ryerson will become a great benefactor to his race, and compulsion in matters of education soon be entirely uncalled for. The Dr. proposes a minimum salary for teachers; this we have our doubts about. Why interfere in the price of a teacher's labour more than in the price of any other man's? Such a thing is now never thought of, and we feel persuaded will never be me law. There are many good features in the Dr's proposals. The good we will hail with pleasure. The objectionable parts our representatives will have cut out we trust.

DENOMINATIONAL GRANTS.

This is a subject that has already received a due share of public attention during the present session of the Local Parliament. The Denominations stole a march, as they thought, on the friends of the popular theory of voluntaryism, but have received the most signal defeat. We were glad to see the liberal part of the House using their ability to defeat the scheme of men who should be above any low way of gaining their ends. The vote, too, was a crushing one—66 to 4, and the four only voted "nay" because they thought the amendment was not strong enough against the Denominations. It is true, too, that the Country would prefer to have the matter entirely settled. Mr. Blake's amendment only settled the subject of grants, but does not settle the question of affiliation so much talked of. It, however, sets forth that a scheme for the settlement of a national system of education should be provided and established, so that there shall not be a yearly attack on the public chest for the support of sectarian college.

The advocates of the Colleges feel a little crestfallen over the vote, but they must accept it with as good grace as possible and take the advice again and again wisely offered, and go to work and endow their own Colleges by subscription. This is the only wise way and now the only way to ensure their continuance unless they merge into the Toronto University. This we do not anticipate, for the supporters of those Colleges are too strongly impressed with the idea of their "Denominational necessity". There is now an open field for Denominational liberality, and we feel confident that ere another year revolves, Victoria and Queen's College will be endowed; Regiopolis and Sandwich will not be forgotten by our Roman Catholic citizens, and then will the people be free from fear of State interference that there will be less cause for bribery at elections, and this itself will fully repay Reformers for all the labour and toil undergone in the advocacy of this just and truly popular measure.

The English Cabinet.

News of the resignation of Disraeli has reached us. The signal defeat at the polls was more than he could withstand, and the result is that he has made way for his opponent, Mr. Gladstone. During the approaching Parliament of Great Britain very momentous questions will be discussed, and let us hope, settled. The great and all-absorbing question of "Church and State" will be disposed of, and Ireland freed of this grievance. Then will follow a like change in England and Scotland. The people are everywhere declaring for such separation, and ere long it will be so in every enlightened country of the world. Italy only requires to be let alone and the great religio-political fabric of the Church of Rome will be no more. Let the Roman Catholic and the Episcopal Churches look to their adherents for support, then the cry of the "church in danger" will not prevent simple, well-meaning men from carrying out their honest convictions at the polls.

Gone Over to the Radicals.

The Local member for West Peterborough has succumbed to the pressure brought to bear on him, and gone over to the Grits; those detested grits that he so much despised. His name is found among the Yeas to Mr. Blake's amendments. How is this?—Just the Saturday before the discussion he was boasting how J. S.'s government would have to succumb on this great question.—The Denominations were going to be too strong for the combination, and all this sort of thing; but what was the astonishment of our electors who voted for him to go and defend and support them, when they found that he had voted against them. How is this? Whence this sudden change? How could his name follow that of Mr. Blake?—Yet so it is. He dare not vote against John Sandfield on anything. "He is too craven hearted to maintain or defend his principles, (if he has any) while the rod of power hangs over him. It is a bitter dose for the Tories to be thus compelled to swallow the Reform principles at the beck of a man who boasts that he is training the Tories in reform principles.

But, what about his predictions? What shall be said of his knowledge of the feeling of the House on any great question? What authority he would be on future results of the discussion of any great question, when on Saturday he is boasting of denominational victory, and Wednesday voting against them. Can this sudden conversion to Radicalism be accounted for any principle other than that he has none, or has not courage enough to defend or advocate them. It is well, however, to find that fear has its good effects; for fear of John Sandfield's political whip, Mr. Carnegie, the member for the West Riding of Peterboro, voted against his avowed principles. During the election campaign, so openly and clerically did he advocate and avow his determination to pay the Denominational Colleges, that some thought he was about to become preacher or was delivering some preacher's peroration. What shall the electors who voted for him on this ground now say? Sold again, simply.—What a consistent member, truly; say they. We have no right to find fault; he voted for us, but sold the Methodists and Catholics who supported him. So it is.

THE BURGLAR FOUND.

For some time past our Town has been in no little uneasiness on account of some petty cases of burglary, fearing lest, getting bold, they might do something on a large scale. Mr. Lech, however, suffered most of any one; but there were several reports of parties having lost goods. The burglar is now in custody and turns out to be a Frenchman, calling himself Seymour, and who says that he was formerly a policeman, but where we did not yet learn. The constable and others made a descent on his domicile on Monday, and discovered a large quantity of stolen goods, consisting of every imaginable kind of articles that he could get his hands on—watches, adzes, over-coats, blankets, oil cans, ready-made clothing and a considerable quantity of cloth, and cloth cut ready for making up, cabinet and other ware. When lodged in jail, he told the Sheriff he thought he would plead guilty as he thought he was guilty. His wife was also arrested on the charge of receiving the goods.

AN ORGANIZATION

Appears to be in operation, as part of the goods stolen here have been sent to Belleville to be disposed of. Seymour's brother, it is said, being there for that purpose. Mr. Lech found some of his valuable furs, the remainder was sent to Belleville, and Lech has left for there to see if he can ferret them out. Seymour has not been long here, but has plied himself well to his trade in the time. If his admission of having been in the police force of some of the cities is correct, there is no doubt but that the training there received has been of service to him in the thieving line. We hope that the other abettors will be found and all receive the just recompense of their reward.

TOWN COUNCIL.

There is very little talk yet about the approaching municipal Elections. Mayor Scott will be re-elected without doubt; in fact, without opposition. J. H. Dixon has resigned his seat in the North Ward, and Mr. Stevenson has tendered his; but it is not yet received. Mr. Burnham threatens to resign, and also Mr. Cluxton; all because of the abuse they have received for the discharge of the duties pertaining to their office. Railway matters are the true cause. The people are not satisfied on this head, and councillors always get their share of the blame. If they have discharged their duty conscientiously, they can smile at all accusation, and retiring, rest in peace.

LITERARY.—The Peterboro Grammar School Literary Society will discuss the following question, on Friday evening, December 11th, in the Literary Society's room, over the Royal, Canadian Bank:—"Does the Warrior exercise greater influence for good than the Statesman?" Leaders,—Messrs P. W. King & G. M. Boger. The Debate will commence at 7.30.

James Heslop, of the Township of Otonabee, brought in 6 hogs last Saturday, which weighed 1,400 lbs, netting him the handsome sum of $116.80. Beat that who can!

Sir John Young, our new Governor General, was sworn into office last week. There was a great number of Honorables and Ladies present. It is hoped by some of them who have the "good things for this life" that Sir John and Lady will be more hospitable than Lord Monck was, and that cheap pegs and the Brandy bottle will have a more prominent place during his terms of office than that of his successor. If Sir John but knew the quantity of Brandy that is already in the composition of some of the magnates of Canada, he would find portable Liquor stores not far from some of the Departments. Sir John will act wisely if he refuses to encourage the drinking habits that prevail at Ottawa. Let him recommend that the "Senate Bar," whence Whelan got the Liquor that maddened his brain and fitted him for the foul work of assassination, be removed, then the country will give him credit for a good work.

A FALSE RUMOUR.—On Monday the United States telegrams brought the startling intelligence that Louis Napoleon was shot dead during a riot in Paris. At first it was read with astonishment, but a little reflection caused it to be received very cooley, as the Emperor of the French would not be likely to expose himself during a riot. Tuesday's telegrams contradicted the whole affair, and showed it to be the work of some cute Yankee—got up to enable him to speculate in stock to better advantage. It is well known that too many of the telegrams from New York require confirmation before being accredited.

THE CONVICT WHALEN.—The Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench has announced that he will deliver judgement in the Whalen case on the 21st inst. The writ of error upon which the arguments took place has the same effect as a respite. The prisoner will remain in custody in Toronto jail until judgement is given, and in case it should be adverse to guarantee the convict a new trial he will of course be conveyed back to Ottawa, to suffer the extreme penalty of the law at a time to be thereafter fixed by the judges.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday, pursuant to adjournment. His worship the Mayor presiding. Present: Messrs. English, Helm, Dickson, Toole, Stevenson, Cluxton. The Minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications were read from T. D. Harrington, Esq., relative to the amount due the Municipal Loan Fund for 1867; from J. H. Dixon, Esq., tendering his resignation as a Councillor for the North Ward; from James Stevenson, Esq., tendering his resignation as a Councillor for the Centre Ward; from C. J. Bloomfield, Secretary of the Peterborough and Haliburton Wooden Railway Company, asking aid in the construction, and enclosing a petition to the Government for the Council to adopt.

Petitions were read from Henry Morgan, asking a reduction in his taxes and his liscense, owing to the fire; from — Williams asking remission of taxes; an account from Charles Robertson for glass put in Lock-up and Engine Room, amounting to $1.80, was ordered to be paid.

The Clerk mentioned that the Market scale was unfit for use and a new one required.

On motion of Mr. Doherty, seconded by English—the resignation of J. H. Dixon, Esq., was accepted.

The communication of Jas. Stevenson, Esq., was laid on the table.

A By-law was introduced by Mr. Toole, for appointing Returning officers and the places for holding the approaching elections, The By-law was finally passed,—the blanks being filled in with the names of Mr. Rowe, Mr. O'Berne, Mr. Edwards and Mr. Lynce.

Mr. Cluxton, as chairman of the Finance Committee, read and submitted the following report, which was received and adopted:

The Finance Committee having carefully examined the several accounts and matters referred to them, beg leave to report.

They recommend payment of the following accounts:

T. G. Haslitt, for lumber	$22 28
Wm. English, work and material	23 12
James A. Barchard, plans	5 00
James F. Dennistoun, advice	10 00
E. C. Hill, flag pole	9 00
Lewis McGregor, judgment and costs	14 66
Edmund Pool, coffin	7 00
Adam Dobbin, drawing water	8 50
Samuel Dickson, bridge	150 00
Total	$248 96

In explanation your Committee beg to state that Mr. Dickson's claim is $170.55, but as the appropriation for the construction of the work was limited to $150, the Committee have only recommend payment of that sum.

With regard to Mr. Dickson's second account, for a plank walk in front of his grist mill, amounting to $60.50, your committee were not certain whether the street or road upon which the work was done belongs to the town or not. If it is private property they could not recommend payment, and if it is a public street, belonging to the Corporation, they would, in that case, recommend the claim to be discussed and decided upon in Council.

Your Committee recommend that the request of Joseph Spenceley, M. Clark and Mrs. Cardiff, be granted, and that their taxes be remitted.

The Committee cannot recommend the remission of Mrs. Knox's taxes.

Your Committee recommend that Mr. Lawder's application be decided by the Council.

With regard to the applications of Messrs. Geo. and George Mills, your Committee find that these gentlemen, in their declarations, stated that their income was $290, and as the Statute says the amount named in the declaration shall be the amount assessed, and, as the Town Clerk informed the Council, who acted for the Messrs. Mills, that whatever amount they filled in the declaration they would be assessed for it, the Committee cannot therefore recommend a reduction.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. CLUXTON,
Chairman.

Mr. Doherty moved, seconded by Mr. English, that the taxes on the incomes of the two George Mills be remitted.—Carried.

The clerk was instructed to procure a scale for the use of the market.

On motion, Mr. Lawder was heard on the matter of his assessment. He stated that he thought he should not be taxed for $4,000 personal property. On motion of Mr. Doherty, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, the sum of $18 was allowed him.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

County Court and Quarter Sessions.

The Court of Quarter Session commenced on Tuesday, before His Honor, Judge Dunkinson.

There were very few cases to be heard—these civil and two criminal.

Mercer vs. Martyn—an action under covenant in mortgage. T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., for plaintiff. Verdict for plaintiff, $289.25.

Wilson vs. Ross—an action for wages—plaintiff Wilson was clerk for a merchant whom Mr. Ross bought out, agreeing to assume all responsibilities. Wilson's wages were not enumerated by some mistake, but were talked of. Mr. Fairbairn for plaintiff; Messrs. Weller & Hatton for deft. Verdict for plf., $72.19.

Smart, Executor, vs. Bowie, et al.—Action on Promissory Note: Defence by endorser—no presentment and no notice of dishonor. Verdict for plaintiff, $—. Fairbairn and Dunsford for plf.; E. Burnham for deft.

The Queen vs. Narcisse Seymour—a Frenchman—for larceny. Pleaded guilty to 8 indictments, for stealing a watch, chain and adze from John Maddin; an india rubber blanket from Mr. Goodwin; a clock and looking glass from Mr. Heuback; an oil can from Mr. Breeze; an over coat from William Coulter, jr.; a lot of furs from Mr. Lech, furrier; and a lot of other articles too numerous to mention, found in his house and not yet claimed. His wife is also in custody on charge of receiving the stolen goods.—Verdict

SALE OF LANDS FOR TAXES.—We invite attention to the adjourned sale of Lands for taxes, on Thursday, 17th instant. On that day, the lands not sold on the day of sale, will be sold for what they will bring by Auction, let it be the amount of taxes or not. Heretofore the lands were not sold unless the amount of taxes could be realized for the whole or for any part thereof, but by the late law they will be sold to the highest bidder. Speculators have, in the scheme, a fair field for acquiring property.

We have received a communication from "Another Ratepayer," but too late for this issue, it will appear next week.

IAMATOLOGIA!

The Member for West Peterboro and Denominational Grants.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—It is in the recollection of all of us that at the last Parliamentary election, Mr. Carnegie did all he could to damage the candidature of Mr. Walton for his out-spoken opposition to State Grants for Denominational Colleges. At the same time he stoutly advocated these grants, and even went so far if I mistake not, in a speech which he delivered last session, to warn the Government of certain destruction if they persisted in their determination to withhold these grants in future. He has moreover at all fitting opportunities insisted upon the right of the Colleges receiving aid from the State. It has all along been a principal plank in his political platform up to the 2nd day of December, in the year of Grace, 1868, when the vote on Mr. Blake's amendment was taken; then we find this would-be champion of Denominational Grants, actually voting that he "firmly adhered to the view that Denominational Colleges should not be supported by State aid!" "O, consistency thou art a jewel." Now, either Mr. C. was right or wrong in holding the views he so loudly advocated; if right, why not do right, even if the heavens should fall; if wrong, and he was satisfied of his error, why did he not before recording his vote define his position before the House? But not only does our member shirk the question, but those of Grenville, Welland and Algoma; leaders and champions file off with the opposition, and actually eat their leek. The former, Mr. Clark, brought in a resolution affirming the principle, that "the collegiate institutions of Ontario should continue to receive substantial aid from the public treasury." But before submitting it to the House, he introduced another which he read to the House, and opened the ball by a mortal long speech, saying a good deal in reference to the University that was not correct. Then, there is Mr. Beatty, who last year was eloquent and urgent in his advocacy of government pap, and Mr. Cumberland equally valiant and eloquent on the same side, all ranging themselves with the enemies of their pet measure. All this noise and flourish of trumpets end in a fizzle. Such men are not objects of pity but of contempt. I believe you may search the records of our Legislature since the period that we became a colony, in vain, for a parallel. With all their craft and deceit they have failed to carry their selfish, unjust policy, and must crawl out from their defeat great fallen. I do not wish to appear as glorying over a fallen foe; but the manner in which they sought their measure by springing it upon the House, shows the unfair means they had recourse to, and awakens a feeling towards them akin to contempt. Their petitions came pouring into the House for a while, before it was even known by the other side that any action was being taken. In a little while they fall off. But presently came the the counter petitions, bearing on their face plain, honest sentiments, in no ambiguity of language and the signatures of good men and true, praying not to reverse the decision of last year. Still they come, now that a week is passed since the glorious coup d'état of the last figment of State Churchism in Ontario—December 2, 1868. These utterances are like the vibrations of the great bell of Moscow, reiterating the fact them again given, that State Grants to Denominational Colleges shall cease for evermore in Ontario at least. So may it be and so prays your Humble servant,

A BALDWIN REFORMER.

Peterborough, Dec. 8th, 1868

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 7.—The Indians at Humboldt, California, have been committing depredations upon the settlers for some time past. An expedition organised to pursue and punish them surprised the camp of savages and eight of them were killed during the fight. The settlers intend using vigorous measures until it is beyond the power of the Indians to further molest them.

HAVANA, Dec 7.—A pitched battle has been fought between the troops and the rebels at the foot of Mount Alto Gracie, in which the losses were equal, each side having about 50 killed. The government has also received reports of a fight at Moon, in which 180 soldiers defeated a large band of rebels, killing 830 of them, with a loss to themselves of only one man killed and six wounded.

Our Railway and its Vice President.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The writer and the public in general has been highly amused at and edified and convinced in perusing the letters of Mr. Cluxton, relative to his position in our town as Councillor and Railway President.

Mr. C. heads his very learned defence by an extract from the writings of Dr. Clark, on moral law, thus:—"There are busybodies, impertinent meddlers with other people's business, prying into other people's circumstances and affairs," &c.

Unfortunately our President has not also as a very suitable quotation to hurl at the head of his fancied reviler. The learned Doctor, in the quotation referred to, makes reference to those who intermeddle with the private affairs of others, and not to the public acts of those who choose to be Railway Presidents, Town Councillors, &c. If Mr. Cluxton had been reading the works of the Bard of Avon lately, he would no doubt have come to the conclusion that the following passage would be more in keeping with his sensative views.

He that steals my purse, steals trash;
'Tis mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good name
Takes that which not enriches him,
And leaves me poor indeed.

It is to be hoped that the public are fully satisfied with the three "letters of character" Mr. Cluxton has obtained from the Railway officials, and published. Yet alas for poor frail human nature! We know that there are yet a host of doubters amongst us, and the writer happens to be one of them who is not convinced. Mr. C. has learned his business but indifferently as Vice President under the able tuition of D. E. Boulton (also is the guiding star of the whole establishment). Could not matters be arranged at the Board and "casual advantages" obtained without the three officials being any the wiser? But as Mr. Cluxton says so, we must believe Mr. Fowler to be wrong when he asserts that in one year, to his knowledge, Mr. C. received some $700 as draw-back on flour and wheat sent down, and that Mr. Kimball must also be mistaken when he states that Mr. Cluxton only paid 12½ cents per barrel for flour, when others were paying 16 or 17: and that there has been anything like impartiality in the disposal of the cars notwithstanding all the complaints of the produce buyers in Peterboro.

If Mr. Cluxton had produced letters from the forwarders of grain and flour from here and elsewhere along the line of railway—to the purport that no partiality has been extended to him in the distribution of freight cars and grain stores the public we think would be better satisfied.

That our Town is in prosperous condition is beyond a doubt, but it has become so in defiance of our present Railway, and not in consequence of it. It seems to be the object of our solons of Directors to do all they can to drive business away from our Town, and I confess they have succeeded most admirably; already two thirds of our most important branches of commerce—the lumber trade, has taken its departure to Rice Lake and no doubt more of our lumber merchants will follow as soon as convenient. Yet in the face of all this Mr. Cluxton coolly tells us in his last letter that "notwithstanding the continued and violent opposition to the Railway the bondholders have never retaliated but have gone on steadily doing all in their power to help the Town". Disinterested bondholders! And all for the good of Peterboro,—surely such philanthrophists since Howard have not been heard of.

But, Mr. Editor, I have perhaps trespassed too far on your space already, so for the present will close.

MERCATOR.

LONDON, Dec. 2nd, midnight.—Prime Minister Disraeli published an address, announcing and defending the resignation of the Ministry. He reviews the progress of the resolve in favor of the disestablishment of the Irish Church believing the country would not sanction such a measure. The government awaited the election, for the holding of which all expedition was used. The result shows that the Ministry cannot command respect of the new House of Commons. Therefore they feel it duty to their honor, and to the policy supported by them, not to continue unnecessarily in office a single day deeming it more consistent with the attitude they hold, the convenience of public business, and the influence of the party, to resign at once, instead of awaiting the meeting of a Parliament in which they may be in a minority. While taking this course, they do not modify their opinions, and are more than ever convinced that Mr. Gladstone's proposition is wrong in principle, and probably impracticable, and one which even practicable would be disastrous to the nation. They are ready to support reform in the Church of Ireland, but will still offer uncompromising resistance to the policy enunciated by Mr. Gladstone.

HALIFAX, Dec. 1.—Mr Howe's lecture last evening on "Halifax in olden time," disappointed most of his hearers. It was a series of anecdotes related in a very interesting manner; but had the address emanated from any one except Mr. Howe, it would have been pronounced below par. He had an immense audience; hundreds were unable to gain admission.

The "The Anti" newspapers continue to criticise Mr. Howe's course,—the Chronicle temperately, the Recorder fiercely, and the Citizen gravely. Of the country repeal press, one paper only, the Yarmouth Tribune, supports Mr. Howe; and the Herald of the same place is bitterly opposed to him. The Eastern Chronicle, of New Glasgow, condemns the Course of Mr. Howe, and also of the Government. It says both are guilty of dereliction of duty, and it becomes them seriously and earnestly to consider how to retrieve their position. This paper thinks it idle to discuss whether Mr. Howe did or did not make the proposal that the government resign, but that the course is still open, and should be adopted at once.

Washington, December 2nd.—The report of the special commission appointed by the President to examine the Union Pacific R. R., says, taken as a whole, the Union Pacific R. R. has been well constructed. The general route for the line is exceedingly well selected, crossing the Rocky Mountain ranges at some of the most favorable passes on the continent, and possessing capabilities for easy grades and favorable alignment, unsurpassed by any other railway line on similar elevated ground.

The postage on newspapers between Great Britian and America has been reduced from 4 cents to 2, and a revision of rates is to take place at the end of the year, at which time there is a probability of half-ounce letter postage being reduced to ten cents.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Pheokanoxo Remedy, which has so often shocked the ingest of those lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

Loss of the Hibernia.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 7, 10 p.m.—Additional particulars have been received of the loss of the Hibernia. The steamship sailed from new York on the 14th of November, for Glasgow. She took on Nov. 25, seven hundred miles to the westward of the Irish coast. The passengers and crew all took to the boats, five in number. Two of these boats have been picked up; one is known to have been capsized, and all on board were lost. The fate of the people in the remaining two boats is as yet unknown. It is now certain that fifty-two persons, including the Captain of the Hibernia, are saved. The first mate was drowned. Intelligence of missing boats is looked for with great anxiety.

LONDON, Dec. 8—A despatch to Henderson Bros., agents of the Anchor Line in this city from Hendreide, and Henderson of Glasgow, under date of December 8th, says:—

The Hibernia, in a heavy gale, broke her shaft and stern pipe. She sprung aleak and foundered on the 25th ult., in lat. 53 deg., long. 39 deg. The passengers and crew behaved admirably, and were embarked in an orderly manner in five boat loads, duly provisioned. The captain's and boatswain's boats containing 52 persons, including all the cabin passengers excepting Nerson O. Olds, and G. Mesos, have arrived safely. Three boats under the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd officers, containing the remainder of the passengers and crew, 81 persons in all, are still missing, but their safety is hoped for.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 8.—The bark North Britain from Quebec for Southampton was wrecked off Mount's Bay. Six of her crew were lost.

The Observer gives the following as the list of Mr. Gladstone's cabinet:—Lord High Chancellor, Sir Wm. Page Wood; President of the Privy Council, Lord Kimberley; Lord Privy Seal, Earl Russell; Chancellor of the Exchequer, Robt. Lowe; First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. Childers; Foreign Secretary, Lord Clarendon; Home Secretary, Henry A Bruce; Secretary of War, Mr. Cardwell; Secretary for India, Duke of Argyle; Colonial Secretary, Earl Granville: Secretary for Ireland Chichester Fortescue; President of the Poor Law Board, Mr. Goschen; President of the Board of Trade, John Bright; Postmaster-General Earl deuGray; Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Chas. P. Villiers; Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, Earl Spencer; Lord Chancellor of Ireland, O'Hagan.

A NOBLE EXAMPLE.—Last evening a party of gentlemen and ladies were out on the river skating, opposite Lochiel, when one of the number—a gentleman named John Palmer—broke through the thin ice and disappeared beneath it. In the alarm and excitement of the moment, most of the party hurried ashore for ropes and ladders: but two young ladies,—the Misses Sims, of Lochiel,—with great presence of mind, instantly took off their cloaks, tied them together, and awaited Mr. Palmer's reappearance. The ice was so thin that, rising, Palmer broke it sufficiently to show his position; and the ladies after several attempts, finally succeeded in hauling out the half-drowned man, and in bringing him ashore more dead than alive.

Gen. Sheridan's forces are said to be moving from New Mexico to the Southern country, whither the Indians are resorting for winter sojourn. It is feared that innocent Indians may suffer in the campaign, as no discrimnat on can be made. In the Arizona territory the troops have attacked an Indian camp, and killed 17, and wounded more than double that number of savages, besides capturing mules and arms. A party of Indians had attacked a pack train near Prescott, killing 8 men and capturing a quantity of arms. It is feared that a tribe of Mexican Indians have joined the Apaches in the present war against the whites, on whose part the war will probably become one of extermination.

Mr. Gladstone has formally accepted his appointment as chief of the Ministry, and has had a gathering of Liberal chiefs at his house. The Times thinks Lord Romilly, the present Master of the Rolls, will be appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Roundell Palmer, Master of the Rolls. It is probable that Sir Robert P. Collier will be appointed Attorney-General, and Mr. Bright has been asked to join the Ministry.

A very cold blooded experiment has been made upon a criminal by certain learned and philosophical Swedes. Upon the day appointed for his execution the body of the murderer was exposed to a certain process by which every portion of his frame was frozen hard and solid. The body has been placed in a secure place, where it is to remain for a certain number of years, when it will be thawed out, and, as some of these swedish philosopher believe, or affect to believe, the man will wake up refreshed, and as lively as ever!

A Danish journal gives publicity to the following royal decree, issued in 1842, and having reference to the diocese of Aarhuus. "Having learned that the number of those who sleep in the church during service is very considerable, we have decreed that every parish of the diocese shall appoint certain persons to look after such offender. For this purpose they shall be provided with a long rod, having a leather thong attached to it, with which they are to lash on the head all those who are found sleeping."

The sheep farmers in Australia have recently spent considerable sums of money in the construction of apparatus for sheep washing with hot water. From water at a temperature of 100 degrees, into which they are first plunged, the sheep are floated to a tank of cold water with a kind of douche. So much grease is taken out of the fleeces by this process that the wool is expected to fetch much better prices.

OUR FORTIFICATIONS.—It is now nearly fifty years since our fortifications have been looked after in any way, we think it is now high time and that it behoves our government to put them in a proper state of defence, and have our Lakes and Rivers well protected, "one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; but while we are protecting ourselves against a foreign enemy we should not forget to fortify ourselves against bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, pains in the back and side, colics, cholera morbus, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the most effectual medicine. It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters, should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Dennes Barnes & Co., over the top. An effort has been made to counterfeit it with cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for Worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms:

Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, anquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. Enlargement and Improvement OF THE WEEKLY GLOBE.

Programme for 1869.

THE GLOBE PRINTING COMPANY respectfully announce that, in addition to the great improvements which have recently been made on THE WEEKLY GLOBE—and which have been so warmly acknowledged by the readers of the paper and by the public press—very extensive and most valuable further improvements will be made on the paper for the coming year. A spacious new Press-room and Despatch-office has recently been erected in connection with THE GLOBE buildings; a new font of type from the foundry of Messrs. Miller & Richard, Edinburgh, has been imported from Scotland; one of Messrs. Hoe & Co's celebrated Lightning Presses, capable of throwing off 5,000 impressions per hour of THE DAILY GLOBE, is now in operation; and a second new Press, especially constructed for printing THE WEEKLY GLOBE with great rapidity and in the highest style of workmanship, will shortly be added to the Machinery of the Establishment. The sheet on which the paper is printed will be hereafter of a very superior quality. The staff of Editors, Reporters, Contributors and Correspondents has been recently greatly strengthened, and nothing will be left undone, in the year 1869 to maintain the fame of THE WEEKLY GLOBE, as beyond comparison, the best conducted and most attractive weekly journal in the Dominion.

But, in addition to the general improvements now being effected in the conduct of the paper, several SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS are about to be added for the coming year that will greatly enhance its value and interest to all classes of readers throughout the country. Foremost among these, is the addition of

AN AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Not a collection of mere clippings from Agricultural Journals—but a full and well prepared weekly compendium of Agricultural, Horticultural and Floral WEEKLY GLOBE by a regular staff of competent and intelligence and information—written for THE practised writers, and quite up to the best light of the day. Everything affecting the farming interest—such as the management of field crops, the bare-yard, the stable, the dairy, the orchard, the poultryyard, the vineyard the apiary, the kitchen-garden and the flower-garden—will come within the weekly review of this department. The improvements in machinery, the best breed of cattle, the best systems of feeding, the most approved processes of cheese and butter-making, the best made of packing, and the best markets to sell in, will all form subjects of profitable discussion. The sheep and wool interests will also receive special attention; and the doings at agricultural fairs, shows, auctions and society meeting will be carefully and fully chronicled. The Markets for Canadian produce at home and abroad, will receive an amount of careful attention that has not been heretofore accorded to them in any Journal. The quantity of agricultural matter thus proposed to be published annually in THE WEEKLY GLOBE will exceed the contents of any purely agricultural now circulated, and will be worth the whole annual subscriptions of the paper!

Another new and valuable improvement proposed to be made in 1869, is the increased space devoted to Literary Matter. In past years it has been usual to publish in THE WEEKLY GLOBE one tale, continued in successive numbers for months together. For the coming year, it is proposed to devote a much larger space than heretofore to the publication of Racy and Clever by-Written Tales, and to give in each week's issue a much greater diversity than ever before.

It is also proposed to publish every week a full summary of Religious and Ecclesiastical Intelligence from all parts of the world. This summary will embrace the operations of all the churches, and will be conducted in a spirit entirely free from sectarian exclusiveness.

Very great pains will hereafter be taken to place before the readers of THE WEEKLY GLOBE a full and clear summary of the Debates in the Provincial and Federal Parliaments. The speeches will be condensed from the full Reports of THE DAILY GLOBE, and the several measures before Parliament will be carefully explained.

The British, American and other Foreign News will continue to be published fully and promptly. The Commercial Intelligence from all parts of the world, will be culled from the most reliable sources and kept up to the latest dates.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE SHEET!

To make room for all these improvements, THE GLOBE PRINTING COMPANY have resolved greatly to enlarge the size of THE WEEKLY GLOBE. Fourteen Columns of Reading Matter will hereafter be added to the paper—making this journal without exception THE LARGEST WEEKLY NEWSPAPER IN THE WORLD! And notwithstanding the heavy additional expense entailed by these improvements, it has been resolved to offer the paper for the coming year at the same Low Price as formerly—Two Dollars per Annum.

CLUB RATES FOR 1869.

It has also been resolved to continue the same inducements for the Formation of Clubs as were offered last year. These were, and will be for 1869, as follows:—

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Musk for Canadian Musk. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to intimate our Canada Musk, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Musk. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware lest they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full price. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Parties wanting any alteration made in their furs will please to call before the end of October.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1869

OF THE

Publications of John Dougall & Son, MONTREAL.

THE phrase "GET THE BEST" has passed into a proverb, and all will agree that the best Family Paper is one that has something interesting and profitable for every member of the family, not excluding the children, and which includes within its scope all the best interests of humanity, temporal and eternal.—Such a paper the MONTREAL WITNESS has aimed to be from its commencement, 23 years ago; and that the country was prepared for such an enterprise is shown by its success. The WITNESS in its three editions—"Daily," "Semi-Weekly," and "Weekly"—issues about 16,000 copies; and, consequently, reaches probably Eighty Thousand readers; but what are they out of a population of four millions, all of whom we desire to reach?

Our publications are as follows, and we respectfully call attention to their cheapness as well as quality, and ask all the friends of interesting and wholesome literature everywhere to aid us in extending their circulation. Nor will their circulation interfere with that of local papers, which are a necessity in their respective localities, and which are generally speaking, very meritorious:—

1.—The DAILY WITNESS contains as much reading matter as the ordinary Dailies, and of a choice quantity, at about half the price, viz., $3 per annum. Besides being a first-class Family Paper, it is especially valuable to business men on account of its abundant commercial intelligence, prices current, &c.

2.—The MONTREAL WITNESS, Eight Pages, Semi-Weekly, $2 per annum, contains all that appears in the Daily, except part of the purely city matter and advertisements.

3.—The WEEKLY WITNESS, Eight Pages, $1 per annum, contains the greater part of the News, Contemporary Press, and Editorials of the MEMI WEEKLY, with a portion of the Family-Reading and Prices Current.

4.—The CANADIAN MESSENGER, containing Eight Pages, is published twice a month, at the very low price of 37½c. per annum, Postage paid; or Seven Copies for $2 to one address. It contains Religious, Temperance, Agricultural, Scientific, Educational matter, Stories for Children, &c., &c. This paper is recommended to the public generally, and it is hoped that its adoption for circulation through School will greatly extend its usefulness.—It has at present upwards of 20,000, representing, probably, 100,000 readers, but at the very low price (namely, 35 cents per annum, Post-paid, if 100 copies are sent to one address), it is hoped that its circulation will greatly increase.

5.—The NEW DOMINION MONTHLY is a handsome Monthly Magazine, containing a rich selection of original and copied articles every month, together with one or more choice pieces of music, and pictorial illustrations.—Price $1 per annum, Post-paid. The Magazine has been favorably noticed by nearly the entire Press of the Dominion.

The Approach of Winter.

She now with all his mighty power
Approach the Wintry King;
Our shortened flowers are faded quite,
He wounds the cushions bring.
Alas! the cold white-bearded Man
D aws nearer every day—
Y. blessed with youth, and health, and strength,
Hasten his march to stay.

Then fasten every window close,
Let him not enter there;
He steals away our Summer joys,
And chills the genial air.
Ha—ar—the children 'gainst him rush,
Their faces are aglow,
In vain!—each year he comes alike,
And brings us ice and snow.

He b ings the long, long dreary nights,
And shortens daylight hours,
Wild storms of hail and rain, and mist,
And snow in flossy showers:
And yet, how many joys he brings,
How tales we read with glee;
And first, and best of all his gifts,
The far-famed Christmas Tree.

RETURNING A SALUTE.—A most amusing story is told of Judge B., now occupying a high post in the Pennsylvania state government. He had been travelling by rail to Harrisburg, on a blazing hot day, with some friends, the iron horse had stopped to water, when suddenly he drew his white pocket handkerchief from his pocket and beg n waving it vigorously in the air, at the same time bobbing his head out of the window in a very energetic manner.

What are you about, Judge? asked Mr. Q., without rising from his seat.

Why don't you see yonder? There's a lady waiving a white handkerchief, and I'm returning the salute.

Who is she, Judge? asked Mr. Q. as he lounged in the corner.

Well, the fact is, I don't exactly know, I'm quite near sighted, and I can't recognize her; but she is dressed in a gay style and stands yonder, under a big maple tree, near my friend John B's house.

Mr. Q. hobbled over to the judge's side and gazed in the direction indicated, but saw only that the judge had been exchanging minutes for minutes with an iron gray mare, whose long white tail, as it fl pped the flies, had been taken by him for a white handkerchief, waved by a lady in a white silk dress.

The buttons that were subsequently picked up in that car are said to have been exceedingly numerous. The judge didn't swear, but he changed the subject to saw mills, the only intelligible portion of which being the frequent repetition of the word damn'

The electric telegraph is bound to remain a mystery to the million, and the ludicrous conceptions of its modus operandi which some of the more ignorant people formed, are as mirth-provoking as anything out of Rabelais or Smollet. The following is the last illustration of this:—Not long since an old lady entered an office in one of our cities, and said she had a message to send to Montreal. In a few moments her note was deposited on a dumb waiter, and ascended in a mysterious manner through the ceiling. 'Is that going straight to Montreal?' inquired the old lady, her eyes bent on the ceiling. 'Yes ma'am, answered the clerk, 'I never there,' continued she, 'but it hardly seems possible that the city lies in that direction. When will I get an answer, Mr. Telegraph?' 'I can scarcely tell, ma'am; it may be two or three hours.' The old lady went away and returned in exactly two hours. Just as she entered the door the dumb waiter came down through the ceiling. 'There is your answer, ma'am' said the clerk. The old lady took the neat yellow envelope in her hands, with a smile of mingled gratification and astonishment, 'Now, that beats all!' exclaimed she. 'Bless my heart! All the way from Montreal, and the wafer still wet! That's an awkward-looking box, but it can travel like pigeon!'

A boy from the country was recently taken into a gentlemen's family. One afternoon, just before dark, after having been called up into the drawing room he came down into the kitchen, laughing immoderately. "What's the matter?" cried the cook. "Why, dang it, "said he, "there are twelve on "em up there who couldn't light the gas, and had to ring for me to do it!

A tricky individual was refused a drink unless he paid for it in advance. A bystander who owed the bar keeper one in the way of practicle joke, bid him give the man his liquor, adding that if he refused to pay for it he would. The fellow got his drink, but refused to pay for it, and so did his endorser, and he had promised he would.

A peaceful disposition is not absolute protection against the turmoils of life. What is more peaceful than a clam? And yet, ten to one, it ends its life in a broil. And how peaceable an oyster is! And yet how frequently it gets mixed up in a stew.

A Scotch barber, who was much given to dram drinking, was one day shaving a customer, who finding the fumes of whiskey too much for him lost his patience, and exclaimed: "That horrid drink!' The barber replied: "Ay, ay, sir, it does indeed mak' the face awfu' tender."

A married man in Constantinople had a difficulty with five of his wives, which he settled by tying them up and throwing them into the Bosphorus. His 28 other wives had given him no trouble since that bit of cleaning came off.

"I'm afloat! I'm afloat!" screamed a young lady of powerful lungs, and fingers to match, as she exercised both at the piano. "I should think you were," growled an old batchelor, "judging from the squall you raise."

"Bridget," said O'Mulligan to his wife, "it's a cowld ye have. A drop of the crather 'ud do ye no harrum." "Och hone," said Biddy, "I've taken the pledge; but you can mix a drink, Jeamy, and force me to swally it."

A crusty and irreverent old bachelor says the reason that Adam's wife was called Eve, was, because when she appeared man's day of happiness was drawing to a close.

An editor up in Brass advertised, "a small boy wanted," and on the following day his wife presented him with a son—which shows the benefit of advertising.

It is said that as the twig is bent the tree's inclined. Some of the young ladies will grow queerly if the Grecian style prevails very long.

Woman and Marriage.

I have speculated a great deal on matrimony. I have seen young and beautiful women, the pride of the gay circles, married, as the world says, well. Some have moved, in a too costly houses, and their friends have all come and looked at their furniture and their splendid home for happiness, and have gone away and committed them to their misery hopes, cheerfully and without fear. It is natural to be sanguine for them, as the young are sometimes carried away with similar feelings.

I love to get unobserved into a corner and watch the bride in her white attire, and with her smiling face and soft eyes meeting me in the pride of life, weave a waking dream of future happiness, and persuade myself that it will be true. I think how they will sit upon the luxurious sofa as the twilight falls, and build gay hopes, and murmur in low tones the not now forbidden tenderness; and how thrilling the allowed kiss and beautiful endearments of wedded life will make even their parting joys, and how gladly will come back from the crowded and empty mirth of the gay to each other's quiet company.

I picture to myself that young creature, who blushes now at his hesitating caress, listening eagerly for his footsteps as the night steals on, wishing he would come, and when he enters at last, and with an affection as undying as his pulse, folds her to his bosom. I can feel the tide that goes flowing through the heart, and gaze with him upon the graceful form as she moves about in the kind offices of affection, soothing all his unquiet cares, and making him forget even himself in her young and unshadowed beauty.

I go forward yor years, and see her luxuriant hair put soberly away from her brow, and her girlish graces resign into dignity and loftiness, chastened with the gentle meekness of maternal affection. Her husband looks on with a proud eye, and shows the same fervent love and delicate attentions which first won her, and her fair children are grown about them and they go on full of honor and untroubled years and are remembered when they die.—Washington Irving.

Beards and Shaving.

Nature has her own freaks, and in the matter of beards she divides her upper from her lower classes. A man with a fine beard, whatever he may be, never looks a snob; while the beards of some men are so thin and poor that they take away rather than add dignity to the face. Let the last continue the use of the razor by all means; but we commend the scissors to the first. Any one accustomed to travel, and particularly in the East, must have remarked the air of nobility which a fine beard gives.—But we need not go as far as the East. The contrast is striking between a regiment mainly composed of bearded veterans with bronzed countenances, which mark its recent return from foreign service, and the neat, clean shaved physiognomies of the men of another regiment. A manly dignity characterizes the former, which the latter does not possess. If beards, as a rule, add so much to the appearance of men, giving them what may be termed a fine presence, we may add that a beard serves many useful purposes as regards health. It protects the throat, mouth, and delicate vocal organs from cold, and guards these and the lungs against congestion and inflamation. The rules of society are very arbitrary, and we follow them very sheepishly. When it is considered, however, that we protect our bodies by artificial coverings, it appears ridiculous that we should rob ourselves of a natural protection at the cost of some pain and discomfort formally inflicted every morning. It has been sometimes urged that beards do not comport well with our method of dress, the white shirt, collar and coat; but there is no reason why we should follow the fashion of the East, or make ourselves appear like Hebrew patriarchs. The beard may be trimmed by the aid of scissors and preserved at moderate length. The subject was lately noticed in the Army and Navy Gazette, and it was properly urged that men, like soldiers, who had to serve by turns in a tropical climate, and through a Canadian winter, ought to be allowed to raise beards, and to maintain them of such a length as to preserve their protective influence without any sacrifice to cleanly personal appearance. If the people to whom nature has given beards would only wear them, they would have fewer attacks of hoarseness, catarrh and bronchitis to complain of.—Lancet.

SOCIABILITY.—Hawthorne in the diary makes record of a day wherein he resolved to speak to no human soul. He went to the village, got his mail at the post office, returned, and triumphantly records the fact that he spoke to no man. Is it any wonder that, with all his genius Hawthorne was a melancholy and essentially an unhappy man. How much wiser and better the opposite course.—Think of how much happiness you convey to others by kindly notice and a cheerful conversation. Think how much sunshine such sociability lets into your own soul! Who does not feel more cheerful and contented for receiving a polite bow, a genteel 'good morning,' a hearty shake of the hand? Who does not make himself the happier by these little expressions of fellow feelings and good will? Silence and stiff unbending reserve are essentially vulgar. The generous and polite man has pleasant recognition and a cheerful word for all he meets. He scatters sunbeams where ever he goes. He paves the paths of others with smiles. He makes society seem genial and the world delightful to those who else would find them cold, selfish cold and forlorn. And what he gives is but a tithe of what he receives—Be sociable, wherever you go, and wrap your lightest words in tones that are sweet and a spirit that is genin'.

A Western paper says: "A streak of lightning entered a school in Illinois recently and took a pair of boots from a little boy's feet, and buried them at the head of the master, much to the delight of the pupils."

Great Assurance—Sister: I say, Bob, that looks like a tailor's bill! Bob: Yes, just fancy. I have let that fellow dress me as he likes for the last three years, and now he has the impudence to send me his bill!

A mamma, who has succeeded in getting her own seven daughters "well off her hands," has determined to open a class for the instruction of young ladies in the art of husband catching. It is to be called the "School of Design."

Beecher's recipes for making coffee cannot be improved: "The best way I know of to make good coffee," said he, "is to go to the principal hotels, restaurants, railroad eating houses, etc., and ascertain just how they make coffee—then make it as they don't."

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.
For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as scrofula, the various skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Kruestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

OF
CONSUMPTION!
IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, experiencing great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different receipes, but all without any good effect. Seeing Peterboro Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottles, at once, with the Pills; as soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lungs, chills sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.
PETER C. V. MILLER.
Earnestown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman, Peter C. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.
Rev. W. F. S. HARPER,
Rector of Bath, Ont.

ARE a safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

Poetry.

THE PAWNBROKER'S SHOP.

The Saturday night and the chill rain and sleet
In sympathy with the long dreary street;
The lamps in the windows flicker and blink,
As the wild gale whistles through watery and chink;
But round yon door huddles a shivering crowd
Of wretches, by pain and by penury bowed;
And oaths are muttered, and curses drop
From their lips as they stand by 'Pawnbroker's Shop!'

Women, hardened and seared by sin;
Fiends, blasted and pimpled by gin;
Crime, with its plunder—by beauty's side;
Beauty in ruins, and broken-down pride;
Modesty's cheek crimsoned deeply with shame;
Youth's native form, Age's feet falling lame,
Have come forth from street, lane and alley, and crop
Heart sick, weary, and worn at 'Pawnbroker's Shop!'

With the rain and the biting wind chill'd to the bone,
Oh! how they gaze upon splendor, and groan!
Around them—above them—wherever they gaze,
There were jewels to dazzle and gold to amaze!
Velvets, whose trickled some beautiful form;
Furs, which had shielded from winter storms;
Crowded with 'pledges' from bottom to top
Are the chests, and the shelves of 'The Pawnbroker's Shop.'

There's a tear in the eye of yon beautiful girl,
As she parts with a trinket of ruby and pearl;
Once as red, was her lip, and pure was her brow!
But there came a destroyer—and what is she now?
Lured by liquor, she parted the gem of her fame,
And abandoned by virtue—forsaken of shame!
With no heart to pity,—no kind hand to prop,
She finds her last friend in The Pawnbroker's Shop!

The spendthrift,—for gold, that to-morrow will fly!
The naked,—to eke out a meagre supply;
The houseless,—to take up sufficient to keep
His head from the stones for the season of sleep;
The robber,—his booty to turn into gold;
The shrinking—the timid—the bashful—the bold;
The penniless drunkard, to get one more drop,
All seek a resource in the Pawnbroker's Shop!

'Tis a record of ruin—a tapple whose stones
Are cemented with blood, and whose music is groans,
Its pilgrims are children of want and despair
Alike, grief and guilt to its portals repair!
Oh! we need not seek fiction for records of woe!
Such are written too plainly wherever we go!
And sad lessons of life may be learned as we stop
Neath the three golden balls of A Pawnbroker's Shop!

Selections.

A TALE OF RETRIBUTION.

My father's funeral was over, and with the other relatives present I was summoned to the reading of his will. It gave me, his daughter Jane, five hundred dollars yearly for life. The remainder of his property was left to his grandson and namesake, Cuthbert Hadley, failing whom, it was to pass to my own boy, Henry.

As I listened my heart sank within me; and yet something like this I had long expected. In truth, it was far more than I had any right to hope.

As a child, disobedient and wayward, I had scarcely reached womanhood when I fled from home with a handsome profligate, whose attendance, probably, I should never have encouraged had they not been sternly interdicted by my parents.

My mother's health had been for some time failing, and she did not long survive this crowning transgression.

After her death my father refused to communicate with me in any way, and, as I heard was never again known to speak my name.

His affections thenceforth was centered on my only brother, Cuthbert, four years my senior, and my opposite in disposition and conduct.

Soon after my flight, Cuthbert, returned from a visit to an adjoining State, with a pretty young bride, who more than filled the place I had left vacant, for she at once became the life and joy of the household.

To each of us, Cuthbert's happy and idolized wife, and his last sister, a child was born on the same day.

All the love of which my nature was capable, was at once absorbed in my babe, for I had long since learned to hate the worthless adventurer who had sought me only for my supposed wealth, and who, in his disappointment, soon cast off the least semblance of respect or affection.

A few months after the birth of his child, my brother was no more.

While crossing the railroad, the horse took fright at the advancing locomotive, and threw him on the track where he was instantly killed.

By his death, hopes I had long ceased to cherish were revived. If my father never forgave me personally, might he not so far relent as to allot to his grandson what would have been my share of the inheritance? Yes, Henry's future might now be secured, were it not for Cuthbert's widow and her son. These, whom as yet I had never seen, I began to hate as usurpers of my rights, as though they, and not my wilful misdoings, stood in the way of my property.

Another obstacle, in the attainment of my desires was soon afterwards removed. When our child was three years old, my husband paid the penalty of long continued excesses by a miserable death. The event to me was a happy release, though it condemned me to daily toil, for the means of daily subsistence.

At this time I was surprised by a visit from my widowed sister-in-law, Mrs. Hadley.

Only womanly sympathy and Christian compassion brought her to my miserable lodgings, and in the kindest terms she proffered her aid, both in relieving my present necessities and procuring forgiveness from my father.

She was a gentle creature, too considerate, even in the warmth of her entreaties, to dwell on aught that could imply reproach; and I was almost on the point of casting aside my long cherished animosity and taking her to my heart.

Once, however, she came to me accompanied by her son, and all my former feelings revived in all their bitterness at the sight of him who was to engross my father's inheritance.

In vain I sought to tempt my brother's tenderness as the child; Cuthbert Hadley was the living likeness of his mother.

I repelled all the offers with cold decision that I dared, disappeared effecting a reconciliation with my father, and I could not bear the thought of accepting relief at the hands of an intruding stranger.

In six months I learned that my father had died without expressing a wish of seeing me.

The income he left me would scarcely keep us above absolute want.

And my Henry promised formed to profit most highly by the advantages of wealth and station. A beautiful and sprightly child, the frequent flashes of ungovernable temper were to me the indications of a generous and manly nature and therefore received no rebuke. He grew up wayward and impetuous, accustomed to indulgence in every whim, for how could I thwart the only being who loved me, or who was left for me to love?

Sometimes, when I looked into his bright hazel eyes, and felt his caressing arms about my neck, the thought would rise:—Was it right that Cuthbert Hadley should live and riot in superfluous wealth, while my boy, so much his superior in all the gifts of nature, was left to toil and obscurity?

When I had seen my brother's child, his thread of life was frail; the first breath of distress might sever it. I longed to discover what were his present prospects of arriving at maturity, and it happened that I was not without means of gaining information.

In my father's house was a servant who had taken special charge of me when a child, and who had always manifested towards me an exceeding friendship.—She continued in the service of my brother's widow, who still occupied the family mansion.

With this woman (Margret Heron by name) I had occasionally communicated during all the years of my unhappy marriage, and I knew I could rely on her discretion and fidelity. I knew also that she regarded her present mistress with no great degree of favor, while her admiring fondness of my own boy amounted almost to idolatry.

Quietly and alone I journeyed to my native village, and soon obtained an interview with my old nurse. From her I learned that young Cuthbert had greatly improved of late in health and strength, was growing rapidly, and bade fair to reach a most vigorous manhood.

What a pang of envious disappointment shot through my heart at this unlooked for intelligence.

"Truly," I murmured, "heaven was against me, and most unjustly intended that my thoughtless transgressions should be punished still further in my innocent offspring!"

I was about to return and abandon all present hope, when I again received an unexpected visit from my sister-in-law. She had accidently heard of my presence in the neighborhood, and came in the hope that it betokened a change of feeling on my part which might result in our lasting reconciliation.

This time I did not repulse her well meant advances, but feigned to be melted by her entreaties, and intimated that I had journeyed thither in order to visit the graves of my parents I had so deeply wronged.

Her urgent request that, with my child I would remain with her in my former home, I steadily declined, but consented to occupy a small cottage just outside the limits of her grounds.

In this residence, according, Harry sadly I were soon settled, and here I might have enjoyed a season of blissful respose such as hitherto I had never known.

But I was still a stranger to content.

Each morning I could look forth on the roof-tree of the stately mansion, peeping above its embowering elms; and the sight never failed to awaken within me the old longing, more intense as it grew helpless—the old hatred, which every manifestation of kindness on the part of its objects only roused into fiercer activity.

But I suppressed all outward signs of these emotions, and acted as I best could, my part of the repentant daughter—the grateful and affectionate poor relation.

Heavens! how my yet untamed spirit revolted at the degradation I daily forced myself to endure. How I contrasted the pale, spiritless creature who resided in my former home with myself, still vigorous and commanding—and her son, who stood between my Henry and happiness how I loathed that miniature image of her faded perfections. Yet still I dissembled, and the fatal hour of my opportunity came at last.

In my own house Margaret Herron now held a confidential position, as a sort of a housekeeper. On my arrival, in the village she insisted upon entering at once into my service, and it was with some difficulty I persuaded her to relinquish the idea.

Seldom a day passed, however, that she did not be at our cottage with some offering for our table, or a gift for Harry, whom she regarded with undiminished pride and affection.

On these occasions I was enabled to gather such of the household gossip respecting her mistress and young master, and soon became minutely acquainted with their daily habits and pursuits.

About a year after my arrival my nephew Cuthbert was seized with scarlet fever in its most malignant form. Owing to the delicacy of his constitution, the worst results were feared by his medical attendants.

His mother was unwearied in her attendance until just when the crisis seemed imminent. She then succumbed to fatigue and anxiety, and the care of the sick boy devolved chiefly upon Margaret, for I had never had the disease, and consequently was able to avoid even entering the house.

I took care, however, to be regularly informed of the patient's condition, and as the reports of the physician became day by day more discouraging, so did my bosom throb higher with exultant anticipations.

Margaret, during this period, hardly suppressed her congratulations, and intimated caresses on her handsome young master, that was soon to be. I was hourly expecting the message that should put an end to the wasting anxieties of years, when Margaret brought me word that it was likely Cuthbert would recover.

For a moment all was black despair. I seemed to lose my hold on life and its realities—then some fiend whispered that my opportunity was not yet gone. I listened eagerly, and, at the prompting of the same infernal power, collected all my resources of will and intellect for one decisive act.

I beckoned my old nurse into a retired chamber.

"Margaret," said I, when we were alone, and I had questioned her minutely respecting the change which seemed likely to take place in Cuthbert's condition, "you my you are sorry for us—will you do something that will help us?"

She looked at me in vacant wonder as she asked:

"But what is it that can be done now?"

"If you will help me," I replied, "I will do better for Cuthbert than all the doctors. Come to me again this evening."

She looked at me again, this time more searchingly, but I met her gaze without flinching. For a moment she seemed to hesitate.

"Come to me this evening," I repeated; "or, if you prefer, never let me see you more. I cannot bear this longer. What do you say?"

"I will come ma'am," she replied, in an almost whispered voice, and left the house without another word.

The doctor, it appeared, had ordered Cuthbert that night a sleeping draught. I went to a secret depository, where were a number of drugs, which my husband had taken during his sickness. One of them he had used in very minute doses, in order to counteract the effects of his extreme debility. I had often heard him speak of it as a most subtle poison, undiscoverable in the human frame by the most refined tests, and swift in its operation as a flash of lightning. He had been partly educated to the medical profession, and I could rely on the accuracy of his knowledge. Of this agent I carefully prepared a small but sufficient portion, and having sealed it securely, awaited the coming of my nurse.

* * * * * * *

The next morning all was confusion and terror in the old mansion. I was hastily sent for by my sister-in-law, and informed that Cuthbert had died suddenly during the night, just as his disorder was supposed to have reached its crisis. The estate was now my son's, and the desolate woman could no longer remain in a place fraught with such agonizing remembrance. In the retirement of her father's home she would patiently wait the welcome summons that would reunite her with her minted husband and innocent boy. Then a fresh burst of grief checked her utterance, and after a feeble attempt at consolation, I hurriedly took my departure. I could not forget that I was under the same roof and with the dead boy; and the demon who hitherto had counselled and urged me on, failed to support me now.

Years passed on; I had gained the summit of my hopes; my son was among the wealthiest in the land, and I was mistress in my parental home. Margaret Heron, too, died at last, and her secret remained safe in my sole keeping; yet soon I had reason to envy the repose of those I had succeeded.

Henry grew up handsome in person and remarkable for the early display of uncommon abilities. His disposition, too, seemed gradually to improve, and his boyhood promised all a mother's heart could wish for. But my fondest hopes were destined to be blasted. His whole character suddenly underwent a fearful change, and he began to display a perversity and recklessness in the pursuit of pleasure which amounted almost to insanity. At seventeen he broke loose from all restraint, and plunged headlong into a career of the wildest dissipation. At twenty he brought to dwell beneath the shelter of his ancestral home, and to sit at his mother's table, a creature not his wife—some flaunting actress of inferior grade—who, he swore, should be mistress there as soon as he himself was legally master.

I remonstrated, I implored, I threatened, but all in vain. At last driven to the verge of madness by the insults daily heaped upon me, I cried out to Harry, hardly knowing what I said, that he was no better than a murderer, for that all his infamous enjoyments had been purchased with his cousin's blood.

The insolent carelessness of his demeanour instantly subsided. He rose to his feet and confronted me with a look I shall never forget, said slowly and distinctly:

"Wretched woman! for years I have known it well, and it is that knowledge that has made me what I am! I stood beside Margaret Heron's dying bed, when in her delirium, she fancied me young Cuthbert Hadley risen from the grave to torment her. In that hour the curse of your wickedness fell upon me, for, ever since, I have sought only to drown in debauchery the remembrance of my mother's crime, a crime I could not cease to profit by without denouncing her.—Yet, you took your nephew's life, and in that act you doomed the soul and body of your son."

* * * * * * *

I am in a strange apartment, with costly furniture and grated windows, and a bustling physician has just paid me a hasty visit. I heard him remark to an attendant that I was better now, but that the change would not last long, and it was a pity that I could not die at once. And now the dark curtain seems to roll up before my bewildered soul and memory is revived! Ha! what a scene is this! My son dead on the floor, a pistol in his right hand, still smoking. And there is Cuthbert, too! Why do yonder fools stand staring at me? Do they not know 'twas I that killed them both?

I DID NOT THINK OF THAT.

One day Mr. Lawson, a merchant tailor, stood at the cutting-board, a poorly dressed woman entered his shop, and approaching him asked him with some embarrassment and timidity, if he had any work to give out.

"What can you do?" asked the tailor, looking coldly on his visitor.

"I can make pantaloons and vests," answered the girl.

"Have you ever worked for a merchant tailor?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," replied the girl. "I have worked for Mr. Wright."

"Has he nothing for you to do?"

"No, not just now; he has regular hands, who always get the preference."

"Did your work suit him?"

"He never found fault with it."

"Where do you live?"

"In Cherry Street, No.—"

Mr. Lawson stood and mused for a short time.

"I have a vest here," he at length said taking a small bundle from the shelf, "which I want by to-morrow evening, at the latest. If you think you can do it very neatly, and have it done in time, you can take it."

"It shall be done in time," said the young woman, reaching out eagerly for the bundle.

"And, remember, I shall expect it well made. If I like your work, I will give you more."

"I will endeavor to please you," returned the young girl.

"To-morrow evening, recollect."

"Yes sir; I will have it done."

The girl turned and went quickly away. In a back room, in the third story of an old house in Cherry Street, was the home of the poor sewing girl. As she entered, she said in a cheerful voice to her sick sister—

"Mary, I have got work; it is a vest, and I must have it done by to-morrow evening."

"Can you finish it in time?" inquired the invalid, in a feeble voice.

"O yes, easily."

It proved to be white Marseilles. As soon as the invalid saw this, she said—"I am afraid you will not be able to get it done in time Ellen, you are not fast with the needle, and besides, you are very far from being well."

"Don't fear in the least, Mary, I will do all I engaged to do.

It was after dark the next night, when Ellen finished the garment. She was weary and faint, having taken no food since morning. The want of everything, and particulary for herself and sister, made seventy-five cents, the sum she expected to receive for making the garment, a treasure in her imagination. She hurried off with the vest, the moment it was finished, saying to her sister: "I will be back as soon as possible, and bring you some cordial, and something for our supper and breakfast."

"Here, it is half past eight o'clock, and the vest is not in yet," said Mr. Lawson, in a fretful tone. "I had my doubts about the girl when I gave it to her; but she looked so poor, and seemed so earnest about the work, that I was weak enough to entrust her with the garment."

At this moment Ellen came in and laid the vest on the counter, where Mr. Lawson was standing. She said nothing, neither did he. Taking the vest he unfolded it in a manner which plainly showed him not to be in a placid frame of mind.

"Goodness!" he ejaculated, turning over the garment and looking at the girl.

She shrank back from the counter, and looked frigatened.

"Well, this is a pretty job for one to bring in!" said the tailor, in an excited tone of voice; "a pretty job indeed!" at the same time tossing the vest away from him in angry contempt, and walking off to another part of the store.

Ellen remained at the counter.

At length he said to her: "You need not stand there, Miss, thinking I am going to pay you for ruining a job. It is bad enough to loose my material and customer. In justice you should pay me for the vest; but there is no hope for that, so take yourself off, and never let me set eyes on you again."

Ellen made no reply; she turned round, raised her head to her forehead, and bursting into tears, walked slowly away.

After Ellen had gone, Mr. Lawson returned to the front part of the store, and taking up the vest, brought it back to where an elderly man was sitting, and holding it towards him said, by way of apology for the part he had taken in the little scene. "That is a beautiful article for a nose to wear isn't it?"

The man made no reply, and the tailor after a pause added:

I refused to pay her, as a matter of principle. She knew she could not make the garment when she took it away.—She will be more careful how she tries to impose herself upon customer tailors as a vest maker."

"Perhaps," said the elderly gentleman in a mild way, "necessity drove her to undertake a job that required greater skill than she possessed. She certainly looked very poor."

"It was because she appeared so poor and miserable, that I was weak enough to place the vest in her hands," replied Mr. Lawson, in a less severe tone of voice "but it is an imposture for her to ask for work that she did not know how to make."

"Mr. Lawson, said the old gentleman, who was known as a pious and good man, "we should not blame with too much severity. the person, who in extreme want, undertakes to perform a piece of work for which she lacks the skill. The fact that a young girl, like the one who was just here, is willing, in her extreme poverty, to labor, instead of sinking into vice and idleness, shows her to possess true virtue and integrity of character; and that we should be willing to encourage, even at some sacrifice. Work is cheap now, as you are aware, and there is but little doubt that she had been to many places seeking employment before she came to you. It may be that she and others are dependent upon the receipt of the money that was expected to be paid for making the vest you hold in your hand. The expression on she turned away, her lingering steps, her drooping form, and her whole demeanor, had in them a language which told me of all this and even more."

A change came over the tailor's countenance.

"I didn't think of that," fell in a low tone from his lips.

"I did not think you did, brother Lawson," said his monitor; "we are all more apt to think of ourselves than of others. The girl promised the vest this evening; and so far as that was concerned, she performed her contract. Is the vest made very badly?"

Mr. Lawson took up the vest and examined it closely.

"Well, I can't say that it is badly done, but dreadfully soiled and rumpled; and it is not an neat a job as it should be, nor at all such as I wished it."

"All this is very annoying, of course; but still we should be willing to make some excuse for the short coming of others. The poor girl may have a sick mother to attend to, which constantly interrupted her; and, under such circumstances, you could hardly wonder if the vest should become somewhat soiled from under her hand. All this may be the case; and if so, you could not find it in your heart to speak unkindly to the poor creature, much less turn her away angrily, and without the money she relied for so earnestly."

"I did not think of that," was murmured in a low, suppressed tone of voice.

Ellen on returning home, entered the room, and, without uttering a word, threw herself upon the bed by the side of her sick sister, and burying herself in a pillow, endeavored to smother the sobs that came up convulsively in her bosom.

Mary asked no questions. She understood the cause of Ellen's agitation. It told her that she had been disappointed in her expectation of receiving the money for her work.

Just at that moment there was a knock at the door, but no voice bade the applicant for admission to enter. It was repeated, but it met with no response.—Then the latch was lifted, the door swung open and the tailor stepped into the room.

The sound of feet aroused the distressed sisters, and Ellen raised herself up and looked at Mr. Lawson with a countenance suffused with tears.

"I felt that I did wrong in speaking to you in the way I did," said Mr. Lawson, advancing toward the bed, and holding out to Ellen the money she had earned. "Here is the price of the vest. It was better made than I thought it was. To-morrow I will send you more work. Try to cheer up."

Mr. Lawson, finding that his presence was embarrassing, withdrew, leaving the two sisters so greatly affected, that they could not look at him with thankfulness.

Shortly after this, they received a basket in which was a supply of nourishing food, and a sum of money to procure such articles as might be necessary for the sick sister.

Though no one's name was sent with it, they were not in doubt as to who sent it.

Mr. Lawson was not an unfeeling man, but like too many others in the world, HE DID NOT THINK.

CHEAP PLEASURE.—Did you ever study the cheapness of some pleasures? asks some writer. Do you know how little it takes to make a multitude happy? Such trifles as a penny, a word or a smile do the work. A poor widow lives in the neighborhood, who is the mother of half a dozen children. Send them half a peck of sweet apples, and they will be happy. A child has lost his arrow—the world to him—and he mourns sadly; help him to find it, or make him another, and how quickly will the sunshine play over his sober face. A boy has as much as he can do to pile up a load of wood; assist him a few moments, or speak a pleasant word to him, and he forgets his toil, and works away without minding it. Your apprentice has broken a mug, or slightly injured a piece of work. Say, 'you accoundrel!' and he feels miserable, but remark, 'I am sorry,' and he will try to do better. You employ a man; pay him cheerfully, and speak a pleasant word to him, and he leaves your house with a contented heart, to light up his own heart with smiles and gladness. Pleasure is cheap. Who will not bestow it liberally? If there are smiles, sunshine and flowers all about us, let us not grasp them with a miser's fist and lock them up in our hearts. No; rather let us take them and scatter them about us, as the act of the widow, among the groups of children, in the crowded market where men of business congregate, in our families, and everywhere. We can make the wretched happy, the discontented cheerful, the afflicted resigned, at an exceedingly cheap rate. Who will refuse to do it?

A very singular romance in real life occured lately in St. Louis. A merchant who failed in the crash of '57, left his wife and family, and took his way to the gold mines. After the lapse of a few years, the wife married again, but soon became a widow. Her first husband having been fortunate in the gold field, returned a rich man, but preserving the disguise which he had assumed on leaving home, made love to his own wife and obtained her promise to marry him, a promise that was duly performed.

Mr. Colen Campbell, of Mount Forrest proprietor of the woolen factory of that place, was found dead in his bed on Sunday morning. From the evidence adduced at the Coroner's inquest on Monday, it appears he had gone to bed the evening before in a state of intoxication, and was smothered during the night. The jury returned the following verdict, that the deceased came to his death by suffocating in bed, while in a state of helplessness, from excessive drinking.

HESTER VAUGHAN.

(From the New York Tribune.)

The case of the poor English girl under sentence of death in Philadelphia, in whose behalf a meeting was held at the cooper Institute on Tuesday night, had some features of romance such as one rarely finds in the columns of a daily newspaper. She is described as a pretty, innocent-looking, and respectable young woman of twenty three, who came to this country with a brute whom she thought her husband, but was soon deserted, for he had another wife. In her friendless state she fell a victim to the violence of another villain, whose name, though its disclosure might have saved her life, she steadily refused to tell. He is now married, and "nothing will ever induce me," said Hester, "to send terror and disgrace to the heart of an innocent and trusting woman." In a wretched room in Philadelphia, while she was insensible from physical pain and mental misery, her child was born. She remained some days without assistance. When she was found by a neighbor and brought to her senses the child was dead, with a slight indentation of the skull, which might have been caused by the pressure of a finger. She was arraigned for infanticide. Having no friends and no money and being as ignorant of the law as a child, she was so poorly defended that the trial almost went by default. The jury believed her guilty, the public mind was excited about infanticide, and the judge sentenced her to death. She now lies in the Moyamensing Jail awaiting her fate while affectionate relatives in England, ignorant of this terrible chapter of her history, and writing her to come home, and her chief anxiety is to keep from them the knowledge of her sufferings.

A number of kind-hearted ladies and other persons, satisfied that the girl is not guilty that the child was either suffocated or accidentally wounded while she was totally unconscious, and that if she had been properly defended in Court her innocence would have been made clear, have made great exertions to procure for her a free pardon from the Governor of Pennsylvania, and the meeting on Tuesday night proved that a great many people warmly sympathise with them in the undertaking. A great deal was said at the meeting which might have been reserved for more appropriate occasions, and the subject of the evening was frequently lost sight of in wide discussions on suffrage, woman's rights and kindred topics, with which Hester Vaughan has not the remotest possible connection, still, we think that facts enough were stated to convince the most sceptical that there is a clear case for the Governor's interference. We disapprove of hanging anybody; we disapprove especially of hanging women; but we do urge the pardon of Hester Vaughan because she is a woman, not because capital punishment is wrong, but because we believe, and those who had opportunities of judging believe that she is morally innocent.

IAMATOLOGIA!

HORRIBLE MURDER.

A horrible murder was committed yesterday (Tuesday) in the township of McGillivray by an unfortunate creature named Snowdon, wife of a farmer residing in that Township.

During the absence of the husband, Mrs. Snowdon seized her son, a boy four years of age, and throwing him down on the floor, held him there with one hand, and wielding an axe with the other, she chopped his head almost completely off, a small shred of flesh alone remaining to connect it with the body.

The news of the horrible deed created great excitement in the neighborhood.—An inquest was held by Dr. Caw, coroner, and the jury found the inhuman mother guilty of murder. Under the coroner's warrant, she was to-day committed to jail in this city to wait her trial. The reasons given by the unfortunate prisoner for committing the horrible act, are so extremely silly as to lead to the impression that she is not in her proper senses.

She said, at one time, that she killed the boy to prevent him from being burned to death, as he was continually falling upon the stove; and at another time she said her husband used to beat her, and she wasn't going to be bothered raising a family for him.

The Vicar of Windsor does not seem particulary anxious to save souls; and so for the women, if he believe that they have souls he lets them shift for themselves. It was intimated, last week to the female portion of the congregation, and to non-electors that they should forego their usual attendance on Sunday evening, that they might afford room for the electors of the borough,' to whom the Vicar was to preach a political sermon. This may have been rather hard. Suppose that a non-elector, or what is still more likely, a woman, was anxious to save his or her soul on that particular Sunday: is it not cruel to turn the supplicant away from the sacred edifice, and devote the evening to the exclusive edification of the electors? No 'person' will be allowed to make her calling and election sure,' because the Vicar wishes to make Colonel Gardner's election a certainty. It is only another instance of the systematic cruelty which Englishmen show towards the softer sex. They are denied votes by rigorous Revising Barristers and stern Judges; and now one of their own sex, or nearly so—at least a clergyman—'intimates' that the saving of their little souls is a secondary consideration which may occupy an ordinary sunday, but is not to take up time on an all-important 'Sunday before the election'—a day not so specified in the book of common Prayer, but still well marked under that heading in the Vicar's Tory thoughts.—London Telegraph.

About a month ago the Inland Revenue Officers seized the distillery of Mr. Anderson in the Township of Garafraxa, near Fergus, and 98 barrels of whiskey and high wines were run off and locked up in the Bonded Warehouse at Fergus, pending the settlement with the Government. On Saturday or Sunday night the warehouse was entered by means of false keys and the whole 98 barrels were removed. No clue has been obtained as to who the guilty parties are. A reward of $400 has been offered by the Dominion Government for the detection of the guilty parties or the recovery of the whiskey. Considerable excitement has been caused in the neighborhood by the robbery.—Guelph Advertiser.

The female accomplice of Burke, the originator of the horrible system of murder in West Port of Edenburgh, which stamped his name with infamy, was recently burnt to death in Australia. She was over seventy years of age. She used to inveigle women into Burke's clutches, and then he would smother them and sell their bodies to the surgeons.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1868.

From our subscribers who are a little in arrears we solicit a remembrance. We intend making some improvements in our establishment—we wish to put on a new dress, and to make room for more reading matter, and as we wish to do it immediately, we trust that during the holidays we will receive as much of the old accounts as possible, to aid us in the work. Printers do require money now and then to pay off old scores, as well as to meet hourly demands for wages, material, rent, taxes &c., and to enable them to supply the latest news, and we know that only a hint is necessary, as there is money enough and to spare in the country.

OUR MARKET.

For some time our attention has been directed to the state of our Market on Saturdays; the whole is generally filled, leaving hardly room to pass to and fro. Now why not have two Market days in the week? On Wednesdays a few of the farmers venture into town but our citizens do not go to the Market place on that day, fearing that they may have their trouble for nought. We, therefore, invite the attention of our Town Councillors to this matter. It would prove of advantage especially to those whose means are very often limited and cannot afford to lay by a supply on Saturday for the whole week; besides, we believe that a greater amount of stuff would come it. What we propose is: That a free Market be established on Wednesdays, and tolls collected on Saturdays, only. This, we believe, would have the desired effect at once. It may be said that this would be a breach of contract with the Market Clerk, who leased the tolls under the existing state of things. In answer it may be said that that contract will soon transpire, and then their will be no barrier in the way, and we trust that then this will not be lost sight of.

The toll for measuring wood, too, should be removed. It is not producing the desired effect. The buyer has still to buy by the load while the seller has to pay his toll; the former, too, instead of going to the Market place tries to contract for all he can, and then what protection is the By-law to the people? not an iota. It is just taking five cents per load from the farmer and putting it into the pocket of the measurer, while the buyer is still left to make the best bargain he can. When wood is scarce the poor suffer—for they are not able to contract for their wood. All useless By-laws should be repealed; and Wednesday declared a free Market day as far as tolls are concerned, and the hour for fore-stalling extending to one o'clock. If our Town Fathers will secure these reforms for the people, the poor will bless them, the Town be better supplied, and no one receive ary injury.

Railway to Lakefield.

It is anticipated that the Locomotive will be in Lakefield before New Years day. Every exertion is being put forth to be able, to do so. Already the road is in running order, north of Nassau Mills. The bridge across the Otonabee River, at Blythe Mills, is completed; trains are crossing daily, and the work is advancing rapidly. The ties we understand, were laid before the frost set in, hence all that is now to be done, is to lay the rails. The Strickland brothers deserve the thanks of the denizens of Lakefield for their unflinching perseverance, and through them Lakefield will soon be able to boast of railway communication, and our road will then, be 10 miles farther north-ward. The company should, on the opening up of spring, set to work and extend to Mud Lake, as by doing so they would ensure the trade of the lakes for us; and the wooden railway to Haliburton would secure the trade of the whole county north of us, which must ere long be the case unless we allow Lindsay or Toronto to rob us of it, while we are folding our hands in careless indifference.

The Lambermen of Ontario have presented a memorial to government, expressing alarm at the withholding of Licenses, as likely to seriously effect their trade and also asking that the tenure of holding their Licenses be more clearly defined, by providing that they be renewable for twenty-one years, at the same time admitting that bonafide settlers might be located on all lands, within the limits, fit for settlement. They set forth that the dues and ground-rent yield a revenue of about $200,000, that the value of the trade is not less than $7,000,000. Owing to this they ask that the system of ground rents be so changed as to permit the Lumberman to do all his work if he wishes on one limit, so long as sufficient is done to meet the requirements of full occupation of the whole. Crown Lands commissioner, Richards, promised to have the petition laid before his colleagues and that the subject would receive the consideration due to so large and important interest as the lumber trade.

South Huron Election Contest.

During the present session of the Ontario Legislature, Mr. Gibbons, of South Huron has been declared illegally elected, and Mr. Carling, brother of Mr. Carling, Commissioner of Public of Works, declared duly elected to take the seat. The whole matter arose out of some Germans settlers who have been in South Huron for many years but never took the oath of allegiance until the days of polling. It was not set forth that Mr. Gibbons used fraud or bribery or coercion, merely that the Returning Officer or Officers permitted those Germans to take the oath of naturalization, and then vote. We are not informed whether these men ever voted before, even without taking the oath, but there is little room for supposing that those men who have lived there 10, 12 or 15 years did never vote heretofore, on the contrary there is every reason to believe that many of them have voted in past elections. It was also unfortunate that they voted for Mr. Carling's opponent, if for Mr. Carling it would have been all right.

Mr. Gibbons, on the other side, showed that Mr. Carling and his agents paid for votes, for teams, for services and other considerations, to ensure his election. Mr. Carling, himself, swore that he paid money, yet this was of no account. How contested election committee could condemn the man whose voters had taken the oath of allegiance but because not done before a Bench of Magistrates and exculpate Mr. Carling, who paid his money to influence voters, we are at a loss to determine. The committee, however, took time enough (about two seasons) to consider the matter, and very likely to consult the Commissioner of Public Works, too.

The time wasted and the expenses incurred have led to the discussion in the press, of having all contested elections tried in some court of law, where, it is argued, as many hours would suffice to settle the matter as it has taken weeks. There can be little doubt of the necessity for a change. Strongly partisan members should not be the judges in cases of contested elections, as no matter how honestly disposed in private matter their political leanings warp the judgement to no small degree in a trial of this kind, and hence the prevailing opinion is in favor of referring them to some court of law. The Leader and other tory papers are exulting at the result of the contest; but the country will scarcely be able to see cause for rejoicing over the seating of a man who, by his own showing, bought his present position.

A Young Men's Christian Association.

It is with great pleasure that we record the fact that we are to have a Young Men's Christian Association in Peterboro. During last winter we called the attention of our young men to the fact, that in many towns and in all the cities of Canada there were associations of this kind; and urged the formation of one in Peterboro, but feeling that it should be the work of young men, did nothing more. It affords great satisfaction to now find the young men of all the Protestant churches uniting to organize a society, and we feel certain much good will accrue from it, if begun and carried on in the spirit of the Gospel.

A meeting was held on Monday evening in the Good Templar's Hall to consider the matter. Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Meth. odists and Baptists were all represented.—About 80 to 100 were present and from the number of young men there, we may fairly conclude that they are desirous of uniting for mental and spiritual improvement. A. H. Campbell, Esq., presided and Mr. W. J. Mason was requested to act as Secretary.

James Edwards, Esq., moved the first resolution, as follows:—"That Young Men's Christian Associations, wherever they have been instituted, have been greatly blessed by the Head of the Church, as agencies in the suppression of vice and promotion of good," during which he took occasion to refer to our social nature and the disposition to seek to gratify it in some kind of society, and remarking what immense good might flow from the proposed association, if entered into with zeal and blessed by the Head of the Church. He declared it would have his sympathy and support, for the sake of the young men whom he loved and whose good he would labor and pray for.

This resolution was ably seconded by R. Richardson, Esq., of the Montreal Bank, and supported by the Rev. Mr. Johnson.
